NO TRACE OF BRITISH FREIGHTER COULMORE FOUND

No Secret Pacts to Prejudice Peace After War

Britain Will Enter No Treaties Which Will Prejudice Chances of Harmonious Peace at End of Hostilities, British Commons Told

BUTLER'S STATEMENT

Commander Lampson Asks Question in British House of Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs

London, Nov. 1 — (CP)—Britain will enter no secret treaties which might prejudice the chances of a harmonious peace when the war is over, Richard Butler, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, indicated in the House of Commons today.

Commander Oliver Locker Lampson, Independent, asked whether the government would refrain from "entangling secret treaties" such as those which prevented "fairer understanding after the last war."

Mr. Butler replied: "It is not the intention of His Majesty's Government to take any step which in their opinion would prevent the attainment of a satisfactory settlement on the conclusion of hostilities."

Italy entered the last war on the side of the Allies in 1915 after the secret treaty of London which promised her a share in any colonial possessions taken from the enemy. Alleged failure to carry out this treaty has been the basis of Fascist agitation for colonial concessions from France.

Why The Weather?

Balloons! The Montgolfier brothers of France, observing the suspended clouds in the sky, thought they could make a balloon by inclosing some of the same vapor in a large, light bag. This they finally did in 1782, using smoke and hot air for the vapor. Others soon tried the experiment, either sending up the balloon unloaded or tying on animals or birds. In 1783 a man Rozier, made an ascent in a free balloon. Improvements followed quickly, and within a year after its invention all the principal aeronautical appliances now used were applied to balloon navigation. Dr. Black, as early as 1766, demonstrated that hydrogen, lightest gas known then and now, could be used for inflation. Ballast was carried and valves for letting out gas were introduced within a year after invention of the balloon.

POCKET WARSHIPS UNHEARD OF FOR THREE WEEKS

One Reported to Have Been Operating in North Atlantic and One in South

CHURCHILL'S VIEW

London, Nov. 1—(CP)—Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, told the House of Commons today that one of Germany's pocket battleships had been reported operating in the North Atlantic and another in the South Atlantic.

He said evidence was conflicting on whether only two German surface vessels of this type were loose as raiders on Allied shipping.

"But I think one may be sure that one of the Deutschland type has been abroad on the ocean," he declared.

Mr. Churchill cited as evidence reports from sailors who were aboard the British freighter Stonegate when she was sunk by the Deutschland early in October.

Naval authorities last week said both the Deutschland and her sistership, the Admiral Scheer, were believed to have been a sea a month.

These authorities said today nothing had been heard of the pocket battleships for nearly three weeks and that "after all, they can't stay out indefinitely."

6 AIR SQUADRONS FOR AUSTRALIA

These Squadrons Will be Fully Equipped and Sent Overseas

Sydney, Australia, Nov. 1—CP—Cable)—Sweeping expansion of Australia's defence program was announced today by Prime Minister Menzies.

The program included the following key points:—

1. Purchase of an additional 50 airplanes from America, provided the Neutrality Act is revised;
2. Construction of three instead of two tribal class destroyers;
3. Mechanization of the army at a cost of £1,500,000 (about $5,355,000);
4. Establishment of four additional munition factories.

The Commonwealth's war expenditure for the fiscal year 1939-1940 is estimated at £59,500,000 (about $212,415,000), exclusive of the cost of participating in the Empire training scheme.

Strengthen Air Force

Mr. Menzies announced yesterday that the Australian and British governments had decided the Commonwealth's best contribution to the Empire's air arm would be strengthening the Royal Australian Air Force for purposes of defence and bringing air recruits to the point where they could be sent to Canada for advanced training.

The Prime Minister declared Australia would not send an air expeditionary force overseas as originally planned.

CAREFULPLANNING IS KEYNOTE OF CANADA'S EFFORT

Prime Minister Mackenzie King Outlines Work so Far in Radio Address

PRAISES CO-OPERATION

Contribution to Economic Warfare May be Deciding Factor States Premier

Ottawa, Nov. 1—(CP)— Careful planning is the keynote of Canada's war effort, Prime Minister Mackenzie King declared in an address broadcast over a national network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

"Upon the foundations prepared by the government and so speedily laid by parliament we are now developing Canada's war effort," he said last night. "Our actions have been controlled by the belief that if we are to avoid errors of hasty and confused action such as led to needless sacrifice of blood and treasure in the last war, the foundations must be well and truly laid.

"In what promises to be a long and exhausting struggle, our contribution will be all the more effective for careful planning. Modern war is a grim business. It demands cool judgment and a balanced strategy."

NAZIS PROFESS TO BE UNWORRIED BY ITALIAN MOVES

MAY ATTACK SOON

Berlin, Nov. 1 (AP)—General impression that Germany is preparing for some "positive initiative" in the war developed today in informed quarters.

This followed two external events of interest to Germany—the reorganization of the Italian cabinet and the declaration of policy by Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff of Russia.

Informed circles held that neither development injured the German cause and that nothing remains to bar German war initiative.

As interpreted in these quarters Premier Mussolini's periodical "changing of the guard"—as the Italian reorganization was characterized here—was accomplished without a hitch while Molotoff emphasized Russo-German co-operation.

These sources professed to see only indications of strength and unswerving attachment on the part of Italy and Russia whom they held to be Germany's two best friends.

(The reorganization at Rome brought removal of three military chiefs who had conducted staff talks with Germany after the signing of the Italo-German military alliance last May and of two cabinet members popularly regarded as pro-German.

(Whether there was any deliberate shelving of those in the Italian government who had been looked upon as pro-German could not be ascertained, but diplomats in most of southeastern Europe viewed the changes as a submergence of German influence at Rome, if not actually the beginning of a breakup in the Rome-Berlin axis.)

Britain to Ration Bacon, Butter Beginning Middle of December

London, Nov. 1 (CP)—W. S. Morrison, Minister of Food, announced today that the British government will ration the consumption of bacon and butter beginning the middle of December.

General rationing will not be started although the distribution of ration books and other necessary prerequisites will be completed.

Everyone will be entitled to four ounces of butter and four ounces of bacon weekly, Mr. Morrison said, "provided imports continue at the present rate, as there is good reason for assuming they will."

Because both commodities are perishable there was no government reserve of either at the outbreak of hostilities.

Imports from European sources have been reduced for the present and there has been no time to fill the gap from more distant sources of supply.

Mr. Morrison said sugar supplies were sufficient to meet normal requirements and rationing would be imposed only if the public failed to restrict purchases to a pound per head weekly.

The manufacture of margerine has greatly increased since the war started and the quantity of cooking fat available is equal to normal.

Adequate supplies of meat continue to be available, Mr. Morrison told the Commons. He urged that every householder make a strict rule not to waste food.

Open Satisfaction in British Press That Molotoff's Speech Indicated Russia's Aid to Reich Only "Moral"

London, Nov. 1 (CP Cable)—Delegates from Canada and other parts of the Empire today began informal talks on how to weld the Empire into an economic unit for the most efficient conduct of war against Hitlerism.

Meeting at No. 10 Downing Street, the unpretentious building which has been the scene of many historic gatherings, the delegates surveyed developments abroad and general problems arising out of the war. Viscount Halifax, British Foreign Secretary, gave them a summary of the foreign situation.

The Empire delegates, including Hon. T. A. Crerar as Canada's representative, met Prime Minister Chamberlain and others directing Great Britain's war effort as the government apparently noted with satisfaction that Adolf Hitler would not be aided by Soviet arms.

There was open satisfaction in official circles that Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff, in his speech to the supreme Soviet yesterday, indicated Russia's aid to the Reich would be only "moral."

Molotoff's criticism of the Allies anti-Nazi war aims as "absurd" failed to make any impression here.

Not Up to Threats Made

The Daily Express said the speech showed "Russia means to look after her own interests and preserve her own neutrality. Stalin will give Hitler moral support but not armed assistance."

"Molotoff makes a speech which the Nazis had threatened us with," The Express said. "But it does not live up to their threats. They had hinted that Molotoff would announce a plan of joint action by Russia and Germany against the democracies. It was all part of the old war of nerves."

'NEW SITUATION' IN FINNISH TALKS WITH SOVIET GOV'T

PROCEED TO MOSCOW

Helsingfors, Nov. 1 (AP)—A delegation empowered to deliver Finland's "final answer" to Russian demands headed for Moscow today, perhaps for the last time.

The delegation, headed by former Premier Dr. Juho Paasikivi, is ready to negotiate the dispute over territorial concessions wanted by Russia until the last rope of settlement fades, said a Foreign Office spokesman.

The negotiators set out from Helsingfors last night, for their trip to the Russian Capital, before Vyacheslaff Molotoff, Russian Premier and Foreign Commisar, made his surprise exposition of the Kremlin's demands on Finland.

The delegation paused at the border to consult the government on the "new situation" and then decided to continue to Moscow.

Sharp Blow to Government

There was no question but that Molotoff's speech, disclosing secrets of the negotiations, was a sharp blow to the Helsingfors government, which had been shielding the subject matter of the talks.

The Foreign Office earlier today issued a statement saying a "new situation" had been created, and that "naturally" there would be a delay in the negotiations.

However, the Finnish cabinet met in an unusual early morning session, discussed Molotoff's address and decided talks should be continued so there could be no charge that Finland had disrupted them.

Called Finish Government

Subsequently, the delegation called the Foreign Office before crossing the border to Leningrad and discussed the latest Moscow developments over the telephone. The delegation was advised to continue its journey.

Addressing the supreme Soviet, Molotoff outlined proposals for territorial concessions at the mouth of and in the Gulf of Finland along the southeastern Finnish border north of Leningrad and on the Ryhachi Peninsula, Finland's present outlet to the Arctic Ocean.

Offered Twice as Much

In return, Molotoff offered twice the amount of territory proposed for cession. This would come from the undeveloped Karelia area on Finland's eastern border.

In reply to Molotoff's assertion that Russia has the right to protect the security of the Gulf of Finland and the frontier near Leningrad, the Foreign Office statement said:

BATTLE POSITIONS OF MAGINOT LINE ARE REINFORCED

ALMOST IMPREGNABLE

With the French Army on the Western Front, Nov. 1—(CP—Reuters)—In the weeks that have passed since the beginning of the war there has been a steady strengthening of positions in front of the Maginot Line until they have become a kind of French Siegfried Line.

Through this the enemy would have to pass before it reached the main defence works which present a virtually insuperable obstacle.

What action there has been so far has revealed the traditional courage and innate military instinct in all ranks, fully confirming the colossal strength and flexibility of France's armed force.

Though an interpretation of a brief official communique does mention local patrol action and artillery fire, there is the risk of giving a wholly exaggerated impression of what is going on in the wide, sodden, muddy No Man's Land which now exists between the advance posts of the opposing armies.

Rival patrols become active at night, and when they meet there are skirmishes varying in length and intensity. Few prisoners are taken. There are few casualties.

Sometimes there are patrols by day. Yesterday a German artillery lieutenant was captured. What an artillery officer was doing in leading a patrol in daylight remains unexplained.

The Duke of Windsor yesterday visited a section of the French army, visiting the lines and watching artillery batteries in action. A number of troops who had been in action on the front were brought back a short way, plastered with mud of the trenches in No Man's Land, to be presented to him. He shook hands with a group of officers who have received decorations for gallantry in the field.

PROMINENT MASON DIES

Peterborough, Ont., Nov. 1—(CP) Alexander Gibson, 75, former jeweller and a nephew of the late Senator Gibson of Hamilton, died here today. He came to Canada from Scotland in 1844 and resided in Hamilton for a short time before coming to Peterborough.

Mr. Gibson was widely known in Masonic circles. He was a past warden of Grand Lodge and a past master and treasurer of Peterborough lodge for more than thirty years.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

There was nothing ambiguous about Vyacheslaff Molotoff's speech at Moscow yesterday. In it the Russian Premier and Foreign Commissar ranged the Soviet definitely on the side of Nazi Germany in the war.

He became the first public official outside Germany to endorse wholly the German contention that war guilt rests on Great Britain and France and the first to approve the conquest of Poland.

For the future two passages in the Molotoff speech are interesting if not actually sinister. They were his references to Finland and India.

SOVIET EXPRESSES KEEN DESIRE TO TRADE WITH JAPAN

Finland Has Choice of Making Concessions to Russia or Risk a Fight

WANT NAVAL BASE

Molotoff Slaps United States for its "Moral Support" of Finland

By WITT HANCOCK
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Nov. 1—(AP)— Finland apparently faced the choice today of making concessions and a territorial trade with Soviet Russia, or refusing at the risk of a fight.

Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff said the Russian proposals "are extremely modest and are confined to that minimum without which it is impossible to safeguard the security of the U.S.S.R. and to put on a firm footing the friendly relations with Finland."

He also commented that the war was "fraught with great surprises and dangers for all European states."

Carry "Final Answer"

The Finnish delegation, which has conferred twice with Molotoff, was en route to Moscow with Finland's "final answer" when Molotoff disclosed what Russia wanted:—

SPAIN BELIEVED TO HAVE COOLED TOWARD GERMANY

Minister of Interior Says There Can be no Peace That Does Not Respect Liberties of Peoples

WILL DEFEND LIBERTY

Madrid, Nov. 1 (CP)—Spain will have nothing to do with any policy that "will compromise the fruits of its victorious struggle for the defence of Christianity," according to Ramon Suner, Minister of the Interior.

The Minister's speech, broadcast to the country last night, was regarded by some observers as an indication that Spain has cooled toward Germany since the German-Soviet pact was signed.

"To exercise hegemony over Europe without any ideal and to the detriment of justice will always create a situation incompatible with peace", he said. "It is impossible to create a durable peace without justice that assures the rights and liberties of peoples."

"It is that for which we shall seek to prepare, even if it costs us sacrifices, to defend our full independence, our liberty, and our interests."

Suner also said that the government would import foodstuffs to meet a major food shortage despite a national treasury "exhausted by the Reds."

The Ministry of Commerce Suner said, would expropriate basic foodstuffs to regulate distribution, but would maintain free trading in other goods.

1. Disastrous effects on agriculture resulting from the 'Reds' criminal prolongation" of the civil war.
2. Destruction of 40 percent of the railway rolling stock and "a much higher percentage" of other transport facilities.
3. Loss of foreign markets during the civil warfare and trade restrictions resulting from the present war.
4. "Disproportionate consumption in recently liberated zones which contributed nothing to national production."

Stories of Atrocities in Camps Confirmed by Letter to the Times

London, Nov. 1—(CP)—Confirmation of stories of atrocities in Nazi concentration camps contained in the Government White Paper is given in a letter to the Times today from members of the special tribunal sitting at Richbury Camp in Kent to consider the cases of 3,600 refugees who became "enemy aliens" as a result of the declaration of war.

The letter was signed by Sir George Bonner, former King's remembrancer and senior master of the Supreme Court, King's bench division; Tristram Beresford, recorder of Folkestone; Trevor Hunter, chancellor of the diocese of Swansea and Brecon; Walter Blake Odgers, recorder of Southampton; M. Sugden, barrister and John Henry Thorpe, recorder of Blackburn.

The letter said all the refugees received warnings on leaving the camps never to tell what they had seen and suffered.

Vessel Sends Out Call for Help and Cutters Respond

Coulmore Reports She Was Attacked by Submarine Somewhere Near Bermuda—Seaplanes Assist in Search

BRONTE IS SUNK

Arrival of Crew of 5,317-Ton Ship in England Confirms Story — Rescue Ship Tries to Tow Stricken Vessel to Port

Washington, Nov. 1 (AP) — The Coast Guard announced today the United States Cutter Bibb reached the reported position of the British freighter Coulmore this morning and found no sign of a ship or survivors.

The Bibb, which started out last night after intercepting a distress call from the vessel, reported that it found a moderate southerly gale blowing in the area. The Bibb turned north after reaching the position and said it would continue the search in that direction.

The Bibb was the first of a rapidly growing number of Coast Guard and Navy ships and planes looking for the Coulmore.

Earlier the United States navy said its destroyers and planes were co-operating with the Coast Guard in "saving life at sea" in response to a distress call from the Coulmore.

Coast Guard headquarters here said the cutters Hamilton, Campbell, Chelan, Argo and Duane also were on the way to the scene.

Also, two Coast Guard seaplanes were on their way. The planes, heavy, long range flying boats, left from New York and Cape May, N.J.

Not a single word was received from the freighter after her initial calls for assistance.

When the Coulmore called at Boston with a cargo of Russian coal Sept. 9, she carried a crew of 34 and the wife of the captain, Mrs. Ernest Davies. At that time, Mrs. Davies said she intended to remain abroad for the return passage.

The navy did not elaborate on the part it was playing, beyond stating it was co-operating with the Coast Guard in "saving life at sea".

Crew of Forty Rescued.

London, Nov. 1 (CP)—Sinking of the Liverpool steamship Bronte, 5,317 tons, was disclosed today with the arrival of her crew aboard a rescue vessel in England today.

The crew of forty and one passenger were rescued by another ship which attempted to tow the crippled Bronte to port after it had been attacked by a U-boat.

Egba Escapes Sub.

Gibraltar, Nov. 1 (AP)—It was officially announced that the 4,989-ton British steamship Egba was fired on today by a German submarine but evaded the attack. She was believed to have continued her voyage undamaged.

Flight Is Successful.

London, Nov. 1 (CP)—The Air Ministry announced today that Royal Air Force planes had flown over Northwestern Germany and taken photographs.

An Air Ministry communique said: "During the past 24 hours the Royal Air Force carried out successful reconnaissances over northwestern Germany in the course of which photographs were taken. All our aircraft returned safely."

Sergt. Perkins Does Something About His Pay, He's a British M. P.

London, Nov. 1—(CP—Cable)—Sergeant Perkins of the Royal Air Force had received only two weeks' pay since the war started. So he decided to do something about it.

Today W.R.D. Perkins, Conservative member for Stroud, appeared in the House of Commons dressed in the blue uniform of a sergeant of the Royal Air Force.

He told Sir Kingsley Wood, Secretary of State for Air, that "the whole system of pay for reserve officers and airmen of the Royal Air Force is in chaotic condition" and drew from the Minister a promise to clear up the whole matter immediately—including his own back pay.

If the total crop brings a fair price, and every indication points to that, the approximate value is placed at $50,000.

MAYOR APPRECIATES SANE CELEBRATION OF HALLOWE'EN

I want to compliment the citizens on celebrating a sane and safe Hallowe'en. The crowds of merrymakers on Front street were out for fun and not for destruction of property, and they were out in greater numbers and in merrier costume than ever before. The police report very little damage, although some stop signs were knocked down and some windows broken. The hooligan element seems to be dying out, and all thinking sensible people know that there is really no fun in destroying some poor person's or any person's property. This is a great improvement over conditions of some years ago, and the police are to be congratulated on their vigilance over that ever decreasing number of irresponsible hoodlums, whose enjoyment comes from inflicting pain on others.

LITTLE BOY RUNS IN FRONT OF CAR

Seven-year-old Robert Reid, of 45 West Bridge street, sustained head lacerations and general shock after being knocked down by a truck at the intersection of Bridge and Coleman streets early last evening as the little lad ran into the path of the moving vehicle. John Van Norman, 32 Boswell street, was driving the truck and had made a right hand turn off Bridge street and was proceeding north on Coleman street when the youthful lad ran in front of the moving vehicle. After striking the lad Mr. Van Norman stopped his truck, rendered assistance and drove the injured lad to a nearby physician's where medical aid was necessary, he told police authorities. Fortunately the little lad was not seriously injured.

Leonard Smith, 19-year-old Napanee Indian, was arrested by Chief Bain in Trenton last night after a country-wide search for a person wanted for the breaking and entering of Hubbell's general store at Paudash Lake committed over the week-end.

Provincial Constable Stanley Palmateer had traced the person suspected of robbing the Paudash general store as far as Trenton on Monday, but did not effect arrest Wearing apparel, boots, a shot gun and ammunition were all reported stolen from Mr. Hubbell's store. When Chief Bain apprehended Smith he was found to be in possession of what appeared to be new wearing apparel, a shot gun and some ammunition. Later today Smith was given into the custody of Provincial Police and lodged in the Belleville jail on charges of breaking, entering and theft.

Mrs. Elena May Ireland, wife of Mr. E. B. Ireland, passed away suddenly at the family residence, 45 Spadina Road, Toronto, on Tuesday, Oct. 31st. Interment will be made in Belleville Cemetery on Friday, Nov. 3rd., about noon.

Night's Milking Is Upset as Hallowe'en Prank

City slickers are apparently amateurs when it comes to Hallowe'en pranks, at least so believe Provincial Police authorities and surrounding district farmers following a check-up on the pranks, mischief and vandalism reported to Provincial authorities following a night of bedlam and excitement in the rural section of the district.

Near Rednersville an evening's milking was wantonly upset by boisterous persons on the farm of Harry Dempsey east of the village of Rednersville. Mr. Dempsey had completed his day's milking and left the milk in the conventional can awaiting early morning delivery to the district cheese factory. During the interval awaiting collection on Hallowe'en, however, pranksters upset the milk can, Provincial Police were informed this morning.

Near Read some mischievous persons entered the pig sty of James MacAvoy, released the barriers and allowed Mr. MacAvoy's pigs to escape. It was with difficulty today that Mr. MacAvoy finally rounded up his 'porkers,' he informed Provincial Police in no uncertain terms.

On the 2nd concession of Thurlow another farmer complained to Inspector Gardner that his buggy had been removed from his drive shed. Subsequent investigation revealed the ancient mode of travel was found perched securely atop of the drive shed, however.

Several other minor cases of Hallowe'en pranks were also reported to the O.P.P. from around the immediate district.

No Support Should Be Given Dyed-in-the-Wool Politicians Mayor Says

In matters of civic government, Board of Education, Public Utilities and so forth, it is important that public spirited citizens offer their services, and it is equally important that the public support good men so offering, irrespective of their political affiliations. In fact I would go further and suggest that if the candidate is a dyed-in-the-wool politician of any shade rather than one interested in his city and country, that he be not suported at all.

From lack of knowledge of the necessary qualification laws, good men have frequently not allowed their names to come forward. I think the public should know that where the candidate is a tenant, it is necessary, that the landlord should have the taxes paid on that property. In cases of a landowner, those people who used to be the gentry but are now the paupers of the community, it is necessary that he have his taxes paid on that piece of property on which he is qualifying, but not on all of his property.

Hibernating Patient Dies of Other Trouble

Pryor, Okla., Nov. 1 (AP) — A 36-year-old farm wife died today of a blocked gall bladder as she sought through hibernation, to prolong her life against the ravages of cancer.

Her nine-day hibernation period would have ended tonight. Her body temperature was reduced to eighty-five degrees.

Dr. E. A. Leach said a soft stone was found in the gall bladder apparently obstructing the opening.

The patient, wife of a Locust Grove, Okla., farmer had been told she had only two or three weeks to live because of the cancer. She chose to undergo hibernation, science's latest weapon, which seeks to break up cancer cells by cold.

Dr. Leach said an autopsy showed some "hopeful signs" concerning the treatment. "The cancer mass had been reduced about seventy-five per cent, and was becoming soft," he said.

The Daily Mail commented: "Hitler today must be a very disappointed man. The main plank in Russia's foreign policy, said the Soviet Prime Minister, is continued neutrality. She won't help spread war but will strive her utmost to halt it. If words mean anything these words mean that Hitler can expect no direct assistance from his friend Stalin."

Meanwhile efforts were being made to ease the war-time restrictions despite an official statement that propagandists were at work in England.

Informed circles forecast a relaxation of the defence of the realm regulations after nearly four hours of debate in parliament. Criticism of existing stringent measures, led by opposition Liberals, kept the House of Commons in debate until 11.01 p.m. (5.01 p.m. E.S.) yesterday—its latest adjournment hour since the start of the war

Pro-Nazi Body Active

At the height of the debate Sir John Anderson, Minister of Home Security, said "A certain anti-Semitic and pro-Nazi body" in England had instructed each of its members to "turn himself into a rumor-monger and a channel for verbal propaganda."

Sir John said the organization, which he declined to name, had "made fun" of measures considered necessary for defence of the population.

The critics of the government kept up a fire of frequent interruptons, apparently unsatisfied by Sir John's assurance that "there was no thought of imposing the regulations wantonly or unnecessarily."

D. M. Foot, Liberal, moving for annulment of the two-months-old defence act, said the country was confronted with a two-fold danger —"Nazi aggression and Nazi tendencies at home."

Singled out for attack was the delegation of power by which the government could control expression of opinion, suppress public meetings, detain individuals and impose a curfew. About a dozen persons have been detained under the war time law.

Motion Withdrawn

Sir Samuel Hoare, Lord Privy Seal, stepped into the debate to declare the regulations would be reintroduced after all sides had had an opportunity to consult with the government. He then appealed for a united front and the annulment motion was withdrawn.

The Times said that "Though the working of the regulations may not prove as harsh as their wording led the opposition to fear the government would be well advised to withdraw, if possible, those against which the greatest objection was taken."

The News-Chronicle commented:—"The fact that in war time an active House of Commons can so successfully defend the peoples liberties will help to confirm the belief that in this country we have something worth preserving and worth fighting for."

SOVIET EXPRESSES

In exchange, Finland would be given a larger strip of Soviet Karelia, and Russia would withdraw objections to Finnish fortification on the Aaland Islands in the Gulf of Bothnia.

Molotoff, addressing the Supreme Soviet last night, also aroused deep diplomatic interest by expressing a desire for closer Soviet relations with Japan.

Verbal Thrusts at England

He affirmed co-operation with Germany, including trade negotiations; made verbal thrusts at Great Britain and France; and slapped at the United States for its "moral support" of Finland.

Although Molotoff gave no hint of any military assistance to Adolf Hitler, he asserted "we have always held that a strong Germany is an indispensable condition for durable peace in Europe."

He echoed Nazi criticism of the Versailles Treaty and referred to Poland as "the ugly offspring" of that pact.

However, he urged that the "one swift blow to Poland, first by the Germany Army and then the Red Army" which placed all Polish territory under control of those two powers, did not in any way "contradict" Russia's neutrality.

Cannot Destroy by War

Charging that the war between Germany and the western democracies was "camouflaged as a fight for democracy," the Soviet Premier said "one may accept or reject the ideology of Hitlerism as well as any other ideological system, but it cannot be destroyed by war."

He criticized the British and French Governments with the remark that "you cannot give the name of a fight for democracy to such action as banning of the Communist party in France, arrests of Communist Deputies of the French Parliament, or the curtailing of political liberties in England or the unremitting national oppression in India."

While he displayed a certain coldness toward Turkey (which recently signed a mutual aid pact with Britain and France after fruitless negotiations with Russia), foreign circles believed Russia still was studying airms in the Balkans, since there was no direct reference to them or to Bessarabia, formerly Russian-held but now part of Rumania.

Battles Described

Turning to Japan, Molotoff said that in May, June, July, August and up to the middle of September, battles "sometimes of a very sanguinary character" took place between Japanese - Manchoukuoan and Soviet-Mongolian troops.

"This absolutely unnecessary conflict exacted rather heavy casualties on our side and casualties several times heavier on the Japanese-Manchoukuoan side.

"Finally, Japan made proposals to terminate the conflict, and we willingly met the Japanese Government's wishes."

Molotoff said the next step toward improvement of Russo-Japanese relations would be settlement of frontier questions.

"In addition the possibility has been established of starting Soviet-Japanese trade negotiations. It must be admitted that the development of Soviet-Japanese trade is in the interests of both countries."

Adding that was difficult to judge development of this "tendency," Molotoff said, "we look with favor on Japanese overtures of this kind."

Police Log of Calls Received at Station

Hallowe'en passed rather uneventful in Belleville last evening, although damage to personal property was more prevalent than in the past few years. Youthful Belleville seemed prone towards the breaking of windows, street lights and other easily perishable articles of glass. Several irritated citizens reported stones had been hurled through the winodws of their homes.

City police engaged four radio cruiser automobiles to patrol the city, but despite the fact additional deputities supplemented the regular police department, the customary Hallowe'en vandalism and mischief continued.

A recording of the calls received by the police last night was taken by Chief Kidd and Sergeants Harman and Booth. The police log today read as follows:

8.41—Stop sign down at Queen and Ann Streets.

10.40—Call to Dufferin Avenue where damage to property was reported.

11.05—Disturbances on Cannifton Road.

The above calls were all dispatched over the Belleville police radio and were quickly responded to, Chief Kill stated today.

Escapes From Lock-Up After Being Arrested

After being arrested on a charge of intoxication and disorderly conduct in Deseronto last evening, an Indian who gave his name as William Maracle, escaped custody when an accomplice is said to have broken the lock off the village prison lock-up and effected Maracle's escape, Chief Ernest Beatty of Deseronto revealed today.

Chief Beatty had personally arrested Maracle following Hallowe'en disturbances in Deseronto. Later Chief Beatty confined his prisoner to the village lockup and continued to police the village during the conventional Hallowe'en activities. Later when the officer returned to the Deseronto jail he found that his prisoner had escaped.

Investigations ervealed that the lock on the village cell block in the Town Hall had been broken, permitting the prisoner to escape. "The only manner in which the lock could have been broken was from the outside and it appears as though some accomplice of Maracle's broke the lock during my absence and affected his escape," Chief Beatty revealed today.

Anchorage, Alaska, Nov. 1—(CP)—A mother and 17-day-old baby huddled today in an airplane, grounded by a snowstorm on a frozen lake in the Alaska wilderness, awaiting rescue. They have been marooned for two days and nights.

The deep snows turned back a dog team, attempting to reach the scene from McGrath, twelve miles away. Another airplane, piloted by Kenneth Neese, was guided to the spot by the fading radio signals of the grounded ship and dropped milk, blankets and cooking utensils. A new attempt will be made to effect rescue with a dog team.

The mother, Mrs. Christian Beckman, and her baby daughter were on their way home to Ophir from Fairbanks, where the baby was born, when a storm forced the plane down Monday. With them in the plane are the pilot, Jimmy Dodson, and another passenger, Ole Brendheim.

Frankford Czechs Observe National Independence Day

Frankford, Nov. 1—The Czechs of Frankford held a festival in the community hall Saturday evening Oct. 28th. It was commemorating the Czechoslovakian Independence Day, and many of the Canadians of the village were invited to attend.

Although the programme was in their own language and the words could not be understood the feeling was felt by all present.

Words of welcome were given by the Czech children and they all displayed great talent in enunication and expression, even four year old children could be heard distinctly at the back of the crowded room.

Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Miller, Mrs. E. E. Ketcheson and Mrs. D. C. MacRostie motored to Peterboro on Monday afternoon.

A.Y.P.A. Party

On Wednesday evening Oct. 25th the Anglican Y.P.A. held a Hallowe'en social and dance in the parish hall. The hall was very nicely decorated for the season with witches and black cats etc. The Czechs of Frankford were specially invited to enjoy the evening with the Frankford people.

The costumes were wonderful, Miss Beulah Nicholson and Mr. C. May carrying off the first prizes for the character costumes. They were smartly dressed to represent the Victorian era.

Miss Eileen Hoag won the first prize for girls fancy dress, and Mr. Earl Cranfield of the Bata Shoe Co. won the gent's fancy dress prize. He was dressed to represent a Gypsy.

The evening was spent in dancing and delicious refreshments served.

Miss Eleanor MacRostie spent the week end the guest of Mrs. Cecil Smith of Wallbridge.

Born in Belleville hospital on Friday, Oct. 27th to Mr. and Mrs. J. Karlick, a daughter. This is the second Czech baby for Frankford. Mr. and Mrs. Karlick make their home with Mrs. Ena Moynes.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Montgomery and Naomi, Jim, Verna and Carl and Mr. and Mrs. E. Goodrich of Dundonald spent Thursday with friends in Frankford.

Injures Finger

Mr. Douglas Reid, of Stirling, had his finger almost amputated while working in the Bata Shoe factory on Friday last.

The Mission Band and the W.M.S. of the United Church, Frankford held a bazaar and tea in the Rose-Lowery hall on Saturday afternoon. The hall and tables were decorated in orange and black to represent the Hallowe'en season. The children waited on tables and looked after a home made candy table and bazaar table while the ladies of the W.M.S. had a bazaar table and a home cooking table. Every department was well satisfied with their proceeds. Mrs. Earl Bonisteel, President of the W.M.S. and Mrs. H. Montgomery, President of the Mission Circle poured the tea and coffee for the children.

During the programme Mr. Thos. Bata spoke in English and thanked the people of Frankford for the kind way in which his people were being treated. He remarked that the Canadian people had shown more kindness and cordiality to his people while here than they had received in any other country. He also explained what the day meant to the Czech's. They had been in bondage for over three hundred years and then they enjoyed freedom for a brief twenty years. However, he did not dwell on this topic long as it conveyed too many sad feelings.

The programme consisted of duets, poems, a melodramatic story accompanied by Mrs. Louisa Kravackova on the violin a ladies' choir, under the direction of Mrs. Kravackova, and a men's choir under the direction of Mr. Ladislav Pospisil.

During the programme an intermission was given and the party retired to the dining room where a delightful lunch was served.

At the end of the programme the Czech National Anthem was sung followed by "God Save the King" in English led by the men's choir.

The remainder of the evening was spent in dancing, the music being provided by the Czech impromptu band of Frankford.

The regular monthly meeting of the Frankford Mission Circle was held at the home of Mrs. Cecil Tripp on Friday evening Oct. 27th.

Several of the members came in costume and Mrs. Coutts and Mrs. Harry Montgomery carried home the prizes.

The meeting was opened by the President, a hymn was sung and the Lord's prayer repeated in unison. The minutes of last meeting were read and adopted, the Treasurer gave her report. This was followed by the roll call, which showed several members absent. The President wanted suggestions as to how to get members out to the meetings. The worship service was led by the President, a hymn was sung and the Thanksgiving responsive reading followed. The Scripture reading was given by Mrs. Chas. Bennett. The thank offering dedication followed. The first chapter of the new Study Book was given by Mrs. Warren, Douglas Montgomery then sang a solo "Somefolks." A reading "Cookery by Radio" was given by Mrs. H. Bonisteel. A reading "The Dollar and the Cent" was given by Mrs. Geo. Montgomery. A hymn was sung followed by the Mispah Benediction.

A contest then followed and Miss Hazel Mikel carried home the prize. A delightful lunch was served by the hostesses Mrs. Cecil Tripp and Mrs. F. Ketcheson.

Mr. Miles MacGilvary has purchased a cabin trailer.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Loney have arrived home after their honeymoon.

Phyllis and Lawrence Slingerland gave a Hallowe'en party on Friday evening at their home. The rooms were decorated with cats and pumpkins and other Hallowe'en symbols. The evening was spent in games and dancing. The prize for the best costume went to Keitha Hadley and the prize for the comics went to Elmer Finnigan and Donald Tripp. Betty Levitt and Joan Munn proved their skill as winners in the games. Refreshments were served and the evening was voted a great success by all present.

A meeting was held by the Live-Wire group on Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. P. Mikel. Although the evening was rainy a nice number turned out to enjoy the evening. The meeting was opened by the President, Mrs. Mikel, a hymn was sung followed by prayer. After the worship part of the meeting it was decided to hold a Hallowe'en party at the home of Mrs. Slingerland and to invite the Tripple group and the 4th Concession group. The group was also asked to tie four quilts and this was brought before the members.

After the business part of the programme the evening was spent in games and contests. Mrs. W. Thompson and her group won one contest and Mrs. H. Terry won the other. Grace was sung and a very dainty lunch served.

Volunteer Registration

For service in National emergencies a voluntary registration of Canadian women will be taken on Friday afternoon and Saturday afternoon and evening in Mr. Arnold Stickle's insurance office. This registration is in the nature of a census and is not binding in any way.

Those registering may withdraw at any time as the fact is particularly stressed that it is not binding in any way. The registration is in charge of Mrs. E. E. Ketcheson.

A very delightful party was given on Monday evening at the home of Miss Faye Tripp, when 14 little girls came in costume to enjoy the early hours of the evening. All the costumes were lovely. Joan Bennett won the fancy dress prize while Marie Turley carried off the comic prize. Lela Wyatte received a prize for character costume. After the judging was completed and the little girls unmasked, the evening was spent in games and contests led by Mrs. Cecil Tripp, Faye's mother. After a very dainty lunch the girls went to their respective homes, each proclaiming an enjoyable time.

Stalwart Brothers in Regiment to Act as Military Police for Troops

Picton, Nov. 1—Yesterday was pay day for Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and $20,000 was distributed by Paymaster Lance Nethery at the Armouries. Pay days are held twice monthly. Local merchants report a boom in trade since the regiment located here for winter training.

Last pay day quite a number of the soldiers found that their money quickly changed hands when they took part in "rolling the bones." When an investigation was made, it was found that the promotor was an experienced operator and had previously had several convictions registered against him. A search revealed twenty loaded dice in his knapsack. He was promptly discharged from the regiment and ordered out of the country.

Boxing Show Planned

At the summer camp held at Barriefield several members of the local regiment were found to be skilful boxers and in the inter-unit contests, local men won seven of eight bouts by knockouts. Now they will have a chance to show their wares since the R.C.A.F. at Trenton has invited them to take part in a tournament at the airport the middle of next month.

Last night a second recreation room was opened for use of the soldiers. This is located in the market building, on the second floor. The officers' wives are in charge and last night entertained with a program of dancing and games, followed by refreshments. The other recreation hall is located in the Legion rooms and has been open some time, proving a popular place. Writing materials are supplied free by the Legion ladies and there is a supply of magazines and games. Weekly social evenings are held.

Sixteen Join Unit

Sixteen members of Dundas, Stormont and Glengarry Highlanders joined the local unit this week. They had been on guard duty in Eastern Ontario but were relieved by R.C.M.P.

Brothers in Regiment

Two Belleville brothers, H. J. and Douglas Smith are the tallest men in the local unit. They are both six feet six inches tall and both weigh 220 pounds. They are perfect material for military police and have been detailed for this work.

The honor of coming the farthest to enlist goes to Malcolm Smith who heard the call in Dawson City, Yukon. He came 3,600 miles to Picton where he was born, his father, W. P. Smith having been Public School inspector for Prince Edward and now holds a similar position in Kingston. Malcolm is with Headquarters Company.

Hallowe'en Party

The kindergarten was the scene of a Hallowe'en party on Tuesday with Mrs. Jack LeHeup and Miss Helen Macdonald in charge.

A good crowd attended the concert in the parish hall Tuesday night, put on by a travelling group of artists who entertained with songs, music and skits.

The Athol War Emergency Committee held a Hallowe'en party in Cherry Valley hall Tuesday night. Proceeds were for the Red Cross work. A short program and games of all kinds whiled away the hours before refreshments were served.

Tommy Mason's Dance Band of Belleville provided music for the Hallowe'en dance in Wellington Town Hall Tuesday evening. Proceeds were for the library. There were also cards and fortune telling and a large crowd attended.

PRANK BLAMED FOR DEATH

Fort Wayne, Ind., Nov. 1 (AP)—Authorities blamed a Hallowe'en prank today for the death of one motorist and injury of two others. After pranksters let air out of automobile tires, Fred Kramer and Anthony Karthall parked their cars close together while they removed a deflated tire. Charles Dick, 40, drove against the parked automobiles and was killed. Kramer and Karthall were hurt.

Y's Men's Club Entertains at Hallowe'en Dance

There was revelry by night at the Trianon Ballroom on the occasion of the first annual Y's Men's Club Hallowe'en costume dance last evening.

Although this was the first costume ball in Belleville in several years the guests in general did not come en masque but those who did, presented an original and picturesque appearance. While not meriting a prize, a most commendable offering was the 'Laurel and Hardy' movie comic pair.

However the judging of winners of costume prizes drew the satisfaction of the ballroom patronage. Alderman Ormonde Butler and Mrs. Butler acted as judges. The selection of winners proved a hard task and resulted in the prize for the best original costume going to Mr. Donald X. Thomas, who masqueraded as a platinum blonde beauty of the modern age. Miss M. Hill and Mr. Alec. Gordon as a 16th Century couple were awarded the prize for the best couple.

The ballroom was decorated with colorful black and orange crepe paper and colored lights to add to the Hallowe'en festivities. Splendid dance music was provided by Bud Haines' Commodore orchestra and a gala evening's frivolity and dancing to modern and the old waltz music was enjoyed by some 250 of the younger set. Winners of spot dances were Miss J. Workman, Miss I. Airhart, Miss Grace Donelly and Miss Grace Hemphill. Refreshments were served at the midnight hour after which dancing continued.

Knitters Are Warned Against Boiling Wool

There is a rumour running around among the many thousand of women who are knitting socks and other garments for men in service to the effect that boiling wool before knitting removes the loose dye which is in much of our present wool and shrinks the wool so that the socks etc., will not shrink again when subjected to the informal treatment they are sure to get from the men themselves.

This is an erroneous belief. Tests that have been made in reputable laboratories show that, while boiling wool will remove loose dye, it will at the same time do a great deal more serious harm to the wool itself. It has also been effectively demonstrated that while boiling will shrink wool it will not prevent further shrinkage.

In the interests of putting a stop to this foolish belief a brief memorandum on "The Effect of Boiling on Wool" has been prepared. It reads:

"Wool is an animal fibre. Boiling animal fibre kills it—in fact, ruins it and deadens the whole structure After wool is boiled, it loses all its characteristics, which are

1—Resilience and Elasticity—(this, as you know, is its ability to stretch and contract.)

2—Body —(its feel and general spongy texture.)

3—Softness.

4—Life—(durability)

"In the processing of wool, all processes up to the dyeing process, are developed to avoid extreme heat and none can go as high as boiling temperature. It is not possible to avoid boiling with all dyes and those where boiling is necessary show that the wool has deteriorated and is not nearly of the same quality as yarns where dyes can be used at lower temperatures.

"Wool fibre is wool fibre regardless of its quality, and boiling causes much greater shrinkage in fine Botany wools than in the coarser wool. It, therefore, stands to reason that with the coarse wool, such as is being used for service socks, there is less need to avoid shrinkage than if a fine yarn like a Botany were used.

"In short, boiling of any wool is definitely harmful, as anyone, with any knowledge of wool, will substantiate".

THE WESTERN FRONT

Britain and France, whose strength on the west front has been fortified by Hitler's delay in springing his lightning war on the British and French, has caused some speculation as to the real cause. Is it due to divided counsel between Hitler and the Army Command? Is it due to purge of the army which some reports state is in progress to remove military leaders who do not see eye to eye with the Nazi leaders? Is it due to a radical change in the Teuton plan of campaign forced upon the Nazis by some known or unknown event or factor?

As the days pass without momentous action by the German army, the job facing Hitler's generals grows more and more heavy. News from the front is that the French and British have greatly strengthened their lines and that there has been constant digging to add to the strength of the front.

The other day during the quiet which reigned along the entire front, sometimes considered as a herald of an approaching assault, Germans used little balloons, carried by the wind, to bear across No Man's Land Hitler's last speech translated into French.

Will the lull which has been so often reported be broken at any time or will it be continued? If it does continue, what does it mean, for all the while the British are seizing and holding up supplies and munitions for the Germans and are sinking U-boats.

The nervous tension of the pre-war days has changed. War having come, there is not the same dread of it, horrible as it is. The British people are not fazed by the approach of a small German air fleet of bombers but prefer to stay out in the streets to witness whatever combat there may be.

Are the Germans settling down to the British and French thought of a long war? That is hardly likely as war by blockade must inevitably mean strangulation of the sinews of war in Germany despite what she can obtain from her neighbors.

VALUE OF PATIENCE IN WAR

War technique has been different on the Western Front from what it was on the Polish Front. Germany knows that the western campaign is the direct result of Hitler's attempt to crush the liberty of a free state by resort to arms rather than by submission of the question to arbitration over differences with Poland. Britain and France caught the Nazis with the guns in their hands and the loot in their pockets.

Yet that Western campaign goes along slowly. Britain and France in their statements stress the value of patience on the part of the peoples for patience is the very essence of a successful war without undue exposure of human life to shells and bullets. The Allied peoples will preserve their calm and patience and so will only make the German Chancellor and his party the more impatient, the very thing the Allied commands feel is better. It is estimated that the attacking army is at great disadvantage in a day of such fortifications as have been built on the west front, that offensives are too costly. It is felt that Britain and France have an offensive which will largely help to tell the tale even if there should be a quiet for months on the battle front—that is the offensive of the blockade, which never lets up in its restriction of trade entering Germany. German merchant ships have been driven off the sea, Germany must place her trust in neutral shipping running the blockade which is difficult and costly. The result will be that rich stores of supplies for which Germany has had to pay in kind or in gold will be seized by the Allies on any ships that carry contraband.

Minor air raids have been taking place but they have demonstrated very little whether German bombers can perform as destructive work as Germans contemplated.

Some observers see that Hitler is hesitant in launching his boasted fury on Britain because he knows that while Britain will not attack non-military objectives and will assuredly not bomb civilian populations, he has no doubt a wholesome fear of the retaliatory blow which might be delivered by the Allies on German military centres or concentrations.

Hitler's air force has yet made no great effort when one considers the number of planes which he is credited with having. But the submarine war goes on. To this both sides are accustomed from their experiences in the former war but today they do not know what wholesale bombing would mean.

There have been guesses as to the number Hitler could send over Britain or France if he desired, thousands have been mentioned, but his visitors to British coasts have been small squadrons whose luck has been rather unfortunate when they have come up against British gunners with anti-aircraft guns and pursuit pilots. The toll levied on these by the land defences and the pursuit planes has been very heavy.

The probable letting down of the barriers of sale of munitions and war supplies to belligerents by the United States which is expected very shortly if and when the House of Representatives passes the embargo repeal, offers the assurance of a steady flow of airplanes to make possible a vastly greater number of planes on the Allied side. Opinion was expressed at the weekend that the action of the United States might result in Hitler being forced to launch an attack on the western front and on the cities and ports of Britain.

The western war altogether must have failed to cheer the home front in Germany. They have conquered nothing to compare with the Polish effort or with the opening months of the Great War in August and September 1914.

Hitler's peaceful conquests have been flashes as in the conquests of 1938 and early 1939, and with the Polish conquest which he divided with Russia. But the west front falls into a different category. There for the first time Hitler has met more than his match.

GERMAN CONCENTRATION CAMPS BEFORE THE WAR

A British White Paper explains in detail atrocities in Nazi concentration camps in Germany before the war. The story is shocking in its revelation of the tendency of the Nazis, particularly among the young guards, who had charge of Jews and other Germans who were in the concentration camps before the war started.

The British Government in making this statement of official information collected before the war, notes that the German Government complained of the maltreatment of German minorities in foreign countries and of "Macedonian conditions" reigning there. But it points out that under the conditions of the present regime in Germany the treatment accorded Germans is "reminiscent not of Macedonia but of the darkest ages of the history of man."

The British White Book was issued with reluctance even after the outbreak of war because it was felt the revelations might have the effect of inspiring hatred. But "the attitude of the German Government and the unscrupulous propaganda which they are spreading compels His Majesty's Government to publish these documents so that public opinion, both at home and abroad, may be able to judge for itself."

The entire book is made up of affidavits taken in Germany and the names of persons who supplied the information have been carefully protected lest Nazi fury burst upon them.

The British Consul formerly at Frankfurt-on-Main tells that at the camp at Bruchenwald a man's feet would be strapped to two plates on the ground, head fastened between two horizontal bars and the body bent over a pole while fifty lashes were administered, the guards being allowed to inflict only ten lashes lest their strength give out. Sometimes sacks were tied around the head to stifle the cries of the victims. Some went mad. In another form of torture hands were tied around a tree so tight that they could scarcely be moved and the guards made the victims dance the merry-go-round. Often if they did not dance fast enough they were kicked on the ankles. Sometimes the prisoner was fastened face outward and bound arms and legs to a tree for long hours, the circulation being stopped by the tight bands and these prisoners were left for long times in this hanging position. Many unable to stand on parade were held up so that they could be seen by their guards. Others, it was testified, pretended to be trying to escape in order to get shot.

Filth and mud to the knees in some of the camps made it impossible for men to walk. One man had flesh torn from his face which was made unrecognizable. At Buchenwald there were only 100 straw sacks among 10,000 men. Men were forced to lie on their sides because lying on the back was forbidden under pain of blows.

The Nazis will doubtless deny this but the facts were collected before the war under affidavit by British authorities.

The very knowledge outside Germany of this condition will be the beginning of the retribution which must fall upon that party and its leaders.

German Shopper Packs a Permit

If you were in Germany-at-war and wanted to buy a pair of socks, don't think you could simply enter a men's furnishing store and buy socks at a price and color suited to your needs.

If you, milady, felt you needed an extra pair of "undies", don't think the saleslady at a dry goods store would serve you without further ado.

In either case you would be asked, "Where is your 'bezugschein'?" It has become a magic word.

It is a certificate entitling the holder to buy a stated article and sometimes it is hard to persuade a hard-boiled official that one really needs new socks or underwear.

All over the country and in every city at numerous places, there are "war economy offices". If the officials can be persuaded of the absolute need of the article in question, he will issue a "bezugschein" or authority to buy, which is taken up by the shopkeeper where the purchase is made.

So long as a man can call two pairs of socks his own, he must do some tall explaining before he is given permission to purchase still another pair.

Owners of restaurants are also frequent visitors to the local or district war economy office. They must be able to demonstrate that, despite unusual care, the wear and tear of their serviettes and table cloths has been such that replacement is essential for keeping up the good name of the establishment.

Hospitals are in a preferred class. The authorities realize that in wartime it is more essential than ever that utmost cleanliness prevail. Hence hospitals find no difficulty in obtaining "bezugschein" for all the textiles of various kinds they may need.

'Dud' Propaganda

Dr. Paul Goebbels, Germany's minister of propaganda, is greatly overrated; he is, indeed, more of a liability than an asset to the Reich at the present time. Despised by his own country, he is laughed at abroad, and nothing he says is taken seriously anywhere. The great art of German propaganda consists in distortion and suppression; the one essential qualification to excel in that direction is an entire lack of principle, and in this negative way, no doubt, Dr. Goebbels must be counted a success. The Pope's encyclical has been presented to the German public shorn of all references reflecting on the Nazi regime. The nation must not be told what His Holiness really thinks of Hitler and his unscrupulous methods. But there are ways of getting the truth to them, and the effect of the official censorship steadily grows less.

The efforts of the Nazi propaganda department outside Germany fail even more conspicuously. In Britain, it is said, the broadcasts from Germany form the chief amusement in blacked-out homes. But they gain in vigour and virulence with every day that passes. Neutral countries are subjected to a continual bombardment of prejudice and deception. Sometimes it becomes necessary to take notice of these activities, as in the case of the calumny that British labour "does not want to fight in the war". Mr. Arthur Greenwood, deputy leader of the Parliamentary Labour party, has pinned down that lie in the strongest terms. Labour, he says, is determined to smash Hitlerism and do everything possible to "bring the war to a speedy and victorious end." Though the workers would prefer to be "in the trenches, at sea, or in the air," some must necessarily remain at their posts to manufacture arms and munitions, just as in Germany. The British worker will retain the liberty he has won in order to safeguard the rights and liberty of all workers."—Hamilton Spectator.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Outdoor Play Widens the Chest and Prevents Tuberculosis

A physician making a routine examination advised the patient to get outdoors more and walk, play golf, or take other exercise.

"You never played as a boy, did you?"

"No! I was the office boy of my organization thirty years ago, and now I'm the general manager with one thousand employees under me. I didn't have time to play when I was a boy. But how did you know I never played?"

"Because while your chest is deep, it is not wide enough in proportion to its depth. A baby's chest is as wide as it is deep, but as it develops by play, the chest widens more than it deepens, so that at the age of ten the proportion of width to depth may be about 9 to 7 and at the age of 18 as 11 to 7".

Physicians examining recruits have found that the youth whose chest was too small to be accepted was usually a boy who had not played much as a youngster because he disliked play, or was delicate, or his mother was afraid he would get hurt.

It is not only because play enlarges or widens the chest that physicians advise parents to see that their children play outdoors, but because, other things being equal, the boy or girl with the wide or normal chest—proper proportion of width to depth—is less likely to develop tuberculosis.

Some months ago I quoted Dr. S. A. Weisman, Minneaplis, in the Journal of the American Medical Association, who reported his investigations showing that "deep" chested children, that is deep in proportion to the width, were more likely to develop tuberculosis. This is because the tuberculous chest is not a mature chest; it is a baby chest. These children, 1324 girls and 1399 boys, were tested with tuberculin, and the number of positive (likely to develop tuberculosis)—was greater among the narrow but deep chested children. Another fact discovered was that the narrow and deep chested children were more numerous in the poorer districts of the city than in the better districts, due, in part, to lack of fresh air and proper food.

"The children in the slums are physically undeveloped. They are not only shorter and lighter, but they have, on the average, deep, infant type of chest, one that has not gone through the normal process of development."

Thus slum clearance will mean better developed men and women and prevent many cases of tuberculosis.

EVERYONE SHOULD MAKE A WILL

Trust companies, executors and other organizations concerned with the interpretation of the wills of deceased persons and the administration of their estates repeatedly encounter puzzles in the documents in which are set forth the disposal of the deceased's propperty. Sometimes the witnessing of the will is neglected. Frequently the names of persons to whom bequests are made are not correctly recorded. In other cases the language is so ambiguous that much difficulty is experienced in reaching a conclusion as to what the maker of the will intended.

The situation is said to be getting better because much information is being disseminated as to the correct procedure in making wills, but there are still many cases so complicated that interpretation by the courts has to be sought. There are dozens of such cases now under official scrutiny in Canada, some of which involve interesting points. There is one to be heard soon by the court at London in which a woman made a will but also enclosed cash bequests in envelopes which she left in charge of a friend, for disposal after her death. One of the envelopes did not contain cash but only the name on the outside with the figures $1,000. None of the envelope bequests were referred to in the will and the executors must leave it to the court to decide what was the testator's intention.

In another Ontario case, the names of several heirs were wrong and also some institutions were incorrectly described. In the majority of such cases, the courts are able to make a satisfactory decision.

In general, the making of wills is a duty subject to manifest neglect. Many people shrink from the responsibility because they imagine that it is an admission of impending death. Those who have had wide experience with regard to the entanglements and expensive litigation that often is characteristic in the allocation of a deceased person's property, where no will was made, or where the document was faulty, are vehement in their recommendations that everyone ought to make a will and be sure that the language is direct and specific.—Woodstock Sentinel Review.

SPANIEL HAS HIS DAY

In island and mainland coverts hereabout the season of spaniel field trials is bringing many examples of craftsmanlike work by both springers and cockers. For years the true qualities of these merry little dogs as hunters of upland game were neglected in this country. But of spaniels are coming into their own late there has been a revival and afield. This is a just turning of the wheel, for many authorities hold that the bird dogs of larger stature especially the setter, are derived from the spaniel races. Indeed, the old British writers on field sports made frequent reference to the "settynge spaniel" as the progenitor of the modern setter.

In any case, broader use of the springer and the cocker, both in field trials and on the hunt, has given proof of their adaptability for wing shooting under American conditions. Active and well-coated, they are particularly suitable in thick cover. Eager and often very hardheaded, they require patient training, but, once taught, prove industrious and sure aides in the field.

There is a thrill for any outdoors man or woman in watching gun dogs at work, whatever their breed—the chiseled immobility of the pointer, "frozen" on his bird; the swift grace of the English or Irish setter, quartering ground, and the eager industry of the pied or solid-color spaniel in the covers or his steadiness at the flush and shot. None of the bird dogs is better than the well-trained spaniel at marking the line of fall and then retrieving game.—New York Times.

Planes Swarm Over England for Training

By GUY E. RHOADES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Nov. 1 (CP)—"Somewhere in Central England" numerous student pilots are finishing the advanced courses that will put them into the regular Royal Air Force. Among them are eight Canadians, all star pupils, their instructor says.

Approach this school any day in the week and you will see a swarm of planes in the sky, some pursuit machines, a few bombers and a number of two-engined craft that look like medium transport planes.

All day long they roar up off the field as their pilots, observers radio operators and student gunners and bombers carry out their various assignments. After dark you won't see them, but you can hear the drone of their engines as the lads carry out their night flying tests.

The men here, ranging in age from 18 to 28, have come up from Elementary Training Schools, the Civil Air Guard or the Air Force Volunteer Reserve. They could all fly something when they arrived, but they needed intermediate and advanced tuition before they could graduate to the firing school which trains them in actual warfare, and so to the regular Air Force.

A batch of them will be going out soon now. They have done their training in the dummy "Link Trainer" for fog flying, practised camera machine gunning, learned their navigation, got the hang of morse code and their radio sets, had a spell of camera obscura bombing and learned all about their machines.

Day after day they have worked long hours. They have flown in all kinds of weather, done all kinds of work. Some of them can turn out a strip photographic aerial survey that would do credit to a veteran aerial cameraman. Some can set an imaginary bomb down from 10,000 feet with an accuracy of 50 feet.

Skilful Fliers

And they can fly. The day the newspapermen and photographers were out at their school three of them went up in pursuit planes to put on a show for the movie cameramen. They power-dived from about 1,000 feet, and pulled out and roared past the cameras at about 300 miles an hour, 20 feet above the ground, and there didn't appear to be more than 20 feet between their wing tips.

From this field they will all go for a brief spell to a firing school, "somewhere on the coast", to get actual target practice with live bombs and machine guns.

Then they will leave, maybe, for "Somewhere in France," or, for some distant part of the Empire, or they may stay at some British station to patrol sea-lane approaches or guard their country from enemy attack, if it comes.

They don't seem to mind where they go. They are nearing the end of their courses and getting impatient, like school boys when a term-end draws near. They look like schoolboys, too, with cheerful, bronzed faces, easy moving bodies and easy-going, confident control of their planes.

Wolfe's Last Letter to Mother Presented to Canada by the Queen

General James Wolfe's last letter to his mother, written several days before the battle 180 years ago on Quebec's historic Plains of Abraham when he won Canada for Britain, has been presented to the Dominion Archives by Queen Elizabeth.

Her Majesty sent the document to the archives, which keeps an historical record of Canada's past, possibly as an appreciation of the warmth of the welcome extended to her and the King during their visit to the Dominion this summer, archives officials said.

The letter, written Aug. 31, 1759, "on the banks of the St. Lawrence River", disclosed General Wolfe's feelings toward the enemy, led by the Marquis de Montcalm, before the historic battle on the plains which followed thirteen days later.

"The enemy puts nothing to risk, and I can't in conscience put the whole army in risk," General Wolfe told his mother, Mrs. Edward Wolfe, in England.

"My antagonist has wisely shut himself up in inaccessible entrenchments, so that I can't get at him without spilling torrents of blood and that perhaps to little purpose. People must be of the profession to understand the disadvantages and difficulties we labor under arising from the uncommon natural strength of the country."

Advice on Family Finances.

General Wolfe also referred to his family affairs. "I approve entirely of my father's disposition of his affairs, though perhaps it may interfere a little with my plan of quitting the service which I am determined to do the first opportunity," he wrote. "I mean so as not to be absolutely distressed in circumstances, nor burdensome to you nor anybody else."

The letter, signed "your obedient, affectionate, son Jam Wolfe," also offered a little financial advice to his mother in a postscript paragraph which read: "If any sums of money are paid to you of what is due to my father from the government, let me recommend to you not to meddle with the funds, but keep it for your support until better time." Archive officials here believe the word "meddle" meant "speculate".

Dr. Gustave Lanctot, Dominion archivist, expressed thanks to the Queen for her historical gifts. "This adds greatly to our collection of Wolfe's relics," he said.

THE RUNAWAY

BY

KATHLEEN NORRIS

INSTALMENT 5

Two days later Sarah opened fire again. This time it was night. The boys and their father had gone to bed. Becky and her mother had lingered on, on the porch steps, under a bright white moon, breathing in the cool air that relieved the burning tension of the day.

Joe had come in earlier in the evening, half asleep from a day spent in research for the Chet Dark case. Now he was gone. Becky turned an amaezd face toward her mother as Sarah said quietly, "Would you be very much surprised to hear that daddy isn't your father, Beck?"

A silence of utter stupefaction on Becky's part held the porch for a full minute. The earth seemed to take a great jar under her.

"That surprises you, doesn't it?" Sarah faltered on. "I—I had to tell you, my dear. We've talked over your plans, daddy and I, and we think it best that you should—should know. Gavin Flood has brought a new element into it. If you'd gone on and married Joe I think we mightn't have told you. Dad might have told him only that you weren't our baby—"

"You were married twice, Mother?" Becky's voice was frightened.

"No, only once, Beck. I knew your mother, although I didn't know much about her, or even her name. That is I'm not sure I knew her name. She—"

"Mother," Becky interrupted almost angrily, "you're fooling!"

"I wish I were fooling," Sarah said.

"Go on," Becky said.

"I'll have to go back some way, then, Beck, to tell you how it was I met your mother. I was working in one of Chicago's big department stores; I was about twenty-five. My parents were dead. I'd met dad, and we wanted to be married. But we had no money, and it seemed as if we must wait forever.

"One day in November I noticed a lady standing quietly watching me for quite some time. When I was free she came up and bought some book, and we stood talking. She was handsomely dressed, but she looked sad and sick. She was going to have a baby very soon."

"Not married!" Becky said quickly.

"Oh, yes, she was married. And somehow—I never knew exactly how—she drew me out to tell her about my being engaged and wanting to get married. Then she said she was in great trouble and asked me if I would help her. I was as puzzled as I could be, and I said that in any possible way—I remember, Beck," Sarah diverged to say simply, "I remember wondering if she was a crook of some sort. We were always hearing about well-dressed women who were crooks. But she didn't seem that sort. She looked like you, only smaller, and very frail.

"She asked me what time I went to lunch,' Sarah resumed, "and she waited for me. We had lunch together, and we talked. She was going to have a baby in a few weeks and she didnt want her husband to know; not that you were coming nor that you lived, nor whether you were a boy or a girl. She'd left him, months earlier. I imagined that maybe he was a cruel, a dangerous man, and she wouldn't have any baby of hers left in his care. Of course I don't know whether he was like that or not. I never saw him. I never knew his name."

"You knew her name?"

"I knew the name she gave me. But I saw her only three times, Beck. Lunch, that first day, and then a day we met at the bank, a week later. And then in the hospital."

"At the bank?"

"Yes. By that time I'd talked to your father—to dad, I mean—and he'd agreed to change his name, and that we should be married right away and adopt her baby. It was like the skies opening, to us!"

"Change his name?" Becky said in bewilderment.

"That was the condition she made. We were to change our names, take you as soon as you were born, go to some strange city, live there for at least two years and then move to California. I'd told her our dream was to live out here on a little ranch. She said that was what she wanted for you. Only she always called you 'my little boy.' She said that under other circumstances she would have loved to have a son in her arms; that there had been times when she had longed and prayed for a child, to keep her from despair, but that now she was ill, she was afraid she would not live, and she could not leave her little boy to a father like that. She clung to my hand, Beck; she was like a crazy creature, and in the end I promised her everything, told her we'd take you and treat you as our own, showed her my new wedding ring. And that was the first happiness you brought dad and me, Becky, that we could be married and plan for our California ranch!"

"Oh, She gave you money!"

"That was it. That was how Spencer and I could marry and why we changed our names. We took a telephone book and took the top name on the left and the last name on the right of two pages. It came out Spencer Gibson. The money in the bank was deposited to the credit of Sarah Gibson. Twenty thousand dollars. All the time that you were coming—it was about a month—we were making our plans, and when you were five days old I went to the little private hospital and took you. I said I was your aunt.

"But she?"

"She died when you were seven days old."

Becky looked up heavily. "What was her name?"

"The name she gave me wasn't her own, Becky, at least I don't think it was. She called herself Mrs. William Davis. But of all the William Davises in the Chicago telephone book there wasn't one who took any notice of her death or came to the hospital. Dad and I arranged for the funeral—she had left plenty of money for that. We stay. 1 only a few more weeks in town. Then we went to Brooklyn. We went there because it seemed a big place, a good place to get lost in. We were there two yars— dad had a job in a bank—and then we came here and bought the ranch."

"She hated my father?"

"Enough not to want him even to know you were coming."

"She'd left him, you said. Where was she living?"

"That I don't know."

"She just chose you at random? A person she didn't know at all?"

"Not quite like that. She said she'd watched me for three days, and heard one of the girls ask me when I was going to be married, and heard me say, "Oh, not until we can afford a baby!' She said I looked 'wholesome,'" Sarah said. "I looked like someone she could trust."

"My father was a criminal," Becky said slowly.

"I don't think so. I imagine they'd quarreled and she felt that if she died you'd be all his. Perhaps she hated his mother, wouldn't trust them with you."

There was a silence. Becky broke it in a somber voice. "Then I really haven't—anyone."

"Dad adopted you legally," Sarah answered briefly. She was silent for a moment, her heart sick with pity.

"You've been —terribly kind to me," Becky said stiffly, her throat thick. "Money is money, of course. But money didn't buy what you've—what you've done for me."

Sarah had to keep her voice low to hold it steady. She spoke simply: "No child was ever more loved than you've been by us. It wasn't only that you were such a wonderful baby, Becky. But it was everything else—our being able to get away from the city into this wonderful country—fruit trees and the creek, and then the boys. I think dad loves his girl more than any of his boys, Beck. You know that.

Becky got to her feet and walked through the mottled shadow and moonlight to the side gate and stood there leaning on the bars, staring down the road. Sarah sat on the porch in the deep shadow, trembling, afraid.

After perhaps ten minutes Rebecca came back. "Mother what was your name originally?"

The older woman hesitated a second. Then she said. "I see no reason why you shouldn't know that, Beck. I was Sarah White, my father was Robert White, a salesman in a hardware store in Chicago. I was the only child, and my father and mother both died in the year I was twenty-two. Father was killed, and mother had been ailing for some time. Your father—dad, I mean—was Frank Smith. I don't know much about his people except that they came from Buffalo. He came to Chicago and worked in a jewelry store; that was when I met him."

Becky's eyes were fixed on her for a long minute. Presently the girl said hesitatingly, finding words slowly. "It's a strange story. It makes me feel—queer. It makes me feel—I really don't know how. I'm horribly sorry, I think. And of course," Becky stumbled on, laying a hand now on Sarah's knee. "I'm yours. You're the only mother I've ever had, and even if she'd lived she wouldn't mean anything to me."

Becky's fingers linked in Sarah's fingers. The girl felt the roughened hand tighten its hold a little.

"Mother, were you going to tell Joe this if I had married him?"

"Just that you were adopted before you were a week old, and that all we knew of your mother was that she was a woman of—well, of fineness, Beck, much—very different from me!" Sarah said with a little apologetic laugh. "And that you were legitimate, of course."

"What made you sure of that?"

"What she was, Beck. How she seemed. Fine and very sad and not poor, you know. Her clothes were fine. And she gave me her wedding ring. This ring.

There was another silence. Then Becky said, "Why did you tell me this now, Mother?"

"Because—well, perhaps because I'm so much afraid of the world for you, Becky. It treated her so badly. We talked it over, Dad and I, and he thought I should tell you."

"One more thing," Becky said, getting to her feet. "This has stunned me in a way. Would you mind—for a day or two—not talking any more about it? Then, if there's anything to say—and I don't see why there should be—we can talk about it again. I'll be more used to it."

"That's a good idea," Sarah said simply. She and Becky went upstairs together, kissed each other in the upper hall without further words, and parted for the night.

Becky, in her own room, went to the wide-open window that was flooded in white moonlight, and knelt down. "Two months ago I didn't know Gavin," she presently said half aloud. "Now—this, everything gone. My mother's wedding ring, eh? And another to go with it." She had taken from its hiding place another ring.. Gavin had given it to her. He had said, "Keep it until I put it on in church."

Rebecca fell to dreaming. "Well, mother," she said, "you weren't afraid to trust me to a woman you hardly knew. It's not so strange that I'm willing to follow Gavin to the end of the world! I guess we're both runaways, you and I."

AT THE McCARTHY

"Five Little Peppers and How They Grew."

Every boy and girl in Belleville, from three to seventy-three is in for a good time by attending the McCarthy Theatre during the last of this week where "Five Little Peppers and How They Grew" will be presented.

To the older generation, the picturization of the beloved juvenile story by Margaret Sidney will revive a wealth of cherished memories. To the youngsters it brings a grand new gang of screen pals. And to both young and grown-ups it brings a stirring story of pluck and merriment, alive with youthful high spirits and rollicking escapades.

Simply told, with a wealth of homely detail that provides both laughter and suspense, "Five Little Peppers and How They Grew" is a refreshing and original type of entertainment. The characters and mood of the childhood classic have been transferred to the screen with tender care, and the simple homely philosophy that was so popular in the book is again evident in the film. Above all, the unquenchable gaiety of the Pepper brood permeates the picture and provides a fast-moving comic pace that is most enjoyable.

In the cast, Edith Fellows is wholly lovable as the motherly little Polly. Tommy Bond, Jimmy Leake, Charles Peck and Ronald Sinclair, give admirable accounts of themselves as the masculine contingent. Dorothy Peterson's characterization of the hard-working Mrs. Pepper is most sympathetic and Clarence Kolb is superb as the irascible financier who becomes as putty in the pudgy hand of little Phronsie, played by Dorothy Anne Seese, a new child star who is certain to capture your heart in this her first picture appearance.

"Outpost of the Mounties"

Another swell story of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, starring Charles Starrett, entitled "Outpost of the Mounties" will be presented in addition to "Five Little Peppers and How They Grew" as a companion feature. It will be the first Ontario showing of this picture as the McCarthy Theatre opens with it before it plays anywhere else in the province, it having just been made and passed through the censor board.

"Women in Prison" and "Trapped in the Sky."

"Women in Prison," starring Wyn Cahoon and Scott Colton, a stirring screen drama greater than "The Big House," plus Jack Holt in an action-hit entitled "Trapped in the Sky," two swell feature attractions are now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

CAREFUL PLANNING

Co-operation Praised.

The prime minister commended the co-operative attitude of all political parties in furthering Canada's war effort during the special emergency session of parliament in September. "There was a general desire that the support to be given by Canada to Britain and France should be given as speedily and effectively as possible." he said.

"There was, too, I believe, a desire to make clear to the world that a democracy was as capable of meeting a great crisis as a dictatorship."

Under the War Measures Act of 1914, Mr. Mackenzie King recalled, the government took steps late in August to prepare Canada from any sudden attack. Coastal defences were manned and augmented, the navy and air force were sent to war stations, and military volunteers were called up.

Efficient War Footing.

When Canada actually entered the war, various government boards were set up to aid in placing the nation upon an efficient war footing and both military and economic aids were planned for Britain and her allies.

"The most effective contribution Canada can make in support of the allies," said the prime minister, "is certain to differ greatly from our contribution in the last war. Our contribution to economic welfare may easily prove to be the most important of all. This is widely recognized in Great Britain.

"A leading economic journal has suggested that in addition to our traditional part as the granary of the Commonwealth, Canada may also become its arsenal. Our relative security from the hazards of air bombing, together with our relative nearness to Europe, both point in that direction."

In addition to a garrison of 10,000 for Canadian seaports, the prime minister said, there are 42,000 men in a reserve force of two divisions and a number of additional units.

Mr. Mackenzie King referred to recruiting of French-Canadian units, declaring "it is not without interest that the Maisonneuve Regiment of Montreal, true to the best traditions of Old Canada, was among the first to reach its complement."

Six Thousand In Navy.

The Canadian navy, he said, had nearly 6,000 officers and men in service by mid-September, about 4,000 more than peacetime establishment. The navy was co-operating with allied naval services in convoy work as well as guarding Canadian coastlines. The air force was aiding in this work, Mr. Mackenzie King said.

"By far the most important development in the air is the agreement between the governments of Canada, Great Britain, New Zealand and Australia to establish in Canada advanced training facilities for all four countries," he said. "Advanced training on a very large scale, involving the first year many millions of dollars and many thousands of men, will be concentrated in Canada.

"This may well mean," he said, "that the final victory will be shaped on Canadian soil—for who can exaggerate the importance of this great co-operative effort in the training of men and the forging of an overwhelming air strength?"

Daily War Survey

As Finnish delegates were about to return to Moscow for final talks in their negotiations regarding Russian demands on their country the Soviet spokesman appeared to bar any hope of compromise. He said Russia was demanding an agreement with Finland similar to those already made with Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania, the other Baltic states. Such an agreement would infringe gravely on Finnish independence and Finnish leaders are on record as expressing a determination to fight for their country's independence. Thus the Molotoff speech is another application of the Nazi method of threatening force in the midst of negotiations.

Regarding India Molotoff re-echoed Nazi propaganda about alleged British oppression. This lends support to the view that one of Russia's main contributions to a totalitarian victory may be an attack on British interests in the East in which subversive Communist activity in India and other Asiatic countries would play an important part.

In Spy Ring "Just for Fun" Says Counsel

Geneva, Nov. 1 (AP)—Defence counsel was reported today to have told five Swiss judges that a dark-eyed night club dancer accused of being the "brains" of a far-reaching spy ring had turned to espionage "just for fun."

Reports filtering from the closed court said that in his final plea defence counsel George haldenwang adgued his clinent, known as "nina" was merely a minor figure in the ring and failed to realize the gravity of her acts.

Government witnesses previously had pictured the 35-year-old dancer—listed on the docket as Virginia Capt Rota—as the principal figure in a plot to obtain Swiss military secrets. Haldenwang said the dancer had been drawn into the ring by mysterious "higher-ups" still at large.

"Nina", he said, had less to do with the plot than Paul Rochat, the Geneva detective who is on trial with her. Also on trial are Rochart's wife and Roger Joel, one-time draughtsman in a Swiss arms factory.

Mile. Rota and Jotel, who face three to 30 years in prison if convicted were arrested when they tried to cross the Swiss frontier into France allegedly carrying plans for an anti-aircraft gun and other military data.

They had registered Saturday as "Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Wilson, of Detroit, Mich., but their identity was disclosed by a sister of Mrs. Walker.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

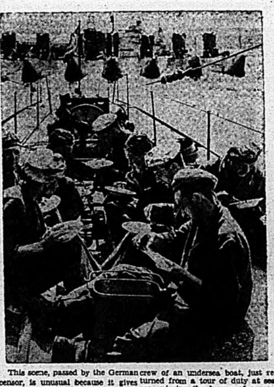
U-BOAT CREW TREATED TO MEAL ON DECK



This scene, passed by the German censor, is unusual because it gives for the first time since the beginning of the war a view of a flotilla of German U-boats in an unnamed naval base. In the foreground the crew of an undersea boat, just returned from a tour of duty at sea, are enjoying the luxury of a meal on the deck of their boat. In the background are at least seven of the undersea craft riding at their moorings.

Legend of the Bath

By HELEN FOLLETT

AS A HYGIENIC measure for hushing yowling nerves and putting the fixe texture and rosy glow on the complexion, the daily bath with warm soap suds and a heavy brush—we accent the brush—rates 100 per cent effective.

It is a legend that civilized human beings bathe daily; not a fact. Dress fitters tell tales of untidy ladies who come to them for beauteous garments.

A good old scouring stimulates the skin all over the body, gives the delicate glands of the face less work to do. In treatment of pimples, bathing is a necessary part. Then there is that lovely fresh look that comes to the face after a thorough tubbing. Nothing like it. No woman who isn't a bath fiend can appear well groomed.

Skin scales do a continual hello-and-goodbye performance; the dead scales must be washed away if the cutaneous surface is to be satin smooth. The exudations from the skin unite with dead scales, set up a chemical action which produces an unpleasant odor.

The fastidious woman finds enjoyment in her daily scrubbing. It enlivens her spirits, sets her on her toes, makes her start the day right. If the bath is perfumed, she feels like a million dollars. She finishes with a tonic rubdown and a dusting over with fragrant powder.

Have you a nose that doesn't care how red it gets or when it gets that way? It's an annoying facial feature that drives one crazy.

Stop using a heavy powder, and use the powder pad lightly. A red nose has to be treated gently. When bathing the face, use tepid water; never water that is hot or cold.

Experiment with nightly application of ointment of zinc oxide which, in course of time, will make the skin less sensitive to atmospheric changes. Spread it on. Massage is not necessay; in fact, friction of any kind is likely to increase the rosy glow.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Doctor Explains Why Milk is Considered Nearly Perfect Food

I don't believe a country could possibly have a normal healthy people unless they received at least a reasonable supply of milk and milk products.

The body needs proteins, fats, minerals, vitamins, carbohydrates. Milk is important because it contains all the needed food elements and it contains them in proportions which give to the body the ability to resist disease and the results of illness and accidents.

Actually there is no one food which contains all the elements the body needs in just the right proportions. But milk is the food that comes nearest this standard of perfection.

Largely milk is made up of protein, fat, lactose and ash. Proteins are the substances the body uses to build up and repair tissues. They are important to young people because they allow the child to grow. The new tissue in the child's body that makes him larger and larger is mostly these proteins. Older people still need quite a bit of protein because as old tissue breaks down new tissue must take its place. Now you see one of the reasons why milk, rich as it is in protein, is important.

In fact, sometimes I think that the reason we, as a people, are growing taller is because we drink more milk than we used to; children growing up have more protein to add inches to their stature. I am sure all of you have noticed how second generations of peoples migrating from Europe are nearly always larger than their parents. I give milk a lot of credit for this.

The lactose in the milk is the only carbohydrate it contains. Carbohydrates are the fuels of the body. They give us energy to do work, to think, to plan. If it were for its carbohydrates alone, milk would be an important food.

Fats in milk supply us with body fat and energy. The ash mentioned as a component of milk is made up of minerals. There is calcium in this ash; there is phospherus, potassium, chlorine and sulphur, in considerable quantities. There are also small amounts of iron, copper, zinc, aluminum, manganese, iodine, fluorine, and a dozen other odd minerals. When you drank that glass of milk at noon, you had no idea of all the things you were taking into your system.

Of the minerals milk contains, calcium is the most important. Bones and teeth are composed of calcium, and to build them properly and maintain them large quantities of the mineral are required. Milk is the best known source of it.

Very important elements in diet are vitamins. Perhaps some of you have been wondering why I didn't mention them when we talked of the components of milk. But vitamins do not appear in a chemical analysis. I will deal with them later.

Ordinarily a food is considered valuable if it contains any one of the five necessary food elements we have been talking about. Yet here is a food which contains generous quantities of all the types of food.

BROOKS—PHILLIPS

Rawdon, (Special)— A charming Autumn wedding was solemnized at two o'clock on Monday, October 30, in Mount Pleasant (Rawdon) United Church, with the pastor, Rev. J. E. Beckel officiating when Eileen Mabel, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bhillips, became the bride of Private Harry Winfield Brooks, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Brooks, Carmel.

The altar was banked with potted plants and fern while baskets of gladioli, chrysantheumums and bittersweet made a pretty setting for the ceremony. The guest pews were marked with bows of white crepe tissue and a large number of the congregation and several from other points were in attendance to witness the ceremony.

The bride given in marriage by her father looked charming in a floor length gown of white sheer over taffeta with a shirred jacket and fashioned on princess lines. Her three quarter length white tulle veil was caught in cap effect and she carried a bouquet of Talisman roses.

Miss Winnie Phillips was her sister's bridesmaid wearing a floor length gown of Robin's egg blue sheer, fashioned exactly as the bride's with a shoulder veil of blue tulle and she carried an arm bouquet of chrysanthemums.

Mr. Bert Hagerman of Carmel was groomsman and the ushers were Messrs. Herbert Smith and Bert Jeffs.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Phillips where a buffet lunch was served to over fifty guests.

The wedding cake made a pretty decoration for the bride's table and the waitresses were Miss Marion Phillips, Mrs. Herb. Smith, Miss E. MacMullen, Miss Dorothy Holden, Miss Mary McCoy, and Mrs. Nelson Fitzgerald and they wore pretty white crepe aprons and caps trimmed with shirring of blush pink.

The groom's gift to the bride was an Aeropack, to the bridesmaid and pianist gold lockets and to the groomsman a gold initialled tie pin.

This was the second wedding to be held in Mount Pleasant United Church.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Don't Buy a "Dinky" Coffee Table

I cannot understand why a woman buys a small, high, "dinky" coffee table. Most women give a great deal of thought to a living-room sofa, insist on buying a large, roomy comfortable one. But when it comes to buying the coffee table that is to be put in front of the sofa, they are too apt to buy a small, fragile one quite out of proportion to the size and bulk of the sofa. I wonder why!

I have watched women buying coffee tables and have sadly observed that too often they will choose a small one because it is carved or "fancy" rather than spend the same amount of money for a generous-sized table with simple lines. I always wish that I knew them well enough to "speak up" and try to persuade them to choose the larger, simple table.

Coffee tables have such a variety of uses that it's a shame not to have them large enough to fulfil these uses with convenience and grace. About them goes a great deal of the "living" of the living-room. On them we serve tea and coffee (they are perfect for the serving of after-dinner coffee), and "refreshments" of a variety of of kinds. On them should be one or two cigarette boxes, generous-sized ash-trays. Probably there are books and magazines, and perhaps a low vase of flowers. So, to accommodate these many uses, obviously the table should be large and roomy.

In my judgment, an oblong coffee table is vastly more usable and convenient than a round one. While a round one may be convenient for servicing the middle of the sofa, the oblong one is convenient for people sitting at the ends of the sofa.

If your living room is of average size and if your sofa is even of average size (6 or 6 1-2 feet long) your coffee table can be as long as 4 feet or 4 1-2 feet or 5 feet, and as wide as 2 or 2 1-2 feet. Why scrimp on the length and width of this table, when every inch of its length and width will give you and your guests comfort and convenience?

Give serious thought to the height of your coffee table. It should be lower than the seat of the sofa, so that it will not give an awkward, "up high" appearance, and so that it will be more convenient for service.

The legs of a coffee table should be simple and sturdy . . . not fragile, not shaky, not "fancy".

Title for Doctor

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

To settle an argument, will you please tell me, if there is a doctor in the family, are the members of the family supposed to call him "Doctor" or by his first name? I think that he should be called John, but a friend thinks that he should be called "Doctor John". I am a brother of the doctor.

K.

Members of the family and close friends would call this doctor 'John', just as they would if he hadn't a title. Friends who do not know him well enough to call him by his first name, would call him Doctor Wells . . .not Doctor, and not Doctor John. It is poor form for us to address a doctor as "Doctor". . . we should use his last name with his title, just as we should use the last name with "Mr.".

Courtesy Tip

When a person takes a seat in the seat with you on a street-car or bus, don't like a lout, stolidly occupy more than your half of the seat. Move over and give the other passenger his or her rightful share of the seat.

Fashion flashes

Still walking around town is the pump with the open toe, although, of course, the open part is much smaller. A new model is in black suede with patent leather piped bow and thin patent leather platform sole.

Just right to set off colorful accessories is a slim coat of steel gray tweed with spiral bands of gray Persian. Coat tops a frock with wool crepe skirt and gray silk jersey top.

When the wind howls is the time to put on a top coat of duvetyne wool in chocolate brown made with a huge hood of sheared beaver and beehive shaped pockets at the hips, also of fur.

Always kind to the wearer whatever the current fashion may be is the black velvet suit A beauty has double buttons of rhinestone and jet all the way down the bodice of the jacket, which has a curved peplum. A neck ruff and cuff edges are of fine white lace and chiffon.

Breath taking is a dinner dress, high necked, long-sleeved, fashioned of white velvet worn with an enormous "big" necklace of gilt and huge cabochon stones.

Everyone is talking about the comeback of taupe as a leading color. A hat of taupe velvety-felt has a sweeping brim and a swirl and plume of taupe and white ostrich.

Treating Parents to 'Cure' Child of Nervousness

By Garry C. Myers, Ph. D.

The mother of an eight and one-half-year-old child writes:

"She is a very nervous child and has always chewed her nails. We tried ignoring this habit but lately I have tried to teach her to have pride in her nails. I told her that when her nails got real long I would put bright red polish on them. This idea seems to appeal to her, but during any excitement her fingers fly to her mouth.

"I spank her occasionally with a ruler on her bare bottom. This sounds cruel, but my hand alone makes no impression whatever. I also put her in a chair for 15 to 20 minutes when she disobeys me, but she almost drives me frantic asking if 'the clock says its time to get down.' Then she will sneak down but run back when she sees me looking at her.

"My husband is a school teacher and is rather flighty and nervous. In spite of this, he is a very good teacher and 'has a way' with the school children. It is only when he comes home tired and wants to read the paper for a few minutes that our little girl makes him nervous. She wants to sit on his lap, but when she gets there, climbs all over him and won't be still a minute. In fact, she very rarely is still. In the house or outside she runs continuously.

Must Touch

"I simply have not been able to teach her to look at other people's things without touching them. When we go visiting, she handles everything and usually I sit on the edge of my chair during the entire visit. If she and I go in a store, she will not let me hold her hand and yet, if I do not, she wanders all over the store and sometimes comes back with her arms loaded. I always take her back and make her return the articles, trying at the same time to explain why she should not do this."

My answer in part — Your first problem is with the parents. You Mother, need to relax more. Keep the radio off, except for soft music, while the child is awake.

Dad needs to get a new philosophy. Then he can learn, on coming home, to let the paper wait until he has had some time with the child. He should read rhymes and stories to her from illustrated books, expecting her not to jump around while he reads. If she does stir about, he could cease reading and refuse to entertain her further for exactly half an hour.

Argue Too Much

After he has read to her, say for thirty minutes, he could properly shift, without adequate warning, to reading the newspaper, and resume reading to the child after a definite announced time.

You explain and argue too much to that child. You warn and threaten and then, when you lose your temper, it is the ruler. Clearly give a forbidding just once. Punish her immediately for failure to cease promptly, assigning her to sit for exactly twenty minutes. If she leaves the chair before the clock rings, give her a good spanking. Allow not a single exception.

Until she has learned complete control at home, keep her from the store or other people's homes, or hold her all the time she is there. And show her more love and affection when she is good.

How Our Latin Neighbors Eat

By Alice Lynn Barry

Why not try recipes from our Latin American neighbors, starring their spicy delicacies on your menus, next time a party is in order?

Chile Con Carne, one of the most popular of Latin American dishes, is a delicacy which comes in cans these days. As a thirst quencher serve Mexican Cafe. Spice cake is another Latin American favorite that will add interest to a "good neighbor" menu. To add to the fun, prizes for the best rhumba or tango will help things along.

Mexican Cafe is made by folding one-eighth teaspoon cinnamon and one-eighth teaspoon nutmeg into whipped cream (one-half cup before whipping). Add in generous spoonfuls to six cups of fresh, hot coffee. It can be made the same way with decaffeinated coffee, if you have guests who prefer it.

Favorite Dessert

A favorite dessert in any Latin American country is as simple as this: Serve a generous portion of cream cheese for each guest, with a big dab of rich preserves on the plate beside it. Whole guavas, which you can buy in tins, or your own quince jelly, will be especially good. Guava jelly, currant jelly and apple butter are alternate sweets for this cheese goody. Want the Spanish name of the guava preserve? It's Cascas de Guyaba. Crisp saltines or toasted water biscuits are served with this dessert.

South Americans think that North Americans overlook ripe raw fruit when it comes to desserts. They think we "do" too many things with our fruits. Nothing is prettier than a bowlful of harvest treasures for dessert, each guest provided with a fruit plate and knife and a finger bowl for the onslaught. Pears, love apples, persimmons, pomegranates, grapes of beautiful variety in taste and color, plums — the list is almost endless.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Can Love Survive on Love Letters?

Have the automobile, the telephone, the telegraph, the radio so taken possession of us that a hand-written letter now seems too slow a way of making love?

Or is it true that there is no magic in the world like that of a simple sheet of paper on which a true lover has written to his love?

Real literature has come down to us in the shape of love letters; those of Robert Browning to his wife Elizabeth are outstanding. The gift of writing good love letters is not to be had for the asking. Something in the way of genuine talent is required to make love on paper. So perhaps it's just as well for the average girl and boy that a good deal of love-making is left to the telephone and the telegraph.

"Writing love letters is too slow for me" a young man writes, "I give her a buzz on the long distance telephone a couple of times a week and I send her a wire. We spend every week-end together. Of course, if there's anything important to write about, like the wall-paper she's picking out for our bungalow, I write her a letter, but otherwise I leave it to the phone and the telegraph."

Safe to say this young man's letters to his fiancee will never be cherished, or sold by succeeding generations for substantial sums, as were Keats' letters to Fannie Brawne, sold by the granddaughter of the man Fannie married after Keats' death.

This morning's mail brings a letter from a girl who asks if love can survive on letters. Or is the whole sentiment of pouring out one's heart a thoroughly outgrown idea of a bygone day? And were not these love-letters we cherish as classics, a delusion even in the age which produced them?

The war in Europe has sent this young college girl's fiance to Buenos Aires at almost twice the salary he was getting in the United States. He is 27 years of age, she is 24. Circumstances made it impossible for them to be married before he leaves for his new post.

He will not return for a year and she is wondering if writing will be a strong enough bond to hold them together. They have promised to write several times a week. She will study both Spanish and Portuguese in the meantime, so she will be better prepared to take up life in South America.

Her fiance hasn't the shadow of a doubt that true love will run smoothly in their case, and that they will be married when he returns a year from Thanksgiving Day. The girl hopes that all this may be true. But she is unhappy over the separation.

Supposing the old-fashioned love letter that will have to see them through is not a strong enough bond in their case—won't it be just as well that these young people make the discovery that they were not really meant for each other after all? If they really are in love, their loneliness and deep desire to share with each other their separate lives will wring from them something that is stirring, beautiful and real.

The greatest joy of each will be the arrival of those documents containing every variety of the statement "I love you". And the greatest happiness both can have will be the writing of those love journals, which are always more or less boiled down to that same delicious piece of news—I love you.

Keeping It Velvety Smooth

By Eleanor Ross

Velvet is tops, as usual, when it comes to smart winter togs. The well-rounded wardrobe includes velvet day and evening things, while a velvet evening wrap is virtually a necessity for the gadabout. Manufacturers have done yeoman work in creating weaves that are moisture and crush resistant. Nevertheless, velvet is a fabric that needs expert care. It is an exceedingly becoming fabric to most women, but only as long as it is free from dust and a crushed surface.

For a badly-creased surface, use a fairly warm iron to press, but never a hot one. Stand the iron up on end, place a damp cloth over it and, holding the frock in both hands, gently rub it backwards and forwards, being careful to keep the garment on the move, so that the iron doesn't get a chance to mark it at the edges. The object of having a damp cloth over the iron is to bring up the pile of the velvet quickly. If this is brushed well with a soft brush immediately afterward, the velvet should look like new again. Never place an iron on the velvet itself, as you would for other fabrics, as this would crush the pile, and only the back of the velvet should touch the cloth that covers the iron. Be sure that you brush velvet with the pile, not against it.

Cleaning Scarf

If you have a velvet scarf or velvet coat collars, they may become ribbed and shiny. This condition can be remedied easily by cleaning with a cloth dipped in ammonia, immediately after which the fabric must be held over a hot iron to raise the pile.

To remove a stain of fruit or cream from a black velvet frock, place an absorbent pad beneath the stain and dab with a soft muslin that has been wrung out of warm water until all stickiness is removed. Keep changing to clean pad and dabbing cloth as the staining matter comes through. Allow the fabric to dry completely. Then, using a clean pad and cloth, dab with one of the non-inflammable cleaning fluids to remove any trace of greasiness remaining.

If directions come with the velvet, they should be implicitly followed, since the manufacturers have spent much money in various laboratory tests under various conditions to insure the best treatment for their merchandise.

Hallowe'en Frolic by Y's Men One of the Best Given in Years

PARADE IS HELD

Hobgoblins, fairies as well as practically the entire cast of the Wizard of Oz, the ragged tramps and the black-faced coons all swelled the Auditorium of the Y. M. C. A. to make merry on the occasion of the annual Y's Men's Club Hallowe'en Frolic last night when over six hundred costumed kiddies and entertained adults swarmed the Association building on the occasion of the largest Y's Men's Hallowe'en Frolic since the practice was inaugurated as a civic club project, launched in an effort to minimize the conventional Hallowe'en pranks and mischievousness.

With the sound of martial music the youth of Belleville paraded behind a band through the streets of the downtown district before they adjourned to the gymnasium of the "Y," where a full two hour program of stunts and games, with prizes to the more proficient, was the order of the night. Prizes for the best dressed, most original and comic costumes proved a tedious task as the type of costume worn on Hallowe'en of 1939 was far superior in personal ideas and ingenuity than in previous frolics. President Harold Vaughan, of the Y's Men's Club, Secretary Joe Shortt, of the Y.M.C.A., master-of-ceremonies Newt Thompson and club members handled the riotous mass of pent-up youth in a masterful manner, assuring all of a glorious evening of fun, frivolity and hilariousness. Especially of note for fun-making were the marshmallow eating contest, the pie eating contest and a novel "Pat and Mike" contest, which proved nothing short of a pillow fight while blindfolded.

Contestants Given Sweets

Following the contests an selection of costume prizes every person present, including adult patrons, was given free a bag of candies and an apple by the Y's Men's Club. The club purchased four bushels of apples and one hundred pounds of mixed candy, while some fifteen boxes of chocolate bars were also distributed among the various contestants entered in the program. A short impromptu program of songs, dances and recitations given by the costumed children added to the joys of the night.

The judging results resulted as follows:—Best clown, Jack Lafferty, 301 1-2 Front St.; best tramp, Albert Aikens, 55 Gt. St. James Street; best coon, William Archer, 70 Lewis St.; best girl dressed as boy, Betty Reeves, 25 Brock St.; best boy as girl, Bob Ford and George Wonnacott; best original, Robert Howard, 101 Moira St.; best original girl, Amey Fry, 175 Front St. and Freda Vaughan, 60 Bridge St. (tied as Krazy Kat); best couple, Sherry and Beverly Lucy, 136 Victoria Ave.; specials, Mary Pepper, 71 Everett St., Georgina Mattis, 26 Catherine St. and Jack Wiskin, 329 1-2 Front St.

'NEW SITUATION

"The Soviet Union in a non-aggression pact in 1932 undertook to respect the frontiers fixed by the peace treaty of Dorpat (by which Russia recognized Finland's idnependence Oct. 14 1920), and arrange all differences between the countries by peaceful means.

"Finland relies on the U.S.S.R. respecting this agreement." The Uusi Suomi, first newspaper to comment, said the Russian argument that Leningrad was threatened by the nearness of Finnish soil was "queer and without foundation."

Not Threat to Leningrad

It said of the Russian demand for a strip of Finnish territory north of Leningrad, "the Finnish terirtory which is within the ancient historical national boundaries—boundaries whose inviolability the Russians have promised to honor—never has been and is not now in any way a threat to the safety of Leningrad.

"We understand, too, that the U.S.S.R. wants to assure the safety of its greatest port city (Leningrad), but it is just as natural that we cannot be a party to such an arrangement which ma[illegible] [illegible] jeopardizing our own safety and neutrality. That is the only que[illegible] which remain.

"The Finns are well informed on this, and we do not need any kind of outside influence for support of our stand. In this respect our nation has no alternative. Its stand is simple and plain."

AT THE BELLE

"Fifth Avenue Girl"

Pioneering a new type of screen comedy, RKO Radio stars Ginger Rogers in "Fifth Avenue Girl", an uproarious tale of sidewalk Cinderella who brings about a revolution among the members of a rich but unhappy New York family.

The picture revolves around the manifold activities of the Bordens in their Fifth Avenue home facing Central Park. The father, who has made millions with his pump-manufacturing company, suddenly realizes that his family thinks of him only as a one-man mint.

His wife is carrying on with a playboy, plan'sto go to Reno and get a divorce. His son neglects the business to play polo. His daughter travels with a dizzy crowd of nitwits, but is in love with the Borden's class-conscious chauffeur. And when, after a tough day at the office, Borden comes home hoping they will at least remember it is his birthday, he finds they have forgotten that too, and have gone elsewhere for the eve-

Despondent, he strolls into the park and encounters a jobless but cheerful working girl. He joins her, enjoys her colorful attitude on life, her scorn of the rich, and after a hectic evening of night-clubbing, takes her home with him as a guest. Her presence scandalizes the wife, amuses the daughter—but it centers the family attention on the father for the first time in years.

Accordingly, he secretly hires her to stay and help him put on an elaborate act, calculated to unite his disintegratin home. Under protest, she agrees—but the results are somewhat unexpected. She finds herself mixed up in the daughter's romance and as the object of the son's exasperation as well as interest, while the mother frantically tries every method to bring her husband to his senses.

The upshot of it is that the whole family has its respective troubles solved, although the process nearly makes a wreck out of the solver, and the picture takes its stand as one of the season's most sprightly offerings.

Miss Rogers is perfectly cast as the heroine of the hilarious story, and Walter Connolly heads the featured players as the pump-making father. James Ellison as the radical minded chauffeur, Tim Holt as the son, Kathryn Adams as the the son, Kathryn Adams as the daughter and Verree Teasdale as the mother have the other principal roles. Franklin Pangborn, Ferike Boros, Louis Calhern, Theodore Von Eltz and Cornelius Keefe also have important parts in the offering.

With its elaborate settings, which include the complete reproduction of a Fifth Avenue mansion from roof to basement, and a section of Central Park, the film has been made on a scale comparable with the importance of this, Miss Rogers' solo starring vehicle.

Ginger Rogers in "Fifth Avenue Girl", is nw on the Belle Theatre screen, in addition, "Metropolis 1939" is a special extra attraction and here is the thrilling, exciting, revealing story of the greatest show on earth—New York City. See how every 47 seconds a New York cop goes into action. See New York as its 19,000 cops view it—it's the big city that even New Yorkers don't see.

A star-studded musical comedy, "Hello Mama" and a clever and unusual film, News Reel, will be exhibited on the same program.

AT THE CAPITOL

"THE MYSTERY OF MR. WONG"

Boris Karloff has joined the ranks of proud parents. His first child was born while the actor was working in the final scenes of "The Son of Frankenstein," and when he came to Monogram to play James Lee Wong in "The Mystery of Mr. Wong," all the actor would talk abut was his little daughter.

It was a coincidence that Ralph Jonas, one of the prop men on this picture, had a baby born the same day as Karloff's daughter. As soon as the star discovered the fact, there was no keeping the two apart and a most every time off between scenes the actor and the prop man would be found sitting together, in deep conversation, bragging about their respective children.

"The Mystery of Mr. Wong" is the story of a trail of death left by a fatal jewel, the "Eye of the Daughter of the Moon", and tells how James Lee Wong solved two murders and sent the stone back to China, with its curse lifted. The film is showing next at the Capitol theatre.

Grant Withers, Dorothy Tree,

Outstanding in the cast are

"The Mystery of Mr. Wong", is the second in a series of films based on the adventures of the Chinese detective, famed fiction character created by Hugh Wiley.

The added feature attraction brings to the screen The Three Mesquiteers as the "Three Texas Steers."

FOUR HUNDRED ATTEND DANCE

Costume Parade at Stirling Much Enjoyed and Many Fine Imitations Seen

Stirling, Nov. 1 (Special)—Stirling enjoyed a rather peaceful Hallowe'en with the usual pranks being somewhat limited, according to Constable S. Eggleton. Here and there were reports of missing garden tools. Some youngsters took the trouble of rolling a half ton log from the premises of R. B. Duffin which required considerable effort. A group of pranksters removed a wagon from the farm of William Chambers but were seen in the act and Constable Sam Eggleton turned the joke on them by making them return it. The streets were littered with fireworks of every description and no serious damage was reported at midnight.

Much of the fun of the evening was enjoyed at the Stirling Community Service Building where about four hundred dancers enjoyed a lively masquerade dance sponsored by the Stirling Women's Institute. Jack Grant's orchestra provided excellent music and a long list of prizes was presented to the winners of various competitions. Guests were present from all parts of the district including Belleville, Trenton, Campbellford, Frankford, Madoc, Marmora, Springbrook, Tweed and Foxboro.

Early in the evening the children were asked to promenade before the judges and the following prizes awarded:

Boys under 13 years—Ray Cranston and Clinton Woodbeck, first and second respectively; girls under 13 years, Shirley Ingram and Grace Chisholm.

Many Adults In Costume.

In the adult division people of all ages searched their attics and old chests and trunks, gathered together the finest array of costumes seen in Stirling for some time and thoroughly enjoyed the display which afforded the judges a real task in selecting winners. Messrs. Clifford Hatton, Art Duncan, H. R. Tompkins and G. H. Luery acted as judges and the following list of winners were selected and presented with the prizes.

Best dressed lady, first, Miss Jean Farrell, second, Miss Irene Bronson; best dressed man, first, Donald Scott, second, J. L. Good; hard-time costume, Harry Francis, Frank McGrath; most original costume, Mrs. Jas. McC. Potts (Hungarian Gypsy), seconr, Miss Audrey Robinson (Japanese maid); best comic, Murney Hick (school boy), Thos. Cranston.

This event was considered the most successful of its kind held in Stirling for many years and the ladies serving of the program committee under the leadership of Mrs. Cranston, Mrs. West, Brs. Bronson, Mrs. Tulloch and others are to be congratulated for the fine manner in which it was presented.

Attempt Made to Encircle French Village on Northern Flank

Paris, Nov. 1 —(AP)— Military sources reported today that French troops had fought off a German force of 1,000 men attempting to encircle a French frontier village on the northern flank of the western front.

The Germans were said to have attacked yesterday in an area extending from west of Saarlouis to the Blies River Valley, east of Saarbrucken, but the identity of the threatened village was not disclosed, nor were casualties mentioned.

The French said they took six prisoners and were questioning them today in an effort to learn the significance of growing German infantry and artillery pressure.

The prisoners were reported taken west of Forbach in the Warndt Forest, where the French held small strategic posts on German soil so as to dominate Saarbruecken, industrial capital of the Saarland, with their heavy guns.

Heavy artillery was brought into play to support the German attacks, it was said, and French guns replied.

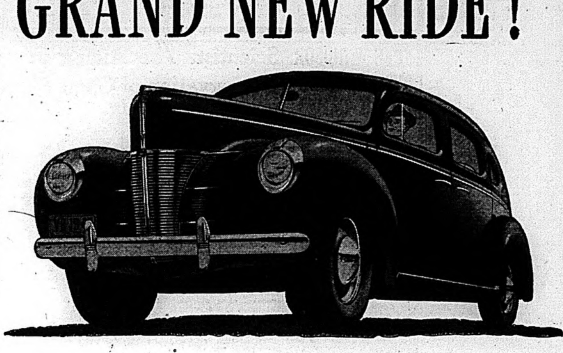
The Germans have been in position for a big offensive two weeks. Delay by the Germans had been attributed to bad weather and indecision over tactical questions.

Military sources said the French yesterday repeated Monday's success against German planes, bringing down three. Two were said to have been shot down within France, and the third fell behind German advance posts.

Today's General Staff communique cast little light on the western front operations. It merely said there had been "reduced activity during the night."

What are they saying about the new Fords?

"WHAT A GRAND NEW RIDE!"



North, East, West . . . telegrams and letters have been pouring in since the introduction of the big, roomy 1940 Ford cars. And through them all runs the same refrain: "Congratulations on the grand new ride. You've really got something there!"

Of course, there's praise for all the 22 Ford improvements—Finger-Tip Gearshift, Controlled Ventilation, Sealed-Beam Headlamps—and the rest. There's enthusiastic comment on increased roominess (four inches more usable inside length in Sedans). But the biggest news is the RIDE!

Cold words can't describe it. You can say that it's a combination of softer springs and improved shock absorbers—of a new torsion bar ride-stabilizer—of added room and increased quiet—of deep, soft "Floating Edge" Seat Cushions. But there's only one way to know how skilfully all those things have been blended into serene and soothing comfort. That's to feel it for yourself!

Borrow a new Ford V-8 from any Ford dealer. Let those eight s-m-o-o-t-h cylinders whisk you away from the boulevards into the backwoods. Turn the wheel over to some one else and ride the roughest roads in the rear seat.

There's an experience! You'll find yourself measuring comfort for the first time in terms of the noises you can't hear, the bumps you can't feel. It'll open your eyes—if it doesn't lull you to sleep! Try it today.

LINEUP OF WINGS AGAINST HAWKS IS ANNOUNCED

Jack Adams All Set for Opening of Season at Chicago Thursday

DEACON ABSENT

Don Grosso, Lake Shore Player, Out for Week With Wrist Injury

(By Robert K. Taylor Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Detroit, Nov. 1 (CP)—Manager Jack Adams today announced the list of Detroit players who will battle Blackhawks in Chicago tomorrow in the opening game of the N.H.L. season.

The team will consist of Tiny Thompson in goal, Capt. Ebbie Goodfellow and Scotty Bowman as one defence line, and Jim Orlando and Jack Stewart as the other. Ken Kilrea is centre for wingmen Cecil Dillon and Carl Liscombe.

Gus Giesebrech will pivot another line, Syd Howe and Mud Brunteau. Sid Abel will centre the third line. Eddie Wares and Jack Keating. Hex Kilrea will be utility man.

Major change from the lineup Adams expected to use is the absence of Don Deacon from the Wings roster. Deacon, in 40 league games last fall with Pittsburgh Hornets of the International American Hockey League scored a league record of 65 points. Adams said Deacon is out of condition and probably won't be ready for another N.H.L. trial until January. Deacon comes from Regina.

Missing too is another Saskatchewan boy expected earlier this year to make the grade. Adams said Alex Motter would play defence with the Wings' farm team, Indianapolis Capitols of the International American.

Grosso Out With Injury

Don Grosso, who jumped from the Lake Shore team in Northern Ontario amateur hockey to the Wings last season, will be out for awhile because of a wrist injury suffered more than a week ago. When he returns to service he'll play centre. Adams thinks he is a bit too slow for a wingman, and such a fine opportunist should be a centre.

Alvin (Buck) Jones, a hard-charging but unfinished defenceman from Owen Sound, Ont., will be replaced by Jimmy Orlando, a fiery Italian from Montreal who won honors as an all star defenceman with Springfield Indians of the International American League last season.

Carl Liscombe was ticketed for the Capitols this year, but sterling play and three goals during the exhibition tour won him the berth he has held for two previous seasons. Jack Stewart and Jack Keating also were headed for the minors, but their good showing plus the bad showing of their favored rivals tipped the scales.

Adams is not enthusiastic about his team. "We may end anywhere from fourth to the bottom, but I think we look better than we did last season at this time," Adams said.

THREE WINDSOR BOYS STARRING IN GRID GAMES

Border City Producing Streamlined Grid Stars Just Like Fine Automobiles

TURVILLE FIRST

Joe Krol With Western University from Windsor is Sparkplug of Team

Windsor, Ont. Nov. 1 — (CP)—Streamlined grid players, like automobiles, are becoming synonymous with Windsor. Joel Krol, Bernie Moroz, Jim Farmer—these are a few of the Windsor models currently starring in senior football.

They follow a trail blazoned by the great Frank Turville more than a decade ago. Like Turville they left Windsor high schools for cities where football is a major sport and today the border city boasts the greatest representation it ever had on the east's senior teams.

Turville left Windsor some twelve years ago to attend University of Western Ontario at London and later to play with Toronto Argos and Hamilton Tigers. He was the first Windsor boy to gain senior stardom.

Now a Hamilton lawyer, Turville was followed by Cliff (Fat) Parsons, Boley Jeffers, Ian Allison, Ken McKernan, Bill (Mickey) McMillan and Laurie (Matches) Mathieu. Of this group only Parsons of Sarnia Imperials and Mathieu of Montreal Westmounts are still active.

Windsor Boys on All Teams

As production was stepped up and the players became more numerous their fame spread until the top teams in all leagues have Windsor boys starring on their line-ups.

Krol, sparkplug of Western's undefeated Mustangs in the intercollegiate union, is being ably assisted by Alf Hurley and Bill Temkow in carrying the Windsor banner on the London team. Krol, playing his first year as a senior, is considered about the classiest half in the college group.

Jim Farmer, a Western graduate, is currently starring for Toronto Argos while Tony Golab is doing likewise for Ottawa Rough Riders. Both boys are brilliant backfielders.

For years Sarnia had a corner on the border city's grid outout which accounts for the Imperials having such a great representation of Windsor lads today. In addition to Moroz, leading scorer in the east and Fat Parsons, there is the elusive Mike Hedgewick, Trip Trepanier and Joe Woodcock.

Scientists Are Aiding in Conservation of Game Birds

By Central Press Canadian

Chicago, Nov. 1—When a hunter cautiously raises his gun and lets go at a flock of wild ducks or geese, and they all fly away, he is likely to suffer a few well-chosen words and assume that the birds all escaped harm. Yet some of them may die long afterward, victims of the shot that never touched them.

The hunter gains nothing from this, for you can't have duck dinner tonight or any night if the duck is going to die next week in a faraway marsh. The conservation authorities aren't happy over the situation. And if the ducks understood it, they wouldn't be so well pleased either.

Birds Digest Lead

Birdshot falls in the marshes where the waterfowl feed, and are swallowed along with their food. The result, as the lead pellets are slowly pulverized by the gravel in the bird's gizzard, is lead poisoning which soon proves fatal.

This situation, although unrecognized by laymen, has been studied by scientists for many years; in fact the U.S. bureau of biological survey showed as long as 20 years ago that six ordinary No. 6 shot always prove fatal to the duck or goose that inadvertently swallows them.

But it remained for Dr. R. L. Dowdell and Dr. R. G. Green of the University of Minnesota to do something about it. In a report to the American Society for Metals, convening in Chicago they reveal an extended research into the effect of shot made of various alloys.

The object was to develop a kind of shot that would be fully efficient if it scored a hit but which would not remain a menace if it fell into the marshes where wildlife feeds.

Dowdell and Green finally decided that alloys of lead and magnesium offered the necessary qualities, chief among which was quick disintegration of the shot after it comes in contact with moisture.

Their report accompanied by plentiful charts and X-ray pictures of shot of various sorts in the digestive tracts of ducks, shows that an alloy containing from one to two per cent, of magnesium can be made into shot of proper weight and ballistic properties for use in present types will crack on the surface and start to break up within 24 hours after they fall into water or onto wet grounds.

Considerable Work Involved

After many hundreds of experiments the University of Minnesota metallurgists have recently found a simple method for making drop shot in shot-towers and it is likely that by the fall shooting season in 1940 that "duck-alloy" will be used exclusively.

The significance of the Dowdell-Green report is this:

To the metallurgist it reveals a new use being developed for a magnesium alloy.

To the industrialist, it indicates the development of new machinery or new operating technique in shot making.

To the converationist it means a chance to save the lives of thousands of ducks, geese and other waterfowl every year.

And to the hunter, it offers the cheering assurance that the only ducks that will die from his shots are the ones he brings down and takes home with him. The rest will live to be shot at another day.

Training Camp Briefs

By the Canadian Press

Hallowe'en scare: Chicago Black Hawks nearly took it on the chin last night from the minor league St. Louis Flyers in an exhibition game at St. Louis. The Hawks went into the last period down 2-1 to the American Association team but managed to scrape through with two goals for a 3-2 victory. Their winning score came less than two minutes from the end.

Montreal Canadiens claim that the next move is up to Hector (Toe) Blake. The starry left winger, leading scorer in the National Hockey League last season, hasn't come to terms yet with the Flying Frenchmen. Manager Jules Dugal said last night that the club had made its final offer. Said Dugal: "I think we made Blake a very fine offer and if he wants to take the case to President Frank Calder then it is unlikely that he will get as much as the salary we have offered him."

The Flying Frenchmen must feel like bringing out the crying towels every time they think of Des Smith. The Canucks, badly in need of defencemen this season, lost Smith to Chicago on an option technicality after the 1938-39 season. Young and powerful, Des has been turning in good games with the Hawks and scored their first goal last night against the Flyers.

Toronto Maple Leafs have wound up their training schedule at St. Catharines, Ont., and are rarin' to go. The Leafs, who play Boston Bruins at Toronto on Nov. 4 in their season's opener, split into two squads for an exhibition game at St. Catharines last night. The "Blues" under Eddie Power defeated Coach Dick Irvin's "Whites" 3-2 with Murph Chamberlain bagging two goals for the losers.

Pudgy Jack Adams apparently made a smart move in picking up Cecil Dillon from the New York Rangers in the off-season. Dillon, long a prolific goal-getter with the Manhattan team, has continued his scoring with the Wings. Last night he paced the team to a 4-1 victory over Indianapolis Capitals of the American Association, figuring in every tally. Dillon scored two and aided in two.

Add Lex Chisholm of Toronto Maple Leafs to the list of pretty fair golfing hockeyists. Chisholm fired a seven over par 77 over the St. Catharines Golf Club links yesterday to win the 1939 club title. The N.H.L. boasts of two crack golfers in Ray Getliffe and Cy Wentworth, both with Canadiens, while a good many other boys shoot in the high 70's and low 80's.

TRACK IS HEAVY FOR SPECIAL RACE

Challedon, Leading Money-Winner of Year, is Favored in Pimlico Special

Baltimore, Nov. 1. — (AP)—The Pimlico Special, a horse race presenting three great thoroughbreds in a test of speed and stamina, lent the color of a United States championship contest to the opening of the Maryland Jockey Club's autumn meeting today.

All indications were that the track, soaked by a 24-hour rain, would be as gooey as tapioca pudding by the time W. L. Brann's Challedon, T. B. Martin's Cravat and O. S. Howard's Kayak II go to the post to decide the "race of the year."

The sturdy bay son of Challenger II and Laura Gal holds the world's record of 1.54 3-5 for the mile and three-sixteenths — the distance of the $10,000 winner-take-all, weight-for-age special.

S. R. "Sandy" Burrows, Eastern Ontario's sitting member on the executive of the O.H.A., recently was asked to co-operate with the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association in an effort to raise funds for the association through his office and throughout the Bay of Quinte area. For the younger folk Mr. Burrows asked us to point out that the aims and objects of the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association are many and varied. The S.P.A. was incorporated on January 25, 1917 and primarily to assist in supplying needs for the Canadian soldiers in the last war. The very first object of the S.P.A. is "to promote the welfare of men connected with or retired from the Canadian army or navy, including their wives, widows, children and other dependents". Older sport fans will recall the old pre-season S.P.A. hockey games of post-war days, well the idea in mind is to revive this organization for the benefit of our soldiers.

The Canadian Olympic Committee contributed $3,000.00 towards the S.P.A. campain. This money was deposited in a Toronto bank and three thousand individual one dollar cheques were drawn in the name of the S.P.A. and mailed to all parts of Ontario. "Sandy" Burrows' allotment was received through the mails yesterday and as the enclosed literature is self-explanatory it is hoped that Belleville's response will not be lacking. The idea is to return the enclosed cheque in the self-addressed and stamped envelope and also include an equal amount of the cheque or multiply it as many times as possible. Both the enclosed cheque and your donation should be returned. Remember, the entire proceeds raised by the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association will be given to the welfare of Canadian soldiers or their dependents. Sporting goods are included in the goods provided the soldiers by the S.P.A. How about a 100 per cent response from Belleville?

At the request of several ardent wrestling fans of this district there has been a slight change in the main bout of Friday night's professional wrestling card at the Hume Arena. Rudy Epps, the lithe and agile Yankee grappler from Columbus, O., will meet Dave Khoen, the Jewish lad from Detroit in the main bout. Both the promoters and the patrons feel that Epps will prove a better opponent for Khoen than would the lighter Pedro Valdez. Local wrestling fans have seen Epps in action and have placed their stamp of approval on him as a scientific wrestler, one who is exactly the same weight, height and build as Khoen. Frankly speaking exponents of the mat game feel an Ep[illegible] Khoen bout will prove to be interesting a bout as ever was staged in Belleville. There will be no change in the remaining two bouts on the card that see Young Griffiths meet a newcomer, "The Leopard" and Tiger Daniels and Chuck Thorne, Belleville, open the show.

In hopes of obtaining some new opposition before they launch into the senior C.O.S.S.A. interscholastic football hunt, Eddie Schrieder's group champion B.C.I. gridders cancelled today's game with Albert College in hopes of engaging Kingston opposition on Saturday. George Laughlin wrote to both the Queen's University juniors and the Kingston Collegiate suggesting an exhibition game here on Saturday, but received no reply at an early hour this morning. Actual games on the field are much better practice than scrimmages between the regulars and the alternates. The "collegians" will be idle for another two weeks at least and should engage in some kind of exhibition football during the period of idleness prior to the commencement of the C.O.S.S.A. playdowns. If the Limestone City kids are not available, a practice game with Albert College would be in order next week.

Great Lake Shipping Running at Peak

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 1 (CP)—Shipping men were here and in Detroit forecast today shipping records will be posted this season on the Great Lakes. Every hull that can get up the stream and safely float a cargo is in operation, reflecting the war-inspired business upsurge.

Iron ore carriers laid down more than 9,000,000 tons on lower lakes docks in October the best months since 1937 and topping September's record of 7,865,000 tons.

Upbound coal shipments for October topped 6,000,000 tons for the fourth consecutive month shattering previous records for a like period six million-ton months are rare. Four in succession haven't been heard of.

Oiltankers are at capacity, automobiles are moving in volume and limestone shipments continue at peak.

"It's been the best fall the boats have had in many a year," said Harry Brown, of the Great Lakes Transit Corp. "Despite four extra boats we have found it a problem to keep up with package freight and automobile schedules."

LEVEL-CROSSING CRASHES PROBED

Two Lives Lost and Injury Caused to Five Others

(By The Canadian Press)

Investigations went forward today into three level-crossing accidents in various parts of Ontario, which claimed two lives, and caused injuries to five other persons.

The most serious accident occurred near St. Thomas, when H. Spencer Cook, 64, of Corinth, Ont., died in hospital shortly after the automobile in which he was travelling alone crashed into a standing gondola car on a level crossing of the Michigan Central Railway last night.

Cook's car crashed the gondola car two minutes after a truck carrying three Windsor men struck it from the opposite side. The truck occupants, Richard Zakoor, and the Dafour brothers, Herbert and Gerrard, were seriously injured.

Thomas Pocock, 64 of Sarnia died in hospital last night an hour after a car in which he was riding crashed into a Canadian National Railways yard engine at a level-crossing at Point Edward.

Condition Not Serious

His companion, Thomas Guthrie, brother of W. A. Guthrie, Liberal member of the Ontario legislature for Lambton West was injured but hospital authorities said his condition was not serious.

When a truck loaded with livestock collided with a C.N.R. passenger train at a level-crossing in Allandale last night, 58-year-old Richard Vassey suffered a crushed chest, severe lacerations and internal injuries. Harry O. Fallis, 39, driver of the truck, escaped injury. Six pigs were killed.

Four other Windsor residents were injured when an automobile in which they were riding was sideswiped by a truck on No. 2 highway, a half mile west of Gobles, near Woodstock last night. Most seriously hurt was Mrs. Minnie Croll, 67-year-old mother of Mayor David Croll of Windsor. She suffered a fractured left arm. The others hurt were Samuel Schwartz, his wife and his son, Harry.

NURSE COMPLETES OPERATION AFTER DOCTOR COLLAPSES.

Buffalo, Okla., Nov. 1 (AP)—A 29-year-old nurse completed an appendectomy yesterday after the operating surgeon was stricken with apoplexy. Dr. E. F. Camp collapsed just as he had finished the major part of the surgery upon two-year-old Eddie Huenergardt. The child was suffering from a ruptured appendix and double pneumonia. Mrs. William Finely, attending nurse, stepped in and sewed up the incision.

Ready to Seek Relief In Cold Hibernation

Pryor, Okla., Nov. 1—(AP)— A 50-year-old man, a "hopeless" cancer case, is ready to seek relief in cold hibernation, undaunted by the death of a farm woman just three hours before she would have completed the nine-day treatment.

The woman's death yesterday was ascribed to a blocked gall bladder after an autopsy performed by Dr. E. A. Leach of Tulsa and Dr. V. D. Herrington. Dr. Herrington operates the hospital where the treatment was given.

"It's the only chance I've got and I'm ready to try it," said the man, a Sand Springs, Okla., resident.

New York, Nov. 1—(AP)— The World of Tomorrow was a $156,000,000 ghost town today.

A skeleton crew of workmen began boarding up the 1939 New York World's Fair, a deserted village of chromium and streamlined plaster which closed its first season in a dismal, rainy finale yesterday.

Paid attendance since the opening last April 30 totalled 25,811,733.

(The Fair's west coast rival, the San Francisco Golden Gate Exposition, closed last Sunday, uncertain whether to reopen in 1940. The Treasure Island show registered 10,496,203 paid admissions in its 254 days.)

Board Chairman Harvey Gibson said he was pleased with Fair's first year, although attendance was 23,000,000 below optimistic advance estimates.

Gibson disclosed the Fair has $1,128,924 cash on hand, but owes $587,035 to contractors and debenture holders, plus $23,982,808.81, which is the unretired balance of the $27,000,000 bond issue originally subscribed to by private investors.

Gibson said it would cost $10,700 a day to carry the Exposition through the winter until it reopens May 25 .

Three days after Great Britain declared war, Malcolm O. Smith, youngest son fo Mr. F. P. Smith, former Prince Edward County Public School Inspector, now of Kingston, boarded a White Pass plane at Dawson City, Yukon, and flew the "trail of '98" to Edmonton, thence to Picton, completing a three thousand six hundred mile journey to enlist with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

Better known to his many Picton friends as "Mac", Pte. Smith is attached to Headquarters Company. Leaving Picton for Kingston in 1927 he remained in that city for a short time before going to Atlin, B.C. In 1937 he journeyed to Dawson City where he was engaged in gold-dredging work on the Dominion River. When war was declared he gave up his work to come east and enlist in his home-town regiment.

$25,000 Reward

By PAUL MAURICE VEST

There was nothing peculiar about the envelope. A New York postmark. Her name and apartment address neatly typed. She supposed it was a bill. Idly her slender, brilliant-tipped fingers ripped open the flap and drew out a bulky, folded sheet of cheap newsprint paper. Curiously, she unfolded the thing and a puzzled frown puckered her forehead.

The words "$25,000 REWARD" were smeared in great black letters across the top of the page.

"$25,000 REWARD FOR INFORMATION LEADING TO THE CAPTURE, DEAD OR ALIVE, OF NICK GARSATTI, PUBLIC ENEMY..."

Her frown deepened as she noticed the pencilled scrawl.

"Don't he look like somebody you know?"

There was a resemblance — a striking resemblance! The same piercing, black eyes, the bold, full mouth, but it couldn't be. Very carefully she folded the paper so that no part of it was visible but the man's face and going to the dressing table she rang the bell.

"Does that look like anybody we know, Belle?" she asked casually.

The woman looked at the picture for a moment, then a wide smile beamed on her round face.

"Of course it do, honey. He sure was needin' a shave, but that's Mistah Bill all right. I'd know them eyes ever' time."

Thoughtfully, she watched her reflection as she combed out the shining mass of platinum blonde. Thirty-two—she wasn't as young as she used to be.

It was time she started to think about the future.

He had told her he was a broker . . . A broker!

A little sneer twisted her red lips. Still he wasn't such a bad sort, but a girl had to think of herself.

Twenty-five thousand was a real nest egg.

She heard Bill's voice as Belle opened the outer door.

She expected him to come bounding into her bedroom and catch her in his arms. He didn't; the bedroom door opened slowly.

She did not run to meet him, as she usually did, but sat where she was, her red lips puckering into a little pout.

"Well, aren't you glad to see me?" she queried petulantly.

He came over to her and patted her shoulder.

"You know I'm always glad to see you, baby."

His voice was troubled.

"Had some hard luck today. A bad break on the stock market. I'm afraid I'm about cleaned out...."

He went on:

"I'm afraid there won't be much money this month, baby. But maybe you could take a cheaper place for a little while until I get back on my feet...."

Her face was turned from him. When she finally looked up there was a serene smile on her face.

"Sure. Sure!" She agreed in a brittle voice. "You know I'll stand by you. We'll pull through."

He looked at her in wonder.

"You don't mean it, baby. .... You don't mean that you won't pull out on me . . ."

"Say, what do you take me for anyway?" she jeered in a silky voice.

He caught her in his arms and kissed her. His voice was a bit husky when he spoke.

She felt a little uncomfortable.

"Oh, forget it," she laughed. "You've treated me pretty square." She stroked his back, crisp hair.

"I'll tell you what!" she cried suddenly. "Let's forget the tough luck tonight and throw one more grand old celebration. I've got twenty bucks. We'll shoot the works at Perini's—what do you say?"

"Great girl!" He hugged her to him.

She smiled slyly at him, then started looking for something she could not seem to find.

"Darn it!" she exclaimed petulantly. "I thought I had some aspirins—be a honey and get me some while I get my glad rags together."

He whittled merrily as he left the apartment.

She stood tense until the outer door closed after him. In a moment her trembling hand reached for the phone.

"Get me the chief of police," she staccatoed into the mouthpiece. "and make it snappy...."

"Do you know, kid," he said softly, "I've never been crazy about a dame before in my life. But I am about you. You're all right."

Her laugh was a bit hysterical.

"You're pretty o.k. yourself," she managed to say, her eyes fascinated, on the hands of the little jeweled wristwatch he had given her. Two minutes to nine . . .

Four men in dark suits came in and took the table adjoining theirs. Bill looked at them dubiously for a moment, but said nothing.

He turned back to her.

"I'm not much good," he continued quietly. "But I haven't cared much before. You see there's never been anyone who really mattered."

He paused for a moment.

"Sure, there have been dames—lots of 'em—out for all they could get. You're different . . . Say, for a girl like you I could do almost anything!"

She dared not look at him.

She clutched a red hankerchief tightly in her hand. One minute to nine. The seconds ticked off .. .. fifty-eight, fifty-nine, sixty . . . Suddenly she stood up and raised the red hankerchief. The four men at the adjoining table jumped to their feet and rushed forward, their hands menacingly in their coat pockets.

"We've got you. Put 'em up!"

But Bill was on his feet, his hand at his hip pocket . . . Four shots split the air.

The place was in an uproar. Women screamed. Tables were overturned.

"We got him," one of the men said, kneeling beside the still body. "He's dead as a doornail."

No one noticed the girl in white satin. She stood grasping the table. Over one breast a dark red stain was spreading. One of the men saw her as she started to fall and caught her in his arms. He laid her carefully on the floor. Her great blue eyes stared up at him. She was gasping for breath.

"The $25,000!" she whispered huskily. "It's mine . . . every cent of it . . . Don't let anybody else—" She fell back unconscious.

The detective looked down at her, his hand on her pulse. His face was without expression.

"Yeah, it's yours baby. The whole twenty-five grand. I'll buy you a swell gold casket and all the trimmin's."

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper ma said to pop, Really, Willyum, I mean really, I dont know what the world is coming to.

You're one of a vast army, pop said, and ma said, Salesgirls used to be polite, as if they valued their jobs, but now they just talk back to you as though they didn't value anything. Really, I mean really, Willyum, there's a red headed girl in Hookbinders glove department, and I never did like her attitude, but today I could cheerfully of slapped her face till her freckles screamed, she said.

She didn't actually endanger your life, did she? pop said, and ma said, Well such a question, naturelly not.

Well wait till I tell you something thah happened to me today yee gods I cant even think of it without feeling cold drops gathering on my forehead and running down my back, pop said, and I said, G, pop, the same drops?

I didn't ask them pop said. Well my deer, I had a little business call to make on a chap named Sol. I dont know if that's his first or his last name, but it's the only name he goes by. He has black beedy eyes and a habit of always wanting to talk and never listen, but his sanity had never been questioned, as far as I knew, so this afternoon at his place when he invited me to sit down I excepted the invitation unsispectingly, and then zip, the next thing I knew Sol had tipped the chair over backwards and flung a gag over my face, and I thought I saw something flash like a big knife, pop said, and ma said, Why Willyum, that's gassly, that's impossible, such things dont really happen.

Sure they do ma, I said, I bet Sol's a barber, and that's why the chair went over backwards, and the thing was a hot towel, I said, and pop said, The boy guessed right.

Limited Supplies Lift Egg Prices

Keen demand immediately absorbed prevailing limited supplies of fresh receipts on the egg market. Fresh eggs were scarce in afternoon trading, and this was particularly noticeable on grade A large. Pullets were in good demand. Prices showed another advance on top grades of from one to two cents per dozen in all sections.

Prices clung to previous levels on the butter market, although trading continued stagnant. Dealers were not burdened with offerings as arrivals of fresh make remained on the light side and holders were still inclined to bide their time. Buyers took on the odd small lot, but generally there was no interest in offerings.

Hallowe'en Passes With Little Damage to City Property

Children, Also, Displayed Real Originality in Designing of Costumes

RESIDENTS 'PAY-UP'

Belleville awakened this morning to the aftermath of one of the most hilarious, but generally harmless Hallowe'en celebrations in a decade.

Although pranksters played a few tricks with attendant damage, principally to "stop-signs" belonging to the city, Chief Alex. Kidd stated this morning that a patrol of the city at one o'clock this morning revealed little deliberate mischief had been perpetrated.

"Generally speaking, the celebration was confined in the majority to wholesome fun," he said. "Some articles were removed or placed in out-of-the-way spots, but there was little other damage done than to city signs."

Damage to the stop-signs will amount to approximately twenty-five dollars, City Engineer Charles Mott stated this morning. "The damage was not done by children but by grown-ups as was evidenced in the fact that some of the signs were bent nearly double," he said.

Started at Seven

Sounds of holiday revelry started as early as seven o'clock as young Belleville descended upon a waiting city in a moving human avalanche of grotesque costumes. From street and laneway it poured in a steady stream of miscellaneous make-ups that ranged from the sublime to the ridiculous. From tiny tots as young as five years arrayed in garments, the majority of which were of their own creation and topped with the inevitable "funny face," to youths and maidens in their early teens, they raided the front doors, back doors and other places of entry and egress in search of customary "find" of candy and sweetmeats imposed by the heterogeneous army upon forewarned householders of the city.

They took charge of the city practically en masse. In all sections, in groups, duos and singly they went noisily but efficiently about the business at hand.

Works of Art

As to the credit of the children's creative ability it must be said that some of the costumes approached works of art in the realm of make-believe. The inevitable blackface of course proved the most popular, with worn-out derbies being a favorite style of headgear.

Small boys in girls dresses, little girls bravely swaggering in boy's clothing, Indians, cowboys, droll "Charlie Chaplins," in one case, a scarlet "Mephisto" complete with horns and tail, sailors, soldiers, the ubiquitous tramp, all combined to form a colorful army of youthful invaders, that had the time of their young lives.

And in fairness to the greater majority of city residents, it must be said that they played and paid ed suddenly to the tramp of youthful feet and doorbells jangled more or less harshly to the heavy insistent pressure of impatient fingers, doors suddenly opened, the nocturnal visitors were invited inside and the "ransoms" were paid.

Proof aplenty of this was seen around nine o'clock, when well-laden groups, deposited the spoils of the chase, that overflowed large bags, on the sidewalk, while fresh demands were made upon unsuspecting new "victims."

Nor was the masquerade [illegible] confined to the kiddies alone. Along Front Street, in stores and shops, in hotel lobbies and theatres figures representative of many characters paraded in typical Hallowe'en style. Originality was marked in many of the costumes while a rare piece of humor was seen as a moustached Hitler paraded arm-in-arm with a disreputable appearing "Rasputin."

Socially the evening was a grand success. Members of the Y's Men's Club played host to a colorful gathering as did members of the Officer's Mess of the 34th Battery. The "Y" frolic was a huge success, and several private parties report the most enjoyable time in years.

NAZIS PROFESS

Whether reports that a German patrol had penetrated French territory, being featured in the press today, was a hint of possible big scale activity on the western front was unconfirmed by military authorities.

The advices saying a German reconnaissance patrol entered two French villages were confusing, and military spokesmen minimized their significance.

The impression that Germany was preparing for some "positive" action was increased by Interior Minister Wilhelm Frick. In an address at Danzig last night, he observed that "England rejected the Fuehrer's hand extended in a gesture of peace and now other (Germany's enemies) shall have what they wanted."

Frick declared Germany has the world's finest army, and that "no power can snatch victory from the German people."

Meanwhile, to combat spies Germany announced restrictions [illegible] being imposed on communications with neutral countries. There was no indication as to what form the control might take.

39 Horses Escape From Corral, At Large 7½ Hours

Toronto, Nov. 1—(CP)—Toronto police, both civil and military, had a stampede on their hands last night when 39 horses escaped from Dr. Ballard's Animal Food Products coral. For nearly 7½ hours the animals ran amok, harrassed police officers had the job of rounding them up.

3-YEAR-OLD BOY DROWNED

Oshawa, Ont., Nov. 1—(CP)—Melville Keetch, three years old, drowned today in the swirling waters of Oshawa Creek, near his home. He had zeen playing alone when he fell in.

The child's mother, Mrs. Paul Keetch, searching for him, recovered the body from the creek. She waded into water three feet deep to bring him ashore.

The famous Sweet Caporal Girl

● Her charming face and figure have long been symbolic of the largest selling brand of cigarettes in Canada. The spectacular popularity of Sweet Caporals is due both to their quality and to the consistent newspaper advertising done for them over a period of 25 years — the early advertising is still remembered by many smokers.

Mr. Picobac

● Picobac Tobacco was introduced through the genial "Mr. Picobac", to sell high quality Canadian Burley tobacco to Canadian pipe smokers. This was accomplished almost entirely through newspaper advertising, and today Picobac is Canada's largest selling pipe tobacco.

The Two Old Chums

● Old Chum smoking tobacco, popularized by the famous "Old Chums", has for half a century held a steady place in the affections of Canadian pipe smokers, and this position has been consistently fortified by newspaper advertising.

Faces made Famous
by

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING

● One of Canada's oldest and largest users of newspaper advertising, Imperial Tobacco Company has found the employment of "trade characters" a very great aid in promoting the sale of these leading brands. This success in itself affords ample testimony to the effectiveness of Canada's daily newspapers as a medium for productive advertising.

Imperial Tobacco Company of Canada, Limited

The growth of Imperial Tobacco Company is the result of the adoption of progressive policies which are fundamental to success. These include (1) the making of high quality products, (2) pursuing broad-visioned and enlightened sales policies, (3) doing sincere and constructive advertising. Ever since its inception, Imperial Tobacco Company has advertised in the Canadian daily newspapers consistently and persistently. This, with its resulting volume of sales, is in itself the best possible evidence that daily newspaper space, properly utilized to promote worthy products, brings the desired results.

BUTTER SUPPLY SATISFACTORY

Prospective Supply Will Exceed Domestic Requirements by 13,000,000 Pounds

Ottawa, Nov. 1—(CP)—Canada's butter supply situation "is quite satisfactory," the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

On the basis of September to April factory output in 1938-39, the visible and prospective supply for the succeeding eight months would exceed domestic requirements by approximately 13,000,000 pounds, even if the demand remained the same, the Bureau stated.

In a report on the domestic dairy situation during the summer, June to August, the Bureau said butter in storage and transit at Sept. 1 totalled 55,384,786 pounds compared with 62,004,030 on the same date last year, a decrease of 6,620,294. Such a reduction, the Bureau said, does not represent a shortage because stocks at Sept. 1 last year were abnormally high.

"Regardless of the stock decline as compared with 1938, the supply situation is quite satisfactory," the report said.

Output of Cheddar cheese in the three months ended August amounted to 64,553,530 pounds compared with 63,175,964 in the same period last year. The increase in production was attributed in part to the unsatisfactory condition of the butter market, particularly in the early spring.

Likewise, the payment of a government bonus of one cent a pound for 93 score cheese and two cents for 94 and the financial assistance provided for amalgamating and enlarging factories, focussed factories.

DID MOLOTOFF HINT AT EMBARGO?

Presidential Secretary Questions 'Coincidence' in Criticism

Washington, Nov. 1 (AP) Stephen T. Early, a presidential secretary, questioned today it was "purely coincidence" that Premier Molotoff of Russia had criticized President Roosevelt at the time when an important vote was scheduled here in the House of Representatives on neutrality legislation.

Molotoff said in a speech to the Russian "Parliament" yesterday that President Roosevelt had mixed in Soviet-Finnish negotiations "in contradiction" of the United States' neutrality policy.

Early said he did not know whether the President had read Molotoff's remarks.

He asserted he himself had read them in the press, however, adding: "I wonder whether the remarks of yesterday were purely coincidental. The Russian negotiations with Finland had been carried on in utmost secrecy over a period of about three weeks, I believe.

Question of Timing

"The decision to speak yesterday and give the first revelations on the points being discussed between the representatives of Finland and Russia, whether by coincidence or not, seems to me to be worth considering as a question of timing".

(Mr. Roosevelt recently expressed to Russia his hope it would take no step in its negotiations with Finland which would upsets its peaceful relations with that nation.)

Early said the reading of Molotoff's remarks showed he had criticized the President for lending moral support to Finland.

"But it would appear," the White House secretary said, "that he had something else in mind, because almost in the concluding paragraph of his speech he raises the question of the neutrality embargo, which if you recall, was timed for an important vote in the House yesterday."

Early said it seemed to him that the Soviet Premier had the embargo in mind when he criticized the President.

GIRL MUST ENTER TRAINING HOME

Liverpool, Nov. 1—(CP Cable)—Jean Dobson, Irish Republican Army girl convicted with four men in a conspiracy to cause explosions, today was bound over for two years on condition she goes to a training home for six months.

The men were sentenced to prison terms ranging as high as 20 years. One of them, Vincent Crompton, 36, testified he had duped the girl into the I.R.A. and pleaded for leniency in her case.

FATALLY SEIZED WHILE BOWLING

Toronto, Nov. 1—(CP)—John P. Gardner, 76, Toronto, for thirty years a member of the city works department, died last night of a heart seizure suffered while bowling. Active supporter of the labor movement, he was an unsuccessful candidate for the Toronto Parkdale riding for the Ontario Legislature several years ago. Mr. Gardner retired from active work last year. Surviving are his widow and a daughter.

Schulenburg to Fly From Moscow to Berlin

Moscow, Nov. 1 — (AP)—It was learned reliably but unofficially today that the German Ambassador to Soviet Russia, Count Friedrich Werner Von Schulenburg, plans to fly to Berlin tomorrow for a conference which German ambassadors from other European capitals are expected to attend.

30-DAY TERM GIVEN J. WOODS

Man Was Found Guilty of Driving Automobile While Intoxicated

Picton, Ont., Nov. 1 (Special)—Finding John Woods, guilty of driving an automobile while intoxicated, Magistrate Shea sentenced him to thirty days in jail without option of fine, in police court here today.

The charge arose from an automobile accident on the Belleville-Picton highway last Saturday night when a car driven by Woods sideswiped one operated by one Harry Walmsley.

Held in custody since that date, Woods was arraigned this morning and formally pleaded not guilty to the charge. Testimony of several witnesses was heard and the bench found accused guilty of the charge on the evidence submitted.

A few days previous to the accident, it was disclosed in court, Woods had been found guilty of leaving the scene of an accident and had been fined $79.50. His driving licences had been suspended previous to that date for a breach of the Highways Traffic Act. The fine had not been paid, the court was told, with the result that sentence to jail without option was meted out by Magistrate Shea.

Walmsley, on the stand testified that he had been returning to Belleville on Saturday when the accident occurred.

Provincial Police Constable Everett Smith said he saw only Woods and one other soldier. The Woods car was fifty feet down the road from the Walmsley car and was in the ditch. "The accused staggered, and smelled strongly of liquor. He speech was very thick and he was in a very intoxicated condition."

An unopened bottle of cheap wine was found in the Woods car, he said. The tracks of the Walmsley car were on the right side of the highway but those of that driven by Woods were one third past the centre line of the highway. Woods had no driver's licence the officer testified.

The accused placed on the stand told the court the accident occurred on "a curve in the road", but H.T.O. Esvine recalled to the stand testified that it had happened on a section of the highway that was straight for two miles."

POCKET WARSHIPS

It would have been a comparatively simple thing, it was stated, for the Deutschland and the Admiral Scheer to steam north of Iceland—where there are only four hours of stormy daylight each day at this time of the year—skirt Norwegian territorial waters and reach a German port.

Neutrality of Eire's Coasts

Mr. Churchill also told the House the Government of Eire was "exclusively responsible" for the maintenance of the strict neutrality of its coasts and the prevention of their use by German submarines.

Sir William Davidson, Conservative, asked if the First Lord could assure the House adequate measures had been taken, together with the Eire authorities, to prevent U-boats from securing shelter and supplies in the bays and creeks of the Irish coast .

"As far as the territorial waters of Eire are concerned," Mr. Churchill replied, "the responsibility rests exclusively with the Government of that country. Outside those waters on the High Seas the Royal Navy is taking such measures as are open to it and I can assure the House that they are doing their best."

6 AIR SQUADRONS

(An earlier report which proved to be erroneous indicated that Prime Minister Menzies had announced Australia would not raise an expeditionary force for overseas service.)

Australia will send air personnel overseas immediately, however, to man nine Short-Sunderland flying boats on order for Australia and form an Australian general reconnaissance squadron for service in and about Great Britain.

Go Before End of Year.

It had been planned, under a scheme announced Sept. 20, to send personnel for six air squadrons for overseas service before the end of the year.

The new plan, Mr. Menzies said, was decided on after consultations with the British government.

Australians attached to the Royal Air Force are already manning three of the Short-Sunderland flying boats and the Commonwealth will send seventeen officers and 166 airmen to man the remaining six.

This will form the first Dominion air force unit on active service.

(Australia's three man air mission arrived in Canada today to attend the empire air training conferences at Ottawa.)

. 13 CATTLE ELECTROCUTED .

Halifax, Nov. 1 (CP)— Sections of the Maritime Provinces were raked today by a wind and rain storm and preliminary reports indicated damage was extensive. Trees were felled at Saint John and telephone service was disrupted.

Reconnaissance Plane Shot Down by British

With the British Expeditionary Force Somewhere in France, Nov. 1 (CP-Reuters)—Spotted immediately it appeared over a Royal Air Force secret airdrome behind the Maginot Line, a twin-engined reconnaissance plane was shot down yesterday by a lone British fighter which immediately took off in pursuit.

This is the first time that a British fighter has been in action on the western front. The German aircraft was making for home at top speed but its pursuer was on it like a shot. The engagement only lasted a matter of minutes. Shooting up from underneath, the fighter let the enemy plane have a full blast from its machine guns. It was a "straight kill". Riddled by a blast of 400 bullets, the German machine crashed to earth in French territory just 20 miles away from where it was first seen.

Its engine running at full throttle, it buried its nose in a crater nine feet deep. Its petrol tanks exploded with a tremendous report and a huge column o flame shot upward. Fragments of the fuselage were scattered over 200 square yards. The crew was blasted to bits.

Dr. Dafoe said the five sisters never have been in better trim.

First Windsor Casualty In the War Reported

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 1—(CP) — Mrs. Gertrude B. Cody said today she has received news of the death of her son, Pilot Officer James D. Cody, 23, in a Royal Air Force airplane accident yesterday. It constituted Windsor's first war casualty. The accident happened near Weston-on-the-Green, Oxon, England.

Cody was a star athlete when attending Walkerville Collegiate here. The Walkerville Collegiate basketball team on which he played in 1936 were Canadian Secondary School Champions. He captained the school's football team the same year.

He left Canada in October of 1937 to join the Air Force. He was to have been promoted today to be a flying officer. He was a son of the late Capt. P. B. Cody, who died 10 years ago after sailing the Great Lakes for 42 years.

His mother and a sister, Margaret, survive.

Ill in Prison is Report

"We heard of cases where arrest of a father was followed in a few days by notification that he was ill in prison or in a concentration camp, the locality of which was not specified," the letter said. "The report followed later that he had died. In due course a box purporting to contain his remains was brought to the house with a demand for five hundred marks 'for cremation expense.' No particulars as to the cause of death were forthcoming, nor was there any certainty as to the identity of the remains.

"In one case a widow who had undergone this terrible experience was arrested six months later on a charge of 'making propaganda with her husband's ashes.' She was released, we were told, later, and the witness added, 'one eye was gone.' "

40 in One Wagon

"When travelling in trucks or wagons, there were as many as thirty or forty in one wagon. On journeys which were taken from May to December, 1938, and which at different tmes varied in durat olno rf n mfoueetiottreenxstaoi tion from furteen to sixteen hours, they were given no water or food.

"Every one of these men had heard rifle shots or had seen men shot down. On one specific journey three men in one wagon were shot and their bodies thrown out of the windows because they complained of the heat. On this journey we are satisfied that at least seven men were murdered on the way."

According to testimony received by the ribunal, young and old upon arrival at concentration camps were beaten with sticks or prodded with bayonets by guards.

"One man was told by a guard to strike with his spade a friend who was formerly a judge and had sentenced two Nazis to death for criminal offences. The witness said he refused to do it. He was immediately bayonetted in the arm. Soon afterward the judge died in the camp."

DEMANDS RECALL U.S. AMBASSADOR FROM MOSCOW

Rep. McCormach Describes Russia and Germany as the "Anti-God Forces of World"

DEMOCRATS PLEASED

Washington, Nov. 1 (AP)—A demand that the United States recall its Ambassador to Russia because of Premier Molotoff's criticism of President Roosevelt was injected into the House neutrality debate today by Rep. McCormack (Dem., Massachusetts).

Describing Russia and Germany as "the anti-God forces of the world today", McCormack said he had read newspaper accounts of Molotoff's address to the Supreme Soviet yesterday in which President Roosevelt was criticized for "intervening" in Russia's negotiations with Finland and it was stated that the United States' moves to repeal its arms embargo would "intensify, aggravate and protract" the European war.

"For that statement made by the official representative of Soviet Russia," McCormack shouted, "the United States ought to recall its ambassador. That should be the answer of the United States to this attempt to influence American public opinion—this grave breach of international law."

(Laurence A. Steinhardt is United States Ambassador to Russia.)

Crowded Galleries.

Crowded galleries and most of the House membership heard McCormack's recall demand. It was received with scattered applause and promptly stirred up the hottest exchange of the House debate.

Representative Fish (Rep., New York) supporting the embargo, said McCormack's speech should have been made to those favoring recognition of Soviet Russia. He termed the remarks the "most war-like speech since we declared war back in 1917."

McCormack asserted under the present embargo law "we are lending practical aid to those forces that would destroy religion and impeding other forces not trying to destroy religion."

He said he hoped the day would come when Christian Poland "will again rise and her people are allowed to attend their church as their consciences dictate."

Not Vote of War.

"This is not a vote of war," McCormack declared. "This is a vote of common sense. The United States is a Christian nation and the American constitution recognizes the omnipotence of God. The war so far as the totalitarian nations is concerned is a war against religion as well as against countries themselves.

"I don't like England, but I have nothing but contempt for Hitlerism and Stalinism. As Americans we should put our country in a position of not helping the anti-God forces but of helping those who stand for Christianity and democracy."

Rep. Fish Replies.

Fish rose to assert:

"If we are to police and quarantine the world for religious motives we might as well have a vote today. No one wants to rid our country of Nazi, Communist and Fascist forces any more than I do, but it is none of our business what kind of religion they have and it is none of their business what kind of government we have."

World War Naval Hero.

A former world war naval hero, Rep. Izac (Dem., California), declared that unless the course of world events were changed the United States would be forced ultimately to spend between 50 and 75 per cent of the federal government's income on national defence.

Pleading for consideration of "the German people being led to the slaughter by a madman", Izac likened Adolf Hitler and his followers to a band of gangsters arming themselves to "prey on their peaceful neighbors."

Bitter Argument.

The Californian quickly got into an argument with Rep. Fish (Rep., New York), a leader of the embargo advocates, by asserting that Germany got "tremendous" quantities of scrap iron, oil and other commodities from the United States in the last six years with which to build up her war machine.

Fish read into the record figures from Secretary Hull to show that Germany bought only $78,000 worth of materials in the United States in the last eight or nine months, in contrast to $27,000,000 for Great Britain and $17,000,000 for France.

Democratic party leaders in the House, pleased with their initial show of strength, expressed confidence they had the votes to block arms embargo proposals and to win final approval of the administration's neutrality program by Saturday.

EMPIRE TRAINING FOR AIR FORCE IS DISCUSSED

Australian 4-Man Mission Arrives in Ottawa to Consider Problem

N. Z. DELEGATE

Ottawa, Nov. 1—(CP)—Canadian and British Government representatives greeted a four-man mission from Australia on their arrival here today to begin conferences for formation of a giant scheme of British Empire air training. Two representatives from New Zealand will arrive later, probably tomorrow.

J. V. Fairbairn, Australian Minister of Civil Aviation and a Royal Air Force veteran of the last war, headed the Australian party. With him were Wing Commander George Jones and Richard Elford, Mission Secretary, and Cedric Kelway, Australian Trade Commission at New York who will act as administrative advisor.

Defence Minister Rogers officially welcomed the newcomers. The Australian and New Zealand missions, together with the British and Canadian representatives, will plan details of an ambitious program of training the youth of the British Empire as Royal Air Force flyers.

Preliminary training will be carried out in the various Dominions, and the fledgling pilots will then proceed to advanced training in Canada.

Asked how many Australians would come to Canada for flight training and when they would start arriving, Mr. Fairbairn said that such details would be decided at the conference.

Picton Ont., Nov. 1 (Special) — "This man is a gambler. He has meen in the army here where he has operated several games of chance. He has been discharged as undesirable from the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and warned to stay away from this town," Crown Attorney Gordon Walmsley charged in police court here today - in asking Magistrate Shea for a remand until November 8th for Prosper Levine, arraigned on a charge of vagrancy.

The remand was granted until that date when evidence of Provincial Police Constable Wm. McBrien, unable to be present at today's hearing, will be available.

Discharged from the regiment a week ago Levine was taken to Belleville by Provincial Police, told to return to his home in Cornwall and instructed not to make an appearance in Picton again, the court was told. The accused stater, that "he had returned to collect some debts and to obtain monies, that he had deposited here."

Military authorities, however, received a tip that accused was making a reappearance yesterday (regimental pay day). He had been met at the railway station in Belleville, and warned not to come to Picton, it was disclosed. However, Levine put in an appearance and authorities picked him up.

Bail for $200 in bond or $100 cash was granted. Military authorities asked that he be requested to leave the county until the date of his appearance, but the bench demurred in that it would be better to have Levine kept here under careful watch.

Levine is the ex-soldier whom military authorities allege instituted gambling games in the ranks, and in whose possession were found 10 sets of "loaded dice."

New York, Nov. 1 — (AP)—"I could see German planes only fifteen yards overhead. They appeared to have gone, and I said: 'Thank God I am still alive,' and then the planes came back again. I saw three wagons of women and children blown to pieces."

Memories of the German invasion of Poland, "Not a war, but a murder, a slaughter" flooded back today to Halina Majewska, 25, of Chicago, who returned from the war zone in the S.S. President Roosevelt.

"On Sept. 1, I was visiting friends in Posen when three German planes dropped bombs in the street in front of their house," Miss Majewska said. "It was dreadful. Women and children started to scream. Old men fell on their knees and prayed. We went outside afterwards and started to dig a bomb-shelter and the bombers came over again, and we fled back to the cellar."

There's just one qualification—the girl he picks must be able to play the bagpipes.

The man is Brian MacGoey of (2612 Broadway) New York City. He wrote to gaelic-speaking Premier Angus L. Macdonald of Nova Scotia, expressing his wish to marry a girl who could play the pipes. "I feel sure there must be a girl somewhere in Nova Scotia or Canada who can play them", he sad.

Mr. MacGoey added that he had seen the girl's pipe band from Saskatoon, Sask., at the World's Fair, "and admired them very much". He wasn't able to meet any of them however, and a letter to the Pipe Major brought no reply.

"I trust you will consider my case as I have no other way of becoming acquainted with a girl piper," he concluded.

VON SCHUSCHNIGG LIVING IN CELL IN HOTEL CELLAR

Former Premier of Austria Determined to Withstand Nazi Pressure to End

ONLY DID DUTY

London, Nov. 1 (CP)—Kurt von Schuschnigg, former Chancellor of Austria, is living in a tiny cell in the cellars of the Hotel Metropole in Vienna and remains determined to resist Nazi pressure to the end, according to a story published by the London Daily Express today.

The newspaper said it got its information from a Dr. Vernon, former professor of history at Vienna University and described as the only visitor permitted to see von Schuschnigg, except for his wife, since he was imprisoned by German police nineteen months ago.

The former chancellor was quoted as having told Dr. Vernon:

"When Dollfuss was assassinated I did my duty proudly in the name of Austria. They will not change me."

(Engelbert Dollfuss, von Schuschnigg's predecessor as Austrian chancellor, was murdered in an abortive Nazi putsch in Vienna in 1934.)

Dr. Vernon left Vienna about a week after war began and reached London by way of Budapest and Rome.

He was quoted as saying the former chancellor is living in a cell 3.25 metres (10.66 feet) long by three metres (9.84 feet) wide.

"I saw von Schuschnigg only once," he said, "when he proclaimed that he had not changed. I know the Austrian people will believe him despite all Nazi propaganda. When Viennese speak his name they call him 'Schuschnigg the incorruptible'."

Defence Department 'Satisfied' With Work Done on Buildings

Ottawa, Nov. 1—(CP)— In the wake of a statement to the Board of control that there was "needless and wanton waste" in alterations to buildings used by the militia at Lansdowne Park the Defence department today said it was "satisfied" the work "had been done with all possible care and with meticulous regard to the public interest".

The matter was brought before the Board of Control last night by Controller E. A. Bourque who said decorations, electrical fixtures and equipment were "torn down carelessly and ruthlessly and the way the work was performed was nothing short of destruction."

The Department's statement said that when the buildings were turned over to the militia "it was clearly understood the buildings would be returned to the city in the same condition they were taken over. To this end a careful inventory was made . . . .before any alterations whatsoever were undertaken.

"It has been the object of all concerned to complete the conversion of the buildings for military purposes with a minimum damage. There has been no structural damage to any building in the grounds."

German Artillery Continues to Pound Town of Forbach

Believed to Have Been the Place Mentioned by French in Previous Dispatch. No Damage Reported

"WAITING WAR"

Commentators Believe German Attacks Just Feelers to Show Hitler War Cannot be Carried on in Winter

Paris, Nov. 2 (AP)—German heavy artillery is continuing its pounding of French positions on the Western Front, military reports said today, disclosing that the town of Forbach was shelled yesterday.

Forbach, two miles inside the French frontier on the eastern edge of the Warndt Forest, was believed to be the town mentioned by the French as having been attacked unsuccessfully Tuesday by a German raiding force of 1,000 men. French dispatches said damage to the town was minor.

German artillery also directed its fire against French positions on the left bank of the Blies River, near Saareguemines. There were a few encounters of small infantry detachments.

Daladier and Gamelin Confer.

Premier Daladier conferred with General Gamelin to review the war situation.

Despite the artillery activity, the War Ministry noted a general lull in operations on the Western Front and military commentators predicted a winter-long "waiting war".

Magistrate Allows The "Bronx Cheer"

New York, Nov. 2 (AP)—A Bronx cheer — otherwise known as "the raspberry"—is a perfectly legal weapon to use against persons who sit behind you in a theatre and tell their neighbors what's going to happen next.

Magistrate John Masterson so ruled in the case of Bernard Fisher, 30, against whom Mrs. Laura White had made a complaint.

Fisher testified Mrs. White had persisted in telling a companion what would happen next in "Mutiny On the Bounty", which she had seen three times before. He said she did not heed any of his requests for silence. Finally, he added, he gave her a Bronx cheer and stalked out.

The magistrate held that the cheer was justified.

THE WEATHER

Why The Weather?

Balloons! The Montgolfier brothers of France, observing the suspended clouds in the sky, thought they could make a balloon by inclosing some of the same vapor in a large, light bag. This they finally did in 1782 using smoke and hot air for the vapor. Others soon tried the experiment, either sending up the balloon unloaded or tying on animals or birds. In 1783 a man Rozier, made an ascent in a free balloon. Improvements followed quickly, and within a year after its invention all the principal aeronautical appliances now used were applied to balloon navigation. Dr. Black as early as 1766, demonstrated that hydrogen, lightest gas known then and now, could be used for inflation. Ballast was carried and valves for letting out gas were introduced within a year after invention of the balloon.

STRATEGIC AREAS IN NETHERLANDS NOW PROTECTED

Eight of Eleven Provinces Under Martial Law by Royal Decree

TO CURB ESPIONAGE

The Hague, Nov. 2 —(AP) — Strategic areas in eight of The Netherlands' 11 provinces today were under martial law, established by Royal Decree to improve military defences and curb espionage.

The decree empowered military authorities to suspend all civil functions, but officials said such action would be taken only in an emergency.

Affected were approximately 500 small towns and villages, situated mostly along the German frontier, the northern and western seacoast and regions which would be inundated were The Netherlands invaded.

A small section of the centrally located province of Utrecht, which is in the martial law area, already has been flooded to test out the water defence line.

Provinces affected in part by the Royal Decree were Limburg, North Holland, South Holland, Zeeland, North Brabant, Gelderland and Friesland.

The strategic Island of Ameland, off the north coast, also was named in the proclamation.

Authoritative quarters emphasized that the action was purely precautionary and not the result of any outside threats against The Netherlands' neutrality.

Martial law was invoked in parts of the country during the first days of the last war, but the present decree covers a greater area.

Picton, Nov. 2nd. (Special)—While testing a new lamp on the front of his bicycle, 40-year-old George Stevenson, was instantly killed within sight of his Waupoos home, six miles south of here, when the bicycle he was riding collided with a motor car driven by Edward Richards, a neighbour. Stevenson's son watched the fatal accident. An inquest will be held. Crown Attorney Gordon Wansley of this county announced today.

Stevenson had attached a new lantern to the front of his bicycle and rode off down the road to test the efficiency of the lamp, as his son watched. After travelling less than a mile, the cyclist apparently decided to turn around and return home, but is believed to have failed to see a motor car behind him.

As the cyclist turned directly into the path of the motor car he was hurled over the top of the moving vehicle by the force of the impact and died instantly. Richards escaped uninjured but the front of his car was damaged as a result of the impact.

AIR SCHEME OF BRITISH EMPIRE BENEFITS CANADA

Dominion Will be Placed in Forefront of Air Powers by Move

25,000 PILOTS A YEAR

Estimated Anywhere from $100,000,000 to $700,000,000 Will be Spent in Canada

(By Wallace Ward, Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Ottawa, Nov. 2—(CP)—The war has given Canadian aviation a momentum likely to carry this Dominion into the forefront of the air powers long after the echo of the last cannon has died away.

So far there has been more ambitious planning for the future than actual expansion, but the ambitious plans have awakened a lively interest in Canadian flying. The project to give advanced flying instruction to air force recruits from all over the British Empire on Canadian flying fields has caught popular imagination.

Just how many airports, airplanes and instructors will be needed to train some 25,000 pilots a year in this country remains conjecture due to the lack of official information, but with airplanes costing from $5,000 for a light trainer to $250,000 for a heavy bomber, it has been estimated that anywhere from $100,000,000 to $700,000,000 may be spent on empire aviation in Canada in the next few years.

The empire air training project will be developed here by missions from the British and Dominions' Governments. Pilots will receive preliminary instruction in their own countries and come to Canada for advanced instruction.

BRITISH VESSEL COULMORE SAFE

Search for Freighter Suspended When Canadian Radio Station Receives Word

Washington, Nov. 2 (AP) — The United States Coast Guard received word today that the British freighter Coulmore was safe.

The word was received by Coast Guard cutter Bibb from a Canadian radio station at Camperdown, N.S., at 2:30 a.m. E.S.T. The station said it had heard directly from the Coulmore that she was safe.

The search for the vessel was suspended.

The Bibb was the leader of a squadron of Coast Guard and navy vessels scouring the Atlantic for the freighter about 680 miles from New York after the interception early yesterday morning of a distress signal which indicated the freighter might have been attacked by a submarine.

The position given by the Coulmore at that time indicated it was just inside the neutrality safety belt around the Americas fixed at the recent Pan American neutrality meeting in Panama.

The Bibb relayed the Camperdown information to Washington at about 9:30 a.m., saying that the information "justified closing the search".

The Bibb also heard from Camperdown that, for some unexplained reason, the Coulmore appeared able to send messages to Camperdown, but could not receive messages from Canada.

New Synthetic Hormone Gives Relief To Patients With Addison's Disease

Chicago, Nov. 2—(AP) — Evidence was reported today that a new synthetic hormone causes remarkable improvement in persons having Addison's disease, a glanular disorder usually fatal.

Four New York physicians announced in the Journay of the American Medical Association that "clinically there is unequivocal improvement far greater than has resulter from any therapy hitherto advocated."

Treatments used previously, they said, have been "only moderately satisfactory at best."

The disease, named after an English physician, results in prostration, anemia and digestive disturbances and reduces the body's metabolism or assimilation, of salt and water. It causes a brownish discoloration of the skin, due to decreased production of internal secretion of the adrenal gland located above the kidney.

Hope of finding an effective treatment for the adrenal insufficiensy was aroused when research workers isolated crystalline substances from the adrenal gland and then, about two years ago, made the synthetic product. It has the chemical name of "Esters of Desoxycorticosterone."

The report, by Doctors Joseph Ferrebee, Charles Ragan, Dana W. Atchley and Robert Loeb, gave strong confirmaton of a few previous observations that the new hormones relieve the disease.

Many German Prisoners Blame Hitler for the War

By PEIRRE LA MAZIERE
(Havas Staff Writer).

With the French Forces in the Maginot Line, Nov. 2 (CP-Havas)—This correspondent has just retuarned from talking with German war prisoners lodged in a camp established in the outskirts of a large Lorraine town.

It is a clearing camp to which officers and soldiers are brought after being subjected to preliminary questioning in the front lines with a view to obtaining possible tactical information of immediate value.

When the men are brought to the behind-the-lines place of interment they undergo exhaustive grilling on a wide range of topics. In this way French experts obtain a sample of opinion and morale within the German ranks.

Most of the prisoners in the camp visited by the writer are fliers, to be distinguished from ordinary soldiers only by the fact that their helmets bear above the chin-strap a special emblem—a winged wheel surmounted by the Nazi Swastika. All wear the regular field-gray uniforms of the Reich forces.

It is difficult to obtain any information of military worth from them. On political subjects, however, they are more loquacious. Some are strongly anti-Nazi and blame Adolf Hitler for the war. Others—both party members and non-party men—are staunchly loyal to the Fuehrer and his regime.

A French officer who guided the correspondent through the camp said, 'their morale is quite high, it must be admitted. They fought—those, at least, who knew they were at war, for many of them didn't know it—to carry out their orders to the dot, and no more."

M. MACDONALD ACQUITTED ON MURDER CHARGE

HIS SECOND TRIAL

Toronto, Nov. 2—(CP)— Donald (Mickey) MacDonald, in the shadow of the gallows since May 20, will emerge a free man when he has served the remaining 15 months of a two-year sentence in Kingston Penitentiary.

A jury which deliberated 8 1-2 hours acquitted the 31-year-old MacDonald last night at his second trial on a charge of murdering James Windsor, Toronto bookmaker, Jan. 6. The verdict set aside a conviction returned by a jury after deliberating 22 minutes in May, when MacDonald was sentenced to be hanged July 20.

MacDonald received the decision stolidly and was returned to jail preparatory to being taken to Kingston, where he will complete a term for the "shakedown" robbery of James C. Elder.

Jury Returns Once

The jury returned to the courtroom once during its consideration of the case to ask Mr. Justice J.C. Makins for his definition of a "reasonable doubt", which would provide for acquittal. An hour later the jurors were back and MacDonald's face glowed and his head dropped as the verdict was announced. His counsel, Frank Regan, shook his hand warmly.

"The verdict of the jury is that you are not guilty," Mr. Justice Makins said. "It very well might have been otherwise. In fact, I am of the opinion that it ought to have been otherwise. You have escaped by a hairbreadth from the severest penalty the law allows."

Granted Retrial

MacDonald was granted a retrial by the Ontario Appeal Court. Chief Justice R. S. Roberston ruled at that time the original trial had been unfair in that evidence had been introduced in an attempt to prove MacDonald an habitual criminal.

MacDonald's wife heard the news while she combed her hair in a press room near the courtroom.

A sister of MacDonald telephoned word to their parents, who only an hour later were to learn that another son, 19-year-old Alex, had been convicted at Brampton and sentenced to 10 years in penitentiary for the robbery of a Port Credit bank, in which a teller was shot and wounded.

PROVINCIAL GOV'T NOT TO PROSECUTE CHURCH PACIFISTS

MEETING HELD

Toronto, Nov. 2 (CP) — The 75 ministers of the United Church of Canada who were issued a pacifist manifesto two weeks ago will not be prosecuted although Attorney-General Gordon Conant still thinks the statement "particularly dangerous" when Canada is at war.

The attorney-general made his decision known to a meeting of the sub-executive of the church in his Queen's Park office yesterday when he also informed the church leaders he had been told that the statement was drafted by a member of the Fellowship of Reconciliation—"a Radical Pacifist organization", he said.

"A reliable authority in such matters affirms that this organization is a radical pacifist organization using the cloak of religion to spread Communist propaganda and its head office is on Broadway in New York," Mr. Conant said.

(An organization listed as the Fellowship of Reconciliation is located at 2929 Broadway, New York City.)

Mr. Conant said he had referred the pacifist statement to the Department of Justice at Ottawa for an opinion as to whether it warranted prosecution under the Defence of Canada Act as prejudicial to recruiting.

W. S. Edwards, Federal Deputy Minister of Justice had doubted that the statement would affect recruiting in the slightest degree, Mr. Conant said. However, he himself was confident public opinion and the governing body of the United Church would render a sufficient verdict and provide an effective remedy.

Mr. Edwards' opinion differed from that of Clifford Magone, Provincial Departmental Solicitor, the Attorney-General said. Ordinarily the matter would then be referred to court for a ruling but when the country is at war a "larger view" would be taken, he added.

More Comfort for Soldiers

Montreal, Nov. 2—(CP)— The Quebec branch of the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire believes it has the answer to the problem of cold weather headgear for soldiers. It is the "Quebec knitted helmet" and is claimed to be a decided improvement on the Balaclava hat of the last war. It covers all the head except the face, and reaches below the neck-line.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Increased alarm in Finland and other Scandinavian countries and increased irritation in the United States are two of the most notable consequences of the speech delivered Tuesday by the Russian Premier and Foreign Commissar, Vyacheslaff Molotoff.

Actually the speech made little change in Russia's position in relation to the war as it has been generally understood. In both German and Allied circles commentators appear to take satisfaction in the fact that the speech contained no encouragement for the other side.

But for Finland the public announcement of Russian demands for territorial concessions carries a definite suggestion of a threat. The Finns have taken extensive defensive precautions and show every sign of preparing to resist a Russian invasion.

Coming on the heels of Russia's part in the still unsettled City of Flint incident Molotoff's questioning of President Roosevelt's mo-

PREMIER HEPBURN ENDS OPPOSITION TO DEEP WATERWAY

Negotiations Between Dominion and U.S. Likely to be Resumed

$500,000,000 OUTLAY

Scheme Will Provide 1,000,000 Horsepower of Electrical Energy for Ontario

Toronto, Nov. 2 (CP)—The vast St. Lawrence waterways scheme which involves an outlay of about $500,000,000 moved a step forward today with Premier Hepburn's blessing. An important by-product of the seaway project is its provision of some 1,000,000 horsepower of electrical energy for Ontario.

Yesterday Mr. Hepburn announced formally the end of his once implacable opposition to the completion of the deep waterway which he said would require from six to seven years. This is believed here to pave the way for resumed negotiations between Dominion government authorities and Washington on the scheme which was submitted to Canada last year by the United States.

(At Ottawa Prime Minister Mackenzie King said last night discussions had been in progress for the past month between the Dominion and Ontario governments. These date from the visit of Mr. Hepburn to Ottawa for a wartime conference with federal authorities.

("At that time," Mr. Mackenzie King said, "because of the probable need for increased power resources in the near future, Mr. Hepburn intimated his willingness to reach an agreement on the project. We have been discussing the matter ever since.")

GUNMAN ROBS BANK OF $1,400

Bank Employees Lose Sight of Robber as He Leaves Building

Toronto, Nov. 2 (CP)—A man wearing overalls and a cap pointed a large revolver at the teller of a branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce here today and made off with $1,400.

The gunman first pushed a note written on the back of a cigarette carton into the teller's cage. The note demanded all the money in the cage.

Bank employees lost sight of the robber after he ran outside the building at St. Clair and Arlington Avenues, in the northwest section of the city. Persons on the street, however, saw a ma nanswering his description get into a dark grey roadster of about 1930 model and drive west.

The note handed to the teller said:

"Hand me your money if you care to save your life, and don't step the alarm on me or I will give it to you before you can think of it. I am tired of life."

HALLOWE'EN PRANK BELIEVED CAUSE OF DEATH

Kelowna, B.C., Nov. 2 (CP) — A Hallowe'en prank was blamed today for the death of Angus McMillan, 46, of Vancouver whose body was found Wednesday morning in an automobile with the engine still running. British Columbia police said his death apparently was caused by carbon monoxide poisoning due to an apple which had been stuck in the exhaust pipe.

King, Queen Have Luxurious Room Below Palace for Air Raid Shelter

London, Nov. 2—(CP) — If the King and Queen have to take cover in an air raid they will walk into a luxurious room, twenty-five feet below Buckingham Palace.

They can sit in deep armchairs, listen to a powerful radio set, read their favorite books, or work at their desks, or eat meals brought to them from equally well protected adjacent rooms in which the staff will shelter.

Originally the shelter was one of several workshops along a long stone-lined corridor which runs the length of the palace. The rooms were reinforced and the royal shelter decorated in blue under the Queen's supervision. Air Raids Precautions officials said it was proof against anything but a direct hit. Palace air raid warnings will be given by a system of bells ringing simultaneously through the great building. Each department in the palace has its own A.R.P. warden.

No elevator will operate after an air raid warning has been received, as palace authorities conformed to the rule governing all big buildings in London—a rule that all must use staircases after raid warnings, in case power failure catches the elevators between floors.

B. E. F. Strengthens Defences on Front Says Chamberlain

Carries on Fight To Liberate Reich From Nazi Power

London, Nov. 2 (CP)—The "German Freedom Station" has broadcast a pledge in the name of Adolf Hitler's victims in Germany that the fight for the liberation of the Reich from the Nazi party would continue.

The message, broadcast yesterday, was in the form of an All Saints' Day memorial tribute to the memory of the victims of the Nazi government.

"We take this solemn oath to the fighters for freedom in all parts of Germany who have been slaughtered by Hitler," the broadcast said, "that we shall not rest until they are avenged.

"The day shall come when a real people's tribunal will meet to try all the culprits. We shall be unsparing but just. Lists of judges who as public prosecutors allowed themselves to be misused by Hitler have already been compiled.

"We cannot honor the dead better than by devoting our lives to the overthrow of the Nazi regime."

Lord Nuffield Given High Aviation Post

London, Nov. 2 (CP) — Lord Nuffield, millionaire philanthropist and automobile manufacturer, has been appointed Director General of Maintenance in the British Air Ministry, it was announced last night.

His job will be to exercise a "general supervision" over the services of the Royal Air Force with a view to their co-ordination with the repair service. He will serve without pay.

NEW BRUNSWICK'S CAMPAIGN OPENS

Premier Dysart and Opposition Leader Squires Speak Over Radio

Saint John, N.B., Nov. 2—(CP)—With voting 18 days away, New Brunswick's provincial campaign swung into full stride today, after Liberal Premier A. A. Dysart, and Conservative Leader F. C. Squires had made their first radio appeals.

Speaking over a chain of private New Brunswick stations last night, Premier Dysart said that he had called the election for Nov. 20 so that the province could better serve the Empire "in this hour of crisis." He said that an election would become essential by next spring, as the present administration's term would be completed by then, but that it was better to get the election finished now.

"Then," he added, "having had the election, let us forget politics and throw ourselves into a united effort in which there will be no peace for party differences."

Conservative Leader Squires also called for full cooperation with "the Dominion and Empire governments" but charged that the Premier had referred to loyalty at this time "because he would like to avail himself of the people's preoccupation to divert their minds from the chief issue of this campaign."

He said the chief issue was "the extravagant, wasteful, reckless, dictatorial conduct of the government from the very day it came into power."

Prime Minister Expresses Confidence in Ability to Overcome Sub Menace in Weekly Report to Parliament

SPEECH STUDIED

Molotoff's Speech Not Disturbing—Co-operation of Dominions With Great Britain Also Expressed by Labor Leader

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 2 (CP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons today that conferences in London of Dominion cabinet ministers are a "striking demonstration of the united determination of the empire".

In his weekly war report, the prime minister dismissed the speech of Soviet Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff by saying it "occasioned some disappointment" in Berlin and refusing "to disturb myself over flights of fancy in which M. Molotoff indulged when describing the aims of the allies".

(The Russian premier Tuesday accused the allies of fighting Germany primarily to protect their colonial empires, and declared the restoration of Poland could not be considered. He dwelt at length on the friendly relations with Germany, but made no mention of any aid other than economic and political to Berlin.)

10 YEARS APIECE FOR BANK ROBBERS

Alex MacDonald and Leo Gauthier Sentenced at Brampton

Brampton, Ont., Nov. 2—(CP)—Mr. Justice J. G. Kelly sentenced Alex MacDonald and Leo Gauthier to 10 years in Kingston penitentiary following their conviction early today of charges of armed robbery of a bank and shooting with intent to maim a bank employee.

A few moments after receiving word from Toronto that MacDonald's brother, Mickey, had been acquitted of a charge of murdering James Windsor, Toronto bookmaker, MacDonald and Gauthier received the jury's verdict. Their conviction seemed to stun them.

When Mr. Justice Kelly imposed sentence Gauthier blurted out a back the words. Startled, Mr. Jus- back the words. Startled, Mr. Justice Kelly answered an abrupt "no."

John Shea, jointly charged with MacDonald and Gauthier with having robbed the Port Credit branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce last Dec. 9, turned King's evidence early in the trial this week and testified against them

Ray Bryant, accountant at the bank branch, was shot in the shoulder during the robbery in which $2,700 was stolen.

Supt. Canadian Press Bureau, London, to be War Correspondent

Truro, N.S., Nov. 2—(CP)—Edwin S. Johnson, superintendent of The Canadian Press Bureau at London will be The CP War Correspondent in France it was announced today by W. Rupert Davies, president of The Canadian Press, to a meeting of the Maritime Division. S. S. Robertson, New York Bureau superintendent, will be acting London superintendent and alternate War Correspondent.

Mr. Davies, editor and publisher of The Kingston Whig-Standard, said Johnson will be in France in advance of the Canadian Forces, Robertson taking charge of the London Bureau which is the centre of CP War coverage activities. The two will alternate in providing news from the Front Line.

The CP despatches from France would supplement reports already provided from Allied headquarters by three great news associations, Reuters, Havas and The Associated Press, giving to Canadian newspapers a service surpassing in completeness and general excellence that received by any other group of newspapers in the world.

"Eddie" Johnson, superintendent of the CP London Bureau since its inauguration three years ago, has been a member of the CP Staff for 16 years. Born at Gimli, Man., he worked successfully at Winnipeg, Ottawa, Toronto and New York Bureaux. He saw service with the Royal Air force in France in the First Great War. Last August, immediately before declaration of war he completed a one-month motor tour of European capitals with Mr. Davies.

"Sam" Robertson, born in Glasgow, joined The Canadian Press 20 years ago in Ottawa and since worked at every CP Domestic Bureau except Halifax and Vancouver. He has been stationed in New York since 1932 and was appointed superintendent three years ago. He was one of the CP staff men selected to cover the royal visit to Canada and the United States last May.

Unknown Motorist Drives Car Down Railway Tracks

Mystery surrounds the driving of a motor car along the right-of-way of the Canadian National Railways and directly in front of the Belleville C.N.R. depot at midnight last night. The manner in which railway employees saw the vehicle being driven between the tracks and the fact an express train was due to arrive in Belleville at that moment added complications to the picture, which was reported to police.

Sergeant Arthur Booth and P.C. Ellis answered a call to the local C.N.R. depot at midnight last night where Stephen Garvin, night agent, informed the police, that a man had driven an automobile onto the C.N.R. right-of-way some yards east of the station and had driven the vehicle between the rails in a westerly direction passed the station proper before the front wheels of the motor car became fast in a track switch. Before the police could be notified, however, the driver succeeded in releasing the wheels and driving the vehicle off a steep embankment and southerly towards Belleville.

Despite the fact the police searched the surrounding area thoroughly no sign of such a vehicle was forthcoming. However, Mr. Garvin obtained what he thought was the licence plate number of the vehicle and a complete check-up is being made by the police today. "The fact the midnight express from the west was due into Belleville just at the time the car was driven between the tracks passed the station made the employees quite concerned about the matter," Mr. Garvin told police, as he added the express was fortunately a few moments late.

"HUSH" EDITOR FACES THIRD CHARGE OF LIBEL

Toronto, Nov. 2 (CP)—Richard Sair, Managing Editor of the weekly tabloid "Hush," today faced his third charge of defamatory libel within two weeks.

He appeared in court on complaint of Michael Bernard, whose counsel charged an article in the issue of Oct. 28 imputed Bernard was a Nazi and Fascist organizer.

Last Saturday, Sair was committed for trial on a charge laid by W. E. Mason, publisher of the Sudbury Star. The same day, Dr. John Wasylenki, also of Sudbury, preferred a charge based on the same article from which Mason's charge arose, dealing with alleged Nazi activities in Sudbury.

Bright-Eyed Boy From North Part Of County Enjoys 1st Visit to City

RETURNS HOME HAPPY

To the majority of the county public school pupils who trooped into the city yesterday to be officially presented with prizes won by them at the various county school fairs, the day was just another holiday from school and another visit to the city.

But to clean-cut, twelve-year-Lorne Lebow, who lives six miles east of Maynooth Station, it opened a vista of strange sights, for it was his first journey "south of Bancroft" since he first saw the light of day on the modest little farm that nestles far from the beaten tracks in the wooded lands of North Hastings.

Modest, rosy-cheeked, the handsome youngster did not betray by any sign or statement that it was the first time he had seen the city.

Accompanied by his public-school Inspector, Mr. Deyell, he went on a sight-seeing tour of the city. He expressed pleasure at the bright lights and warm food of a modern city restaurant. He eyed with envy, although he had never seen one before, he said, the football students of B.C.I. were kicking on the campus of the school.

"I think I would like to live here—" he smiled, adding as an afterthought, "for a while."

The Collegiate Institute "looked a little too large for me to attend" he said. The imposing church edifices of Church Street caught his eye. "They were wonderful" in his opinion.

He had stayed in Bancroft the night previous and had had a "good time" watching the Hallowe'en masqueraders enjoy themselves.

Asked if he had any brothers or sisters, he naively replied, "I have a sister and a brother-in-law."

WAR BRIEFS

London, Nov. 2 (CP)—An Admiralty spokesman said today that the 4,327-ton German tanker Emmy Friedrich, carrying 40,000 barrels of American oil, was scuttled by her crew in the Caribbean Sea October 24 to avoid capture by a British cruiser.

Tallinn, Estonia, Nov. 2 (AP)—Soviet Russian troops today completed their movement to Estonian bases allotted by the recent mutual assistance pact. Preliminary work of building shelters for aerial and naval personnel was started.

Leith, Scotland, Nov. 2 (CP)—David MacLeod of Vancouver, wireles soperator of the steamship Cairn Mona, was saved when the 4,666-ton ship was sunk by an "explosion", it was learned today. There were 41 survivors. MacLeod was paid off here yesterday.

Athens, Nov. 2 (AP)—The government announced today that letters had been exchanged with Italy "contributing to the preservation of peace in this part of Europe". It said texts of the letters would be released tomorrow. (Diplomatic sources in Rome said Tuesday night that Italy and Greece were expected to sign a non-aggression pact soon. Italy promised to respect Greece's territorial integrity earlier this year after the conquest of Albania put Italian troops on the Greek border.)

London, Nov. 2 (CP)—A brief religious service will take place in Westminster Abbey from 10.45 to 11.15 a.m. on Armistice Day this year. The service will be broadcast. The cenotaph ceremony has been cancelled this year and there will be no general two-minute silence.

Taxes Must be Paid On Property on Which Candidate Qualifies

derstanding regarding the qualifications of a person running for municipal honors", revealed His Worship Mayor Bone today as he emphatically stated it was not necessary to have all one's taxes paid in full to qualify.

"The taxes must be paid in full on the single piece of property upon which the person desiring office seeks qualification, however. This simply means the taxes on one piece of property owned or resided in by the contestant must be paid in full and the person seeking election must qualify on the single piece of property upon which the taxes are fully paid," added His Worship.

Mayor Bone also urged that qualified citizens come forward and run for municipal offices. "What we need is to have more and better men seeking municipal honors, instead of sitting back and criticizing the council', stated Mayor Bone as he urged responsible business, professional and industrial men to take a more active interest in the affairs of Belleville if they desired to have the community advance.

Police Blotter

Before the arrival of Provincial Police yesterday several pigs, the property of James MacAvoy, Read, Ont., had been returned to their owner. The "porkers" were apparently released from their pen by Hallowe'en pranksters on Tuesday night.

Peterboro' police today announced the theft of a 1931 model Buick sedan equipped with six wire wheels. The vehicle was bearing Ontario license plates number 68-U-8 when stolen.

As an aftermath of Hallowe'en pranks several belated reports of minor misdemeanours continued to arrive at the police station all day yesterday but no reports of major damages or crime were announced by Chief Kidd or his subordinates today.

Two Shipments Made Overseas By Salvation Army

Two shipments of socks, sweaters and underwear have been forwarded from Belleville by the local branch of the Salvation Army to headquarters in Toronto for shipment to Great Britain to be given away to the soldiers. A few articles of clothing for children in Great Britain were included in the consignments.

Several sweaters and pairs of wool, sends out the wool to homes "The Army' authorities here last evening for forwarding overseas. "The Army" here when it receives wool or money with which it buys wool, sends out the wool to homes in the city to have it knitted into sweaters or socks.

"There have been a number of enquiries from civic authorities and individual citizens as to whether The Army is incorporated under the 1939 War Charities Act. We are able to state that such is the case, and thorized to control all war service. dred efforts are incorporated as one fund under the name: The Salvation Army Red Shield War Services Fund.

"It should also be recognized that The Salvation Army enjoys equal privileges with all other organizations engaged in war service. No national organization has been authorized to control al lwar service.

"The Salvation Army has been approved as an independent unit by the Government agency in regard to appeals and service.

Youth is Bruised When Hit by Car

When knocked off his bicycle when it was struck by a motor car near his home on West Bridge St. early last evening, William Wilson, 85 Bridge St. W., sustained bruises and leg lacerations. Young Wilson was attended at the scene of the accident and in his nearby home by Dr. R. Bird, local physician, who happened to be passing at the time.

Harold Huycke, 10 Donald St., reported to police he was proceeding easterly on Bridge St. near the Coleman St. intersection when he was forced to swerve his motor car sharply in an effort to avoid another automobile, which he said had veered to the centre of the street. In avoiding the motor crash, Mr. Huycke's car struck Wilson's bicycle. He immediately stopped and rendered assistance and later reported the accident to P. C. Wright, who investigated and found corroboration for the motorist's story.

WHEN THE TIME IS RIPE

France is fighting the war with method, resolution and prudence, said the French Minister to Canada, Count Robert de Dampierre. "We are in no hurry, but the enemy is."

That is the point that the British and French commands have been reiterating —patience is necessary, because the enemy cannot wait.

The French Minister puts the phrase in clear French, "the Siegfried line will fall when the fruit is ripe; let us patiently await the time when the fruit is ripened".

To the Nazis the mention of the great fortifications on which they pin their trust as a ripened fruit, ready for the French and British harvest, would be bitter and irritating.

The Count declared that the Allied Powers were fighting for all oppressed nations, that the French harbor no enmity against the German people but he repeated his country's determination to fight to the end, which will be the destruction of Hitler's slavery.

The Count spoke of French silence these days, and made the apt remark, "When the Frenchman talks he is not dangerous. When he is silent it means that action has superseded words."

He holds out a hope that the experiences of the present generation will mean that the children and grandchildren of the people of today will be spared like experiences.

NO NOBEL PRIZES FOR GERMANS

The Nazis' desire to keep Germans from accepting Nobel awards indicates how far the Nazi group have travelled from the concert of nations and the spirit of world brotherhood. Nazis do not care a rap whether their science adds one iota to the benefit of mankind or probably care as little what science contributes to German life as long as it serves one main purpose—to bolster up Nazism.

Of course it is this—to the Nazis nothing is of value but something Nazi. If the Nobel prize committee selects a German philosopher or scientist for an honor, it is a Nobel prize attitude, not a Nazi attitude, for the Nazis believe they are the supreme judges of what is important and so nothing is important to them but what serves a militant conquering Nazi principle with its cruelty, duplicity and lack of moral sense.

In the first case Nazis would not want a man singled out for an honor when they have so many "good" Nazis working night and day striving their utmost to produce something "good" for Nazis and terrible for the rest of the world. They might ask, why should a Nobel prize winner be singled out for praise when he does what is for the good of the world while Nazis receive no thanks from anyone outside Germany? It would destroy the very crushing thing that Nazism is, to honor one so.

Any way the Nazis would no doubt confiscate the prize money if it were sent to a German who merited it.

The Nazis show how little interest they have in the general interest of the world. That which is Nazi, interests them of course, what is not Nazi could have only one interest for the National Socialist party—its value to Nazidom if it could be acquired and forced into Nazi moulds as Hitler tried to do with Austria.

Nazi Germany has lost Germany's former standing in art and literature and science. Absorbed in thoughts of war and suppression of thoughts of universal interest the Nazis have succeeded in making Germany a very low rate power as an intellectual and social force in the world of today. The Nazis have crushed the church as they have dominated the state and every factor in the life of the Reich. They would not exalt a Nobel prize winner, who probably would not have been exalting Nazism.

THE HORSE

War works great changes. The need of oil is one of the chief elements in the titanic war which has been prepared for the western front. Britishers as well as people on the Continent are finding that restrictions on the use of gasoline are making changes in their manner of living. Cars have been offered cheap and it is reported that horses have come back in place of cars which require oil which is required for the successful prosecution of the war. Hamilton Spectator seys, "Old the war. Hamilton Spectator says, "Old sympathetic one but full of meaning. He has backtracked on his progress and we come back to him. He is wanted and welcomed." The newspaper tells of fine four-wheelers being dusted and taken out for use. The horse is taking people to picnics.

The Spectator grows meditative:—"If a horse is given to philosophizing and it is hardly likely he would bother, he could philosophize with the best of them, just as he did in Gulliver's Travels.

"He is not wanted so much in war now—no more Balaklavas—but that's nothing to worry about. The tanks are doing the work, and because tanks need petrol, people call him back. He has climbed out of the agricultural statistics class into a growing reflection of the gay light of his heyday. You can buy a car for a pound now in England, but you can't buy a horse for that.

"Some day he may be needed more. A scientist has blamed our current troubles on transportation, on the building of swift mechanized vehicles by men of tremendous ingenuity to be used by other men who have practically no intelligence at all. They break each other up, but horses don't.

"It is a moot point as to how much oil there is in the world. If it is used up, as one dreamy fellow has pointed out, we will go back to the sail on the sea and the horse on the land. There will be no more blitzkriegs, not even for the horse."

NOVEMBER

Now that time of year is at hand which soon or later brings winter. But November opened mild and bright. With a shower in the morning it cleared away and the sun shone brightly. In the afternoon of yesterday the clouds lowered but there was no haze, There was nothing of some November days and even of some to come in the next four weeks. Is Indian summer ahead with its haze and its eerie calm before the frost bites deeply into the ground and snow falls?

"The mellow autumn came, and with it came
The promised party to enjoy its sweets.
The corn is cut, the manor full of game;
The pointer ranges and the sportsman beats
In russet jacket; lynx-like is his aim;
Full grows his bag, and wonderful his feats.
Ah, nut-brown partridges! Ah, brilliant pheasants!

Bryant with an eye to nature saw that

"Yet our full-leaved willows are in their freshest green.
Such a kindly autumn, so mercifully dealing
With the growth of summer, I never yet have seen."

That was written for the third of November.

Dante Gabriel Rossetti gives a picture of the hazy days of November:

"This sunlight shames November where he grieves
In dead red leaves, and will not let him shun
The day, though bough with bough be overrun.
But with a blessing every glade receives
His salutation."

Thomas Moore looked at a dull month

"Now Neptune's sullen month appears,
The angry night clouds swells with tears,
And savage storms infuriate driven,
Fly howling in the face of heaven!"

Stoddard tells of

"The wild November come at last
Beneath a veil of rain;
The night wind blows its folds aside,
Her face is full of pain.

"The latest of her race, she takes
The autumn's vacant throne;
She has but one short moon to live,
And she must live alone."

Bayard Taylor oddly and graphically pictures a November day as a Puritan:

"Wrapped in his sad-colored cloak, the Day, like a Puritan standeth
Stern in the joyless fields, rebuking the lingering color,—
Dying hectic of leaves and the chilly blue of the asters,— Hearing, perchance the croak of a crow on the desolate tree-top."

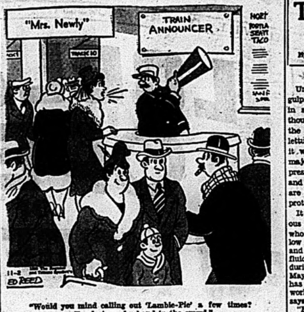
"When you have a husband who works ten hours a day, you can't expect him to do much in a social way."—Mrs. Harold L. Ickes.

OFF THE RECORD

By Ed Reed



"Would you mind calling out 'Lambie-Pie' a few times? I've lost my husband in the crowd."

50 YEARS AGO

Nov. 2nd., 1889.

Mr., and Mrs. B. Birch of Chicago, Ill., have arrived and will take charge of the Reid crockery store. Mrs. Birch, formerly Miss Bell, was a member of the staff some time ago when the business was owned by Mr. Rous.

Concerning the Future

Casting his mind into the future, Dr. Jerome G. Kerwin, professor of political science at the University of Chicago, in his Christian Culture lecture here, predicts that in the age following the present one there will be a continuation of materialism, secularism and paganism. It is not likely to be known as a Catholic age, nor even as a Christian one, he states.

To many this may appear a dark picture, but we do not think that Dr. Kerwin meant to paint it unduly so. He does not believe that there will be any slipping back into complete barbarism, or that civilization will perish. All that he means is that the age-long struggle between the forces of good and evil of progress and retrogression, will proceed and that the struggle will not be an easy one.

It is just as well that there are men who, as Dr. Kerwin, are willing to be realistic; men who appreciate that it is a long, hard road towards an Utopia. One of the mistakes made in the First Great War was in depicting it as a struggle to end all wars, to bring about a period of unmitigated peace, prosperity and progress. It was merely building the world up for a great disillusionment.

This does not mean, for instance, that the present war is not worth fighting. In fact, it means the reverse. It shows that liberties, even of religion, are acquired through courage and sacrifice; how the human race is destined to battle to maintain its progress and the civilization it has built up. There is no easy way of defeating the forces of evil, be they those which affect ordinary personal life, or the welfare of nations.

Down through the ages this struggle has been maintained. It will not be ended merely with the termination of the present era. Having attained the present state of civilization, such as it is, men will not throw up their hands and allow it to be taken away from them. For the church, the greater the opposition, the larger the opportunities. Those who succeed us will have to be resolute, even as those whom we succeeded were resolute. All we in the present can do is to take that stand which we believe is right, and having done so pass on the best heritage we can.—Windsor Daily Star.

Guns and Gumption

The gum-chewing movement in the United States will be accelerated by studies recently made by Professor H. L. Hollingworth of Barnard College and reported in the current issue of Science. Professor Hollingworth found, in his own words, that "the collateral motor automatism involved in the sustained use of the conventional masticatory does result in a lowering of tension, and the tension thus reduced is muscular." The gum-chewer relaxes and gets more work done. His rhythmic rumination may induce tension in the unwilling observer but not in him. He thinks of dinner, which, except for dyspeptics, is always soothing. The measured strain of his left elbow decreases by 5 per cent or more while he adds up figures or perhaps writes poetry with his right hand. Chewing adds to his zest—one might say his gumption. The chicle industry prospered while other industries bit the dust. Can this, wonders Professor Hollingworth, be why?

Indeed, it may. But a word of caution may be offered. The general tension is not reduced by waiters, waitresses or sales people who chew gum while on duty. It is not reduced by gum-chewers who drop gum on sidewalks so that it will stick to other people's shoes. Above all, nothing useful is accomplished by those humorists who have infested this city's transportation system for at least three decades and whose idea of fun is to plant gum in subway seats.—New York Times.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Cause of Flatulence—Gas

Until just a few years ago gas—gulping it up, or having it roll about in stomach and intestine— was thought to be due in all cases to the foods eaten—onions, cabbage, lettice, peas, beans. More recently it was thought that in the great majority of cases gas formation and pressure was due to a sluggish liver and gall bladder. Many cases also are believed due to fermentation of protein foods—meat, eggs, fish.

It is now agreed that many nervous or excitable individuals, those who eat their food hurriedly, swallow quantities of air during meals and particularly if they use much fluid—tea, coffee, milk, or water—during meals. Dr. Walter Alvarez, Mayo Clinic, who for many years has done much original research work on the stomach and intestine, says, in Ohio Medical Journal:

"For reasons yet unknown, some persons swallow much air as they drink. A "dry" dinner will sometimes give a much more comfortable night."

"Among the other common causes of flatulence—gas—are: food sensitiveness—being allergic or sensitive to some particular food or foods such as eggs, wheat, berries; a plug of hardened waste matter in the rectum or lowest part of large intestine which forces gas back up into small intestine and even into the stomach; nervous excitement before during and after eating; oil, which while lubricating the wastes, seems to cause gas pressure, and many substances added to laxatives in order to add bulk to the wastes". Despite the formation of gas caused by these bulky substances such as agar, most physicians believe that this bulkiness distends the bowel and causes the muscles of the bowel to squeeze harder on the mass of waste and so prevents constipation. The bowel is kept in a better condition of health if its muscular walls have something that causes them to contract or squeeze upon the wastes. The walls increase in muscular strength by this work or exercise.

As mentioned before, if the gas from the stomach or bowel is without odor it is considered as being swallowed air. If odor is present, then gas is due to one or more of the conditions above mentioned—food allergy, fermentation, plug or waste material.

THE DONKEY CART

A news story says: "The short 'British warm' coats may not be worn on parade except by general officers, brigadiers and officers of the Foot Guards."

The coat warm is steadily rising in dignity. Like many other things, it originated in the Indian Army. On the frontier and in the Punjab and Baluchistan troops marching before dawn may be freezing and an hour after sunrise sweltering. A coat to be pulled on and thrown off easily, worn over full equipment and inexpensive because of possible loss or damage when discarded in a hurry, was needed. Each Indian army commanding officer clothes his unit much as he pleases within a cash allowance called half-mounting. Thus the coat warm came into being and was given a name which may be translated donkey coat.

The British Army in India saw and approved. It designed a coat warm British, the original became coat warm Indian and a third, the ocat warm followers, a still cheaper pattern, followed. The value of coats warm British was much appreciated in South Africa. They became an issue to British troops and officers bought them. They remained, however, knockabout over-all short coats, worn without badges of rank or the ribbons of decorations. They were half recognized and authorized only to the extent of being made available for troops under certain conditions.

Then, early in the Great War, the coat warm officers appeared, of smarter, longer cut, but by no means of the same rough utility as the old coat warm British; and badges and ribbons began to be worn on it. Now it is taking another step up. On parade generals, brigadiers and the Foot Guards alone may wear it, a far cry from the sepoy's donkey coat.—Saint John Telegraph - Journal.

Poles Hide Gems Of Czarist Days

London, Nov. 2—(CP)—One of Europe's many guessing games today concerns the whereabouts of the Russian crown jewels, the property of the Republic of Poland.

The jewels have belonged to Poland since 1938, when a promise made by the Soviet government to return Polish national treasures was forfeit and the Poles retained the crown jewels, deposited with them in 1920 as security against return of their own riches. The Polish valuables had been seized by the Czarist regime in the various partitions of Poland. The Russian jewels were removed from Warsaw before the German invasion along with personal jewelry of the Polish nobility, and theid eventual haven is rumored to be in Britain or the United States.

Comfort for Gentleman Who Sorely Need Comfort

Gentlemen whose configuration after 40 suggests that each of them has swallowed a watermelon owe a debt of gratitude to Dr. Raymond Pearl. A developing paunch is not beautiful. It lays the possessor open to the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune in the shape of ribald colleagues, whose remarks acquire additional barbs as the waistline increases. Therefore, anything that can be said in its favor ought to be hailed with delight by that large proportion of the male population who are being forced by topographical reasons to substitute suspenders for unreliable belts.

In a speech before the National Academy of Sciences the Johns Hopkins savant said something in mitigation of the paunch. Examination of 2,332 white men, made by Dr. Pearl and his associate, Mr. W. Edwin Moffett, revealed that the potbellied had, on the average, less pneumonia and cancer, and no more diabetics than the willowy and sylphlike. This does not apply, of course, to extremes. Among those examined the enormous tended to die early, as did the cadaverous; but a modestly aldermanic girth is quite consistent with long life.

However, there seems to have been nothing in the address to contravene the theory established by these scientists some years ago, to wit, that the infallible recipe for long life is simply to select your grandparents with care. If they lived long, your chances to do likewise are excellent, providing, of course, that you always wait for the green light before stepping off the curb.—Baltimore Sun.

Holds Dominion's Strength Needed in War Cabinet

London, Nov. 2—(CP)—The October issue of the National Review long noted for its strong anti-German attitude, devotes several pages to bitter criticism of Great Britain for not doing more to help Poland while that country was being overrun.

"Poland was fighting for her life," the magazine remarked, "her territories were invaded on two sides, and we are dropping 'messages to the German people' saying we were not at war with them! x x x We shall only have a short war if we make it effective. If we drop leaflets instead of bombs the war may last several years."

Britain's failure to bring concrete aid to Poland encouraged Russia to intervene, said the National Review. Because days passed without bombardment of munition works and concentrations of troops behind the western lines in Germany the Poles felt they had been abandoned. "Russia also saw and seized the chance. x x x If England had looked like business he (Stalin) would certainly not have made the military excursion into Poland."

The magazine asserts Prime Minister Chamberlain missed a great opportunity in his cabinet reshuffle. It added he might have brought R. B. Bennett, former Canadian prime minister and Stanley Bruce, Australian high commissioner in London, into his cabinet, and also Lord Lloyd.

Leaflet Broadcast

The National Review was particularly indignant about the Royal Air Force's leaflet raids over Germany. "The revulsion of feeling over this inane proceeding has not prevented it being repeated," it complained. "The leaflets were welcomed in Germany where the shortage of paper is very severe."

The magazine also asked if French, as well as British ministers were "infected with the poisonous doctrine that a defensive warfare is superior in results to a warfare of attack?" It said Poland's fate was proof of the futility of that argument.

Nor did the National Review approve the distinction drawn between the German government and the German people. People making this distinction are "all doing Dr. Goebbel's work for him," it asserted. "By these means we are saying to the Germans that they have only got to change their form of government and we shall forget their crimes and take them to our hearts."

It derided reports of discontent in Germany and claimed the German Communist party "is run by the Gestapo, who emit for our benefit the sort of thing calculated to keep us quiet while the Germans are busy in Poland."

Ham and Eggs for All $30 Every Thursday

The State of California votes next week, November 7, on a pension scheme so revolutionary as to make the mythical Aberhart "dividends" a triumph of conservatism. It is the celebrated "ham and eggs" scheme which was defeated a year ago by a narrow margin, which has been denounced by President Roosevelt, the Governor of the state by the financial interests, by professional men, but which still commands such enthusiastic support among the common people that petitions calling for the present special election were signed by 1,200,000 voters. The promoters of the scheme say they will win, and reports to the New York papers agree that its defeat is far from certain.

The issue is adoption of a 12,000-word California State Retirement Life Payment Act as a part of the state constitution. It is an extraordinary document. If it is passed, within five days the Governor must name one of two specified individuals as administrator of the pension plan for four years. The administrator has an absolutely free hand, without any check by legislature, Governor or state courts. He is given immunity to injunctions and all legal processes, has the right to make all appointments, to call for special elections on amendments to the plan.

Every qualified elector in the state of 50 years or more who is neither employer nor employed (there are said to be a million such) shall receive thirty one-dollar warrants each week for the remainder of his life—more if the cost of living rises—and to encourage immediate spending to each warrant mus tbe added a two-cent stamp every week. To handle the details a special "credit clearings" bank is to be established, and a branch of it set up within 1,000 feet of every existing bank in the state.

The cost of pensions is to be met by new taxes. The three-percent. sales tax is continued, but in addition a three-percent. "gross income" or transaction tax is imposed, which will multiple with every movement of a product with every movement of a product on its way from producer to consumer.

Opponents of the scheme call it a cruel, fantastic hoax on the gullible, predict it will bankrupt the state, leave every one in a far worse plight than ever before. Those with any understanding of economics are against it. But California for years has been the happy hunting ground of a host of economic quacks and monetary charlatans who have developed among masses of the people the conviction that it is possible to get something for nothing. Perhaps it would be good for the world at large to see the thing tried out on a large scale, but it would go hard with the guinea pig.—Ottawa Journal.

'Twas Nov. 1st. 1914 Cradock's Ships Were Lost in the Pacific

By the Canadian Press

Great Britain and her allies enter the third month of the war tomorrow masters of the seas with German submarines offering the only threat to their dominatioin But, as the nations marked the close of three months of hostilities in the First Great War, scattered remnants of the German navy remained a potent force on the high seas.

Twenty-five years ago yesterday a shocked British public received the news of the defeat of Rear-Admiral Sir Christopher Cradock's squadron at the battle of Coronel off the coast of Chile in one of the war's outstanding naval engagements.

Opposed by a much superior force under Admiral Graf von Spee, two vessels of the Royal Navy were destroyed and 1,650 officers and men lost. The news fell in England like a thunderclap but the defeat was avenged a month later when Vice-Admiral Sir Doveton Sturdee smashed the Germans at the Falkland Islands.

Forced out of the Far East when Germany lost her Chinese naval base at Tsingtau, in the Kiau Chou peninsula, Von Spee's Pacific squadron fled to South American waters. The British and German squadrons met Nov. 1, 1914.

Opposing Ships

Cradock commanded the old armored cruisers Good Hope and Monmouth, the light cruiser Glasgow and the armed liner Otranto which took no part in the engagement. Opposing the British were the light cruisers Leipzig, Nurnberg and Dresden. The German squadron had been in active commision for two years, whereas the Good Hope an Monmouth, the foremost British ships, had been out of commission when war broke out, her crews untrained.

Weight of metal as the deciding factor in the battle, first shots in which were fired about seven p.m. Silhouetted sharply against the setting sun the British ships . good marks for the gunners aboard the German vessels which were hardly discernible against gathering night clouds in the east.

The third salvo from the German guns hit the Good Hope forward and sent up a burst of flam... By 7.30, the British vessels were clearly in distress. Within an hour the Good Hope was lost, riddled by 35 hits from the Scharnhorst's guns.

The Monmouth and Glasgow attempted to escape in the darkness but the former, down by the bows and listing to port, was destroyed by the Nurnberg, the German gunners firing at 800 yards. Five hits were registered by the Dresden and the Leipzig on the Glasgow but she managed to escape to the south in the wake of the fleeing Otranto.

Quints Cited as Demonstrative of Benefits of Milk

If you readers think I am praising milk too highly, if you think I am exaggerating its value as a food, I wish you could have seen, as I did, what it did and is doing for the Dionne Quintuplets.

We are fortunate in our milk supply when those babies were born. When they were a few hours old we secured an adequate supply of mothers' milk for them. Months later, when they were able to graduate to cows' milk we had a good supply of pasteurized milk for them. Today they don't have to be coaxed to drink it. It is their between-meal snack. If they get hungry from too much playing, and meal time is a long ways off, they get milk.

In fact, a glass of milk between meals is a regular part of their routine. And of course they get lots of milk with their meals. They get plenty of milk products, in puddings, in custards, and in a great many ways. Each Quint gets approximately a quart a day.

Milk has certain deficiencies that keep it from being a perfect food. Actually there are two deficiences, and I think we should know about these too.

Milk contains iron, but in smaller quantities than the body requires. I suppose if we drank enough milk we might get enough iron. But you can hardly make a child drink several gallons of milk just to get iron. That would be foolish when there are other foods rich in iron.

Similarly, milk doesn't contain enough vitamin D, and the amount of Vitamin C is so variable that it isn't well to depend entirely on the milk we drink to supply this.

So there you are—get your iron, your vitamins C and D from other sources, and milk will take care of the rest. It isn't perfect, but it certainly does come close. There are many vitamins being discovered as the days go on, but there are five which are important to you: Vitamins, A.B.C. and G. Milk has all five, although the two above noted aren't present as much as they should be.

Vitamin C, as we pointed out, is variable in milk. One testing will show a lot of it; another will show a deficiency. We know too that Vitamin C is the least stable of the vitamins, and we also know that pasteurization removes some of it.

There are those who use this as an argument against pasteurization. It is just about as weak as their other arguments against this process. Vitamin C isn't assured in milk at the best, while pasteurization definitely protects us from the diseases carried in milk—diphtheria, typhoid, tuberculosis, scarlet fever, just to give you a few of them. If you had to choose between those diseases and no Vitamin C, which would you choose?

Certainly it isn't much of a choice when you know that you can get your Vitamin C by eating citrus fruits, tomatoes, cabbage, potatoes and other vegetables and fruits. In fact, citrus fruits and apples will give you all the Vitamin C you need.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Kind People Have One Set of Manners

The people we find really charming, the people whose manners we really admire, the people whom we really enjoy knowing, are those who have one set of manners. No matter where they are, no matter to whom they are speaking, no matter whether the circumstance is simple or complicated, they inevitably act and react in the same way. Always their manners are gentle . . . and always, therefore, they are gentlewomen or gentlemen.

These spiritually gracious people do not have a double standard of manners. They do not speak in one tone of voice to a servant or to any other employee, and use quite another tone of voice to an employer. They do not fawn over a person who is important to them socially or professionally, and talk condescendingly to a person whom they consider of little or no importance to them or to their lives.

The "Good morning" and the "Thank you" and the "Please" that these kind people say to the boy who delivers the groceries is as genuine as the gracious "How do you do" and "Thank you" they say to a celebrity who is the guest of honor at a distinguished reception. They acknowledge no difference between "formal" manners and "informal" manners.

What quality is the basis of the good manners of these pleasant, lovable people? KINDNESS! Kindness is the sunshine that makes the garden of their lives grow. They think kindly. They speak kindly.

In today's troubled world, with so many people pushing and jostling their nervous way along, what a special radiance surrounds people whose manners spring from kindness! The light they shed has a soothing influence. They are refreshing people, pleasant to observe and to know and to have about.

"Honor Thy Father and Thy Mother"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1—I am to be married at the parsonage and there will not be a reception. The wedding will be very informal. I have been wondering if it is proper to have the announcements read: "Miss Edith Ellwood and Mr. John Brown announce their marriage on (date)"?

My parents are both living but are old and do not take much interest in life any more, and will not be able to attend the wedding.

2—Would a slate blue jacket dress be all right with black shoes and hat?

Reader

1—Even if your parents are old, I urge you to give them the honor of sending your marriage announcements in their names. After all, my dear girl, they are your parents. Your relatives, your fiance's relatives, and your friends, will be proud of you for doing this. And think what a great and deep happiness you will be giving your mother and father on the sacred day of their daughter's marriage.

2—Yes, this would be an excellent and appropriate ensemble.

Temptation for Young Appetites

By Alce Lynn Barry

Backyard young appetites are often a family problem, and a legitimate ruse is to tempt them with a dessert which contains plenty of nourishment.

Pear Tapioca is made by combining four tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon ginger and two cups canned pear juice and water in saucepan, mixed well. Bring mixture quickly to a full boil over direct heat, stirring constantly. Remove from fire (mixture will be thin; do not over cook). Add six halves canned pears, cut in halves, four maraschino cherries, cut in eighths; one-fourth cup maraschino cherry juice and two tablespoons lemon juice. Cool, stirring occasionally—mixture thickens as it cools. Chill. Serve with cream if desired. Serves eight.

Prune Sponge Pudding

Prune Sponge Pudding is another healthful and flavorsome dessert. Combine four tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca, three tablespoons sugar, one-half teaspoon salt, one and one-third cups prune juice and milk in top of double boiler. Place over rapidly-boiling water and cook seven minutes after water boils again, stirring frequently. Add one tablespoon butter, one-eighth teaspoon cinnamon, one and one-half teaspoons grated orange rind, three tablespoons orange juice and one cup finely-cut cooked prunes. Cool slightly while beating the whites of three eggs stiff and the yolks until thick and lemon-colored. Add egg yolks and mix well. Fold in egg whites. Turn into greased baking dish. Place in pan of hot water and bake in 350 degrees F. oven 50 to 60 minutes or until firm. Serves six.

Baked Pear Tapioca Pudding is made with one-half cup tapioca, three cups boiling water, one-third teaspoon salt, two tablespoons lemon juice, three fresh pears, one-half cup sugar, one-fourth cup water and one cup marshmallows. Cook tapioca, salt and boiling water over hot water until tapioca is clear. Peel the pears and cut in quarters; add sugar and one-fourth cup water; cover and simmer five minutes. Combine with tapioca and lemon juice. Pour in buttered baking dish, cover with marshmallows and bake in moderate oven for 20 minutes. Serves eight.

New Settings for Your Dinner Table

By Eleanor Ross

LOVELIER than ever is the new table linen and china, making it pretty difficult to resist planning some sort of a dinner or luncheon party.

A glance at table setting shown at various stores reveals that the traditionally-set table, done with quiet elegance, is the trend for dinner. Tablecloths of white linen damask gleam discreetly, but there is far more sheen to rayon damask, if one likes a glistening effect. A soft yet lustrous glass fabric is used for tablecloths and doilies in a novelty setting. And there are mats and doilies of sheerest cotton as well as of lace. The lace banquet cloth, while always beautiful, doesn't seem to be so important this year. Sheer appliqued tablecloths are suggested for really important dinner parties.

We were so pleased to find that domestic china is getting handsomer and finer all the time, as charming as anything produced abroad. Old-fashioned floral motifs as well as Williamsburg Colonial designs are featured by one domestic china house. The Federal insignia is one of the most dignified and handsome patterns. The plates with their border of gold stars are something!

Handsome As Ever

Table silver is as handsome as ever, the new gold finish silver attracting much attention because it looks so rich and because it doesn't tarnish. Also free from tarnish is a sort of stainless steel which looks just like sterling. Those who love a dash of color will want the silverware with plastic composition handles in pastels or rich tones.

For tea tables there are delicate lace cloths, lovely fragile china and glowing silver. For college or football tea tables there are bright cloths and gay pottery cups. One shop showing tea table settings draws crowds of women who enjoy both the elegant well-bred tea table and the roistering setting of large, vividly-hued pottery tea mugs on a bright plaid linen cloth.

6th Tyendinaga

Sixth Tyendinaga, Nov. 2. — On Saturday evening, Oct. 28, this school section was represented when they met at the school house and had a social time in honor of Lieut. Clifford Holmes and his bride. In the early part of the evening the "boys" held a band oncert outside and what they lacked in music they made up for in noise. The band was composed of shot gun, plow shares, bells and horns and such like.

A splendid program was given by the school pupils, young people of the neighborhood and others after which an address was read by Mrs. Arthur Boldrick and Clifford and Roberta were presented with a beautiful chime clock. Both made very suitable replies thanking the people for their gift. Lunch was served by the ladies and all departed for their homes after wishing Lieut. and Mrs. Holmes every happiness and success and hoped they would soon be among us again.

Mrs. T. Parks and Mrs. C. Goodman attended the funeral of the former's sister-in-law, the late Mrs. A. Parks at Tweed Saturday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bates of Belleville visited Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Treverton over the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Lancaster and Evelyn, formerly of Stirling, have taken up residence here.

Miss Lottie and Mr. C. Goodman are spending a few days with their brother, Mr. Fred Goodman, Milford.

Dear Isabella and Allan: We, your friends and neighbors, have gathered here tonight to extend to you our congratulations on your recent marriage and to wish you many happy years together. Most of us have known you both from childhood and at all times we have found you willing to help in all church and community activities.

We want to tell you that we appreciate this and we ask you to accept these gifts; not for their intrinsic value, but for the friendship and good wishes that go with it and we hope we can count on you both in the future as we have in the past. We are glad you are making your home in this community and our sincere wish is that God will be your guide in the making of another Christian home.

A red geranium or two to keep the corners gay.
A little patch of grass to trim, a pair of maple trees.
A path that leads up to the door
And home is made of these.

Some windows for the sun to find,
And curtains white and neat,
Good neighbors to the right and left
And just across the street:
A kettle singing on the stove,
A couch that's built for ease,
A dog that wags his tail at you—
A home is made of these.

The smell of cookies baking or of onion in the stew,
And free to go around and about, as you would like to do.
Of course there will be times of trouble and disease,
And times of song and laughter for every home is made of these.

May happiness and long life be yours.

Husband Falls Asleep Over the Evening Paper

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been married for five years and have two lovely little boys. All my married life I've been miserable so I'm coming to you for help in solving my troubles.

My husband has what they call a "white-collar" job. When he comes home from the office, his supper is always ready, and I think it's a well-prepared meal too. He never talks much, but after supper he lies down on the davenport to read the paper, and before I can get the dishes washed, he's sound asleep. It's been this way for years. He never wants to go out anywhere, and if I want to go alone to a movie, he raises a big fuss about my going out by myself at night.

Please advice me what to do. I'm so

Dissatisfied

Well, my dear, I hope you won't think me one of those boresome optimists who are always pointing out silver linings to clouds. But this husband of yours does come home, and stays there, even if he nods over the evening paper.

Many women who write me, would be glad to change places with you, as their husbands never appear even for meals. And may I ask whether you read the papers? Have you anything besides domestic happenings to talk over with your husband? I get letters from men, also complaining that their wives have nothing interesting to say when they're at home.

Answer to Correspondent About Inherited Wealth

Dear Miss Fairfax

In regard to a letter signed "Naomi" a few days ago, you stated "unless this boy has inherited wealth, his chances of marrying for many years is very slim." Please explain this a bit more fully.

Young Man of Twenty

It's likely that in the edition of the paper in which you read Naomi's letter, space may have caused a line or two to be cut from the original. The girl's letter stated that the young man was unemployed and that he had been untrained for a job and had no trade or profession.

It must be realized that under these circumstances, a young man of 20 could not make a living for a wife of 18 unless something in the way of a miracle materialized. Accordingly I told the young man that his chances of marrying, unless he had prospects or had inherited wealth, were slim. Jobless young men do marry, I know as well as anybody and then bring their wives home to their parents to be supported. Often the parents decline to receive them, and there is much unhappiness all around.

Every young man should equip himself for the future. With some definite job in mind he should learn a trade or take up a profession. He can do this by going to night school.

An Extremely Unreliable Young Man

Dear Miss Fairfax

The young man I've been going with for the past year, lives about fifty miles away from my home. He says he loves me, and I love him. But his visits are far between, and when he does come, he always brings someone with him. He asked me if he may write, but he has never written.

He lost his good job, and has had minor positions occasionally. Still he thinks he will be able to marry soon. I am beginning to doubt his love for me. What do you think is wrong?

Wondering.

My dear, the most practical help I can give you is to beg you to waste no more time on this extremely unreliable young man. I think if he were seriously in love and really intended to marry, he would conduct himself in a very different manner, as you will find out when your real lover comes along.

Meantime, don't let this young man think you love him or are taking him seriously. Be polite when you meet him, but do not dream of considering him as a possible husband. You will be less unhappy, I know, when you have made up your mind to go out with other boys and forget him as soon as possible.

Mrs. M. Nolan Is Honored by Church Workers

Stirling, Nov. 2.—On Thursday afternoon last the ladies of St. Andrew's Church, Stirling, held a tea at the home of Mr. H. Rollins for the purpose of honoring Mrs. M. Nolan, well-known resident of Stirling who will soon be leaving the district. During the afternoon the ladies enjoyed a musical program and brief addresses by various officers of the church. Mrs. Lewis Rodgers, speaking on behalf of the ladies of the church, deeply expressed the appreciation of Mrs. Nolan's services and loyalty during the years of her membership in the women's organizations of the church.

Rev. W. H. V. Walker expressed the hope that even if Mrs. Nolan found it necessary to close her Stirling home she would from time to time find it possible to return to the village to visit her old friends at St. Andrew's. Mrs. Harper Rollins, speaking briefly, outlined the many capacities in which the honored guest had faithfully served the church in which she had been active during her entire life. Never during all these years had she failed in her duty and her services will be greatly missed in the future. Mr. Arthur Duncan speaking on behalf of the choir mentioned the pleasant fellowship enjoyed by all the members with Mrs. Nolan for many years. Living near the church she was present in her place for every service. Closing his brief remarks he stated that the sentiment shared by all the members of the church toward the honored guest were best summed up in the poem, "Friend o' Mine". Mrs. Nolan was presented with a purse of money by the ladies present.

Rev. A. A. Lowther Speaks.

Rev. A. A. Lowther, recently returned missionary from India was guest speaker at a special missionary meeting held at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Tuesday evening. Mr. Lowther was introduced to the gathering by Rev. W. H. V. Walker. In describing existing conditions in the land of many casts the speaker asserted that of the 350 million people only eight per cent can read and write. Living in a province with a population of more than fifty million people who lived on an average daily income of eight cents he had many interesting experiences to recount. Plague, maladies and leprosy take a great toll in lives yearly and the latter could be greatly reduced by medical science if it were not for the fatalistic view taken by the natives. The Hindu belief in reincarnation renders all suffering justified in the eyes of the Hundu. It is their belief that because of sins in former lives, people of this life are caused to suffer and because of this religious belief constructive efforts of disease control are greatly handicapped.

Over 90 per cent of the population gain their livelihood from the soil on tiny farms of not more than five of ten acres and all greatly divided into small sections. Here the native farms with implements more than two thousand years old — wodden ploughs, and after the demonstration of modern steel ploughs they applaud the superior knowledge of western civilization but return to the use of the things used by their ancestors because of respect.

Recently much has been said regarding the independence of India. Britain has never denied them their independence but has promised to support such a movement when the population is sufficiently educated to receive it. The great masses of the people are in favor of British rule because many states under the rule of potentates and princes are assured of their home rule under the British sovereignty. Radical groups spring up occasionally under some great liberator to start political parties and liberty movements, but at heart the great masses of people are as loyal to the British flag as we are.

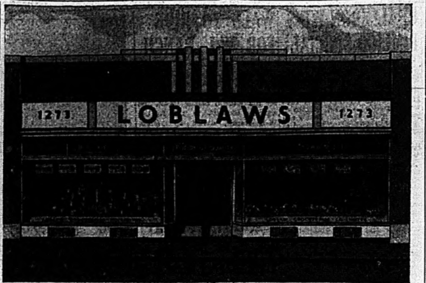
The sacredness of the cow is one of the greatest hindrances to economic progress in the land. To every one hundred persons there are 65 cows unhealthy, old, diseased, eating up a large percentage of the yearly crop. Because religion gives them a holy place in life, no one dares kill a cow and they are permitted to share the dwelling places with the people. The cost of keeping the millions of cows, twenty-four millions of which are absolutely nonproductive and worthless, is said to be more than four times greater than the government land revenue. Since these problems are created by religious beliefs only religion can solve the problem. Governments can't change it by laws but patient Christian teaching will give light to these people who are blind in their ignorance. The address was one that imparted many interesting facts and the audience was one that imparted many interesting facts and the audience was very appreciative. At the close of his talk Mr. Lowther conducted a question period in which many questions regarding religion and the political life of the nation were discussed.



Store front of Loblaw's new Groceteria which will open on Friday morning

Loblaw's New Groceteria Presents Latest Improvements In Modern Retail Outlets

New Store, Greatly Enlarged, Designed to Display and Sell Quality Merchandise Under Best Possible Conditions

BRILLIANTLY LIGHTED

A gleaming ivory-and-white tribute to not only years of progress made through fair business dealings with the public, but to the ability of its architectural and designing engineers, Belleville's latest addition to its already imposing array of Front street stores, the new Loblaw branch, will open its doors to the public Friday morning.

The new store, erected on the site of the former Loblaw branch, the Thompson Furniture Store and the office of Norman Edwards, Optometrist, at 290 Front street, has a frontage of fifty feet and a depth of one hundred and twenty feet.

Mr. J. W. McCartney, district supervisor of the company who with Mr. C. Loblaw, chief supervisor, has been in charge of all pre-opening arrangements told The Ontario Intelligencer yesterday that the new store "is in my opinion one of the best we have. It is spacious, well lighted, and its easy accessibility to the public and its modern facilities for providing table needs, ranks it among the best in the entire chain."

Modernistic Motif.

Modernism is the motif of the entire store and its facilities, and company engineers have left no stone unturned to bring to the public of Belleville one of the most up-to-date stores of its kind in the province. Its brilliantly-lighted spacious front surmounted by a large illuminated sign in which gleams 96 three-hundred-watt lamps, brings an added air of distinction to the many up-to-date shops that are adjacent to it. Its light sand-colored facade blends in a colorful way with tones of neighboring buildings.

Inside the visitor is struck with the large space of the immediate interior. Stretching one hundred and twenty feet to the rear a gleaming expanse of ivory-and-white that is ceiling and walls, trimmed with slight touches of aluminum, brings to the shopper the spacious room that the store affords. New hardwood floors shine underfoot. The ceiling is done in white artistic designs of a diamond shape. Posts that run in two lines down the store proper are decorated in the same color scheme with red bands affording a colorful contrast at intervals. Along the beams that cross the ceiling are narrow borders of orange that combine to give the whole an eye-pleasing effect.

At the right rear of the store are the offices, raised well above the main floor. Beneath are two units that regulate air circulation the year round.

Replacing the box shelving of the former store, are new streamlined shelves that stretch in one continuous line along the sides of the store the goods facilitate purchasing by customers.

Fruit Department Doubled.

The fruit department capacity has been doubled. Additional scales and wrapping tables have been added while a special set of shelves, padded and covered with rubberized oilcloth has been installed for display of bananas. Three containers in pure white are placed at intervals for the display of citrus and other fruits. In the cellar, special washing facilities for the cleaning of all vegetables marks another step of progress.

To the left rear of the store is the cutting room of the meat department. Colorfully decorated in white enamel which can be washed whenever necessary, the room will house all meats to be cut before being placed on display. Adjacent is the spacious "ten by twelve" refrigerator also lined with enamel to facilitate cleaning.

Brilliantly illuminating the entire interior of the store is the indirect lighting system of forty-one units of powerful lamps. Claimed to be the last word in store illumination, the new lights cast a suffused glow towards the ceiling that reflects in soft light on the store and its contents.

Basement Modernistic.

But modernism has not been confined to the store alone. In the basement are the three distinct refrigeration units that are some of the main features of this up-to-date shop.

One unit supplies refrigeration to a receptacle that contains nothing but perishable vegetables while the remaining two supply the needs of the show-cases in the store that have on display meats, and butter and cheese.

Space again is one of the features of the basement. Here is ample room for the large stocks that will be necessary to supply the wants of the Loblaw clientele. All stocks are placed on shelves that are raised six inches from the basement floor, thus eliminating the possibility of dampness affecting the merchandise.

A feature here is a new metal chute that extends from the main floor to the basement. Orders for delivery will be sent downstairs where they will be wrapped and taken to their destination via a rear door, thus eliminating the carrying of orders through the store proper.

Spacious Windows.

Under the light of ninety-six powerful lamps, merchandise will be displayed in the large airy windows that measure approximately twenty-proper. A new ticket-pricing system whereby price-tags are placed below feet in length and stretch from both sides of the main entrance in the centre of the store front. Here, window decorators of the staff will be able to give vent to their artistic abilities.

Former Staff Retained.

The former staff will be retained and increased, Mr. McCartney stated. Mr. George Fordyce will again assume the managerial duties while competent clerks will be added to the roster of the already efficient staff that have been with the company for some time.

"The construction and decoration of the store here has been a big item," he said, "and all the material that could be purchased here was bought locally. Practically all the labor both in construction and decoration has been local, and suffice it to say they have done a splendid job. The general contractor from Toronto only brought one outside man with him, so that may give you an idea of how much Belleville labor was used. We have spent a lot of money here and we are glad to have left the major part of it in your city."

Public interest in the store has been quickened with the approach of completion and yesterday and today Front street pedestrians paused in their daily shopping tours or afternoon walks to catch a glimpse of the handsome interior from the pavement.

ECCENTRIC FLYER GIVEN LIFE TERM

Earnest Pletch Not to Apply for Pardon or Parole from Sentence

Jefferson City, Mo., Nov. 2 — (AP)—The eccentric flying career of a farmhand who had a passion to be an aviator ended here today as Earnest Pletch began a life term in the state prison. In a surprise move at Macon, Mo., yesterday, Pletch, 29, pleaded guilty to flaying Flying Instructor Carl Bivens, one mile above Macon County and was given a life sentence by Judge Harry Libby.

Earlier, Pletch had waived preliminary hearing and promised Judge Libby never to apply for a pardon or parole. The judge said the sentence was in accordance with the wish of Biven's widow.

Pletch, an amateur pilot who was dubbed "flying Lochinvar" last summer when he wooed a young girl in an air jaunt, took off with Bivens, 38, at Brookfield, Mo., five days ago.

Forty minutes later when they were 5,000 feet above Macon County in a borrowed monoplane Pletch told Prosecutor Vincent S. Moody, he shot and killed Bivens without cause.

Pletch spent the night at a Missouri farm after landing and hiding Bivens' body near Cherry Box. He was arrested Saturday.

Black Hawks Will Entertain Revamped Detroit Red Wings

LEAFS PLAY SATURDAY

Charlie Sands of Boston Traded to Canadiens for Herbie Cain

(By Jack Calder, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Nov. 2—(CP) — Made over into younger and more aggressive forces, Detroit Red Wings and Chicago Black Hawks open the National Hockey League schedule tonight while the more highly rated clubs finish preparations for the long winter.

The Wings and the Hawks, who finished fifth and seventh respectively last season, meet at Chicago in a contest that should tell something of what their big summer dealings have done. The rest of the clubs get their baptisms within the week.

Not in years has the league known so many off-season sales and trades. Detroit and Chicago, along with New York Americans and Toronto Maple Leafs, have been leaders in the making-over, but the world champion Boston Bruins and New York Rangers and Montreal Canadiens have gone shopping too.

Schedule Closes March 17

The schedule lasts until March 17, when Detroit will be playing in Chicago again. Then the leader in the standings will be declared league champion and will enter the knockout competition for the world title along with five of the other six teams. Boston won the N.H.L. championship before going on to the Stanley Cup last spring.

Five players new to the Hawks will line up against Detroit tonight—Des Smith from the Canadiens, Doug Bentley from Drumheller, Alta.; George Allen from Rangers and Phil Hergesheimer and Les Cunningham from Cleveland of the International-American League.

Detroit's opening array includes Jim Orlando and Jack Stewart, defencemen with little big-league experience, Jack Keating of Kitchener from the Int.-Am. League, and Cecil Dillon from Rangers. Don Grosso, who joined the Red Wings the latter part of last season from Kirkland Lake, Ont., is out temporarily with a wrist injury.

Amerks Have Better Attack

The Americans, whose inaugural comes next Thursday, have landed Charlie Conacher, Harvey Jackson, Doc Romnes and Buzz Boll from Maple Leafs and Jack Thomson and Chuch Shannon from the Int.-Am. League. They had to give Sweeney Schriner for Jackson, Romnes and Boll but figure their attack has been strengthened. While Manager Red Duttton believes Conacher can be made over from a forward to a great defenceman.

Toronto's newcomers, outside the high-scoring Schriner, are almost entirely new to the major league but observers think the Leafs have grabbed the greatest bunch of rookies to come up. Jack Church, Wally Stanowski, Pete Langelle, Red Heron, Normie Mann and Phil Stein have had at least a season in the minors; Don Metz and Lex Chisholm turned professional just before the close of the last campaign; and Billy Taylor and Hank Goldup are fresh from amateur ranks.

U. of T., Queen's Really Played "Hot Potato" in Grid Battle

By Central Press Canadian

Toronto, Nov. 2—Winnipeg Blue Bombers' board of strategy would have loved to sit in and gloat at last Saturday's Queen's-Varsity game here . . . the extension plays of both teams were "hot potato" with a vengeance ......many moons will have flitted through the skies before a game is marred by 29 fumbles again .... even in mud or rain, of which there was neither on Saturday....the "least worst" team won....McGill is the first team to be dethroned this year....all other group champions still have a chance but even a second place finish, still possible for the Montreal students, would avail them nothing...... in the college loop the runner-up has to have a win or a tie against the top team to force a playoff....Jimmy Grier, orchestra leader, introduced a "trouble club" during a golf outing in Vancouver....about as big as a hammer and looking like a chipper, the weapon is wielded in one hand, left or right....strictly an unofficial stick, of course .... fans who take portable radios to football games across the line are found to be listening to the game they are watching more often than a game being played elsewhere ..... they love to pick out the mistakes the announcer makes—and get many opportunities....college football did all right by the local Argonauts this year....three of their Grade A players have been newcomers from the rah rah ranks—George Willis, snap, and Jim Farmer, secondary half both from Western and Frank Sirdevan inside wing from this city's Varsity .... Chick Evans, famous U. S. amateur golfer who recently announced his retirement, contends that "increased armaments" in golfers' bags have completely changed the game since the days when he ruled the roost... Georgie Pace, new worlds bantam champ (if the N.B.A. edict means as much as it says), certainly rates the crown....along with Montreal's Dave Castilloux he is rated tops by local fight fans, as far as visiting ring warriors are concerned ...... both boys have been matched with top ranking challengers for local fights and in almost every case have won going away.....both are fancy boxers, sharp hitters and unmatched at covering up with gloves, elbows and shoulders.

Training Camp Briefs

(By The Canadian Press)

Slowly but surely the Maroon influence is fading from the ranks of the Canadiens. With the trading of Herbie Cain for Charlie Sands of Boston Bruins, only one of six Maroons who joined the Flying Frenchmen last season remains—the veteran Cy Wentworth.

• • •

Of the four other Maroons who joined the Canadiens, Stew Evans has retired and Jimmy Ward now coaches New Haven Eagles, Canadiens' farm club. Bob Gracie is chasing pucks in the minors and Des Smith is now property of Chicago Black Hawks on an option technicality.

• • •

Toronto Maple Leafs appear before their home fans tonight for the first time in an inter-city charity bout, but Manager Conny Smythe has been denied the privilege of presenting his latest kid line. Until Don Metz suffered an ankle injury the Yannigan combination of Metz, Billy Taylor and Red Heron was ready for its Maple Leaf Gardens debut.

• • •

Unless Manager Red Dutton changes his mind New York Americans will present a David-and-Goliath defence combination. The David half will be provided by Al Murray, hockey's mightiest mite, and Dutton is satisfied Chuck Conacher is the man to play beside little Al. The big bomber is experiencing difficulty in accustoming himself to a defence post after a career as a winger, but Dutton is certain Chuck will make good.

• • •

The A's are back in Port Arthur, feeling perky after handing New York Rangers two straight lickings. They'll face some of Canada classiest amateurs Saturday when they meet Port Arthur Bear Cats, Allan Cup holders, in an exhibition affair.

• • •

• • •

Time will tell whether Blake gets what he's after but the Canadiens would find the going pretty tough minus Toe's sniping ability. He bagged the tying goal with five minutes to go to give Canadiens a 2-2 tie in Montreal last night in an exhibition game against New Haven Eagles.

BILLY MARQUART IMPRESSIVE IN HIS FIRST START

Canadian Boxer May Become Leading Welterweight in Near Future

DEFEATS BEAUHULD

Winner Floored in First Round but Comes Back to Win by Knockout

By SIDNEY GRUSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

New York, Nov. 2—(CP)—Up he's coming so watch for his name—Billy Marquart—in the bright lights reserved for the greats who perform in the tradition-soaked ring of Madison Square Garden.

He's the same Billy Marquart of Winnipeg who represented Canada at the Berlin Olympics in 1936; he's the same except for three years as a professional which have convinced Jack Hurley he's managing a boy with greater possibilities than Billy Petrolle, the old Fargo Express. And Petrolle was one of the world's greatest welters a few years back.

Marquart, a well-built youth of 23, made his bow to the Garden last night with an impressive technical knockout victory over Billy Beauhuld of Jersey City. Soon after Marquart won the acclaim of the 16,000 watching him for the first time,Tony Canzoneri ended what had been a great career by taking a three-round beating in a last futile attempt at a comeback.

Nervous, Forgetful

Nervous and forgetful in his first start in the Garden, Marquart was floored in the first round and knocked groggy. But he came back with his murderous mitts and forced the referee to halt the bout after 1:44 of the fifth round with Beauhuld bloody and beaten. It was just the kind of start Billy needed in the big time, said Hurley when it was all over.

"You can discount that beating he took in the first round," Hurley said. "They're all nervous when they hit the Garden the first time. Those people thought they saw a good fighter. Well they haven't seen anything yet. He won't go out there straight-up again."

The immediate plans for Marquart are indefinite. He can fight in the Garden again, soon, or he can go to Philadelphia. When he does come back, he'll be over the nervousness and Hurley promises an even more-impressive fighter. Billy spotted the Jersey boy five pounds at 135 1-2 pounds last night and it was impressive enough for the 16,000 fans the way he clubbed his heavier opponent.

CHALLEDON WINS PIMLICO SPECIAL

Baltimore, Nov. 2—(AP)—Challedon, champion of all racing for 1939, went on vacation today before getting back on the glory road which stands a good chance of leading him to Sun Beau's all-time high money-winning record of $376,744.

William L. Brann's colt is still nearly $135,000 short of Sun Beau's "bank account," but this bay son of Challenger II, is only three years old—and from the way he whipped Kayak II and Cravat in Alfred G. Vanderbilt's annual "dream race," the Pimlico Special, yesterday, there's no indication he's going to stop hitting the jackpot soon.

His half-length victory over Kayak in the $10,000 winner-take-all special at a mile and three-sixteenths, with Cravat a poor third, boosted his earnings after two years of racing to $252,235.

If he does any winter work after 1940 comes in, the probability is it will be in Florida. There are plenty of juicy pots at Hialeah and Tropical, headed by the $50,000 Widener Cup. Brann, who received a handsome gold cup as well as the $10,000 from the special, has said Challedon will be nominated for both the Widener and the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, just on the chance he may take his big bay to California.

WALL TO RIDE FOR W-L RANCH

Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 2—(AP)—Nick Wall, Canadian-born jockey who recently resigned as first rider for the William Zeigler stable, has signed a contract to ride for the W-L Ranch, owned by Mervin Leroy and H. L. Warner of Hollywood. He will ride only in California and is said to be paid $1,000 a month with the privilege of 10 per cent of the winnings.

Wall was born in Glace Bay, N.S., and learned about horses from the pit ponies in Nova Scotia coal mines.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

Ken J. Colling

Last week it was alleged that some of the more energetic students of the Belleville Collegiate, who are also ardent football partisans, labored long into the night in an effort to paint the Albert College grid posts a brilliant scarlet, indigo and black hue, but alas their efforts were for naught as the posts took on the conventional green, yellow and black of Albert at game time.

• • •

On Hallowe'en, however, pranksters went one step further at the Belleville Collegiate when the football posts were broken down and levelled to the ground in destruction. There is no suggestion of revenge here, as George Laughlin, physical director at B.C.I.V.S. today intimated that the posts would remain down until replaced by students of the Collegiate. As the school inter-form six-man and Bay of Quinte abbreviated "collegian" squads play on the school campus, we feel assured the damaged goal posts will be replaced pronto, and perhaps by the guilty culprits, but who will ever know?

While talking of rugby, the Peterboro' scribe seems to have "time on his hands" these days. At any rate he says he has disovered a new use for old worn out inner tubes. The kids up around the Otonabee creek apparently have a fine sense of inventive genius because they utilized old inner tubes in a new manner—padding them with old clothes and using them for shoulder pads for sandlot football games. As the Peterboro' scribe puts it, they are "stretching things far, these rubber-tired boys, and putting more bounce into their game."

Milton "Dutch" Speigelberg was in the city yesterday on leave from the Perth Regiment in Stratford. "Dutch" is a private in the Perth Regiment of the S.A.S.F., having been called to the colors after spending the summer in Belleville. "Dutch" was being counted on by Coach "Toots" Holway to bolster the Belleville juniors' defence before he was called to rejoin his military unit.

Local hockey fans will not see the fiery "Red" Creighton of Peterboro? in action this year. The Liftlock City sorrel-topped puckster has located in Owen Sound, following a summer of lacrosse in Hamilton.

Do you remember when the National Hockey League staged a benefit at Montreal two years ago tonight to raise a trust fund for the family of Les Canadiens' great Howie Morenz who died March 28, 1937. An all-star aggregation defeated a Maroons-Canadien combine 6-5 in a match that realized $11,000 in net gate receipts.

Local wrestling fans are heralding Friday night's main bout at the Arena between Rudy Epps and Dave Khoen as being the best move the new grappling promoters have made since the revival of the grunt and groan business in Belleville this fall. Actually the revived wrestling business is meeting with success and the approval of the patrons, as can be seen by the weekly increase of patronage. The reason is simply because the ringsters are dishing up some mighty fine wrestling. Fans will doubtlessly be on hand early Friday to see a native of Belleville, Chuck Thorne, in his professional debut against Tiger Daniels.

The Jersey City Giants and the Newark Bears, two of the strong teams of the International League, and crowd-drawing rivals, are all set for 1940 managers. Bert Niehoff, who won a pennant this year, has been signed again by the Giants, and Johnny Neun will lead the Bears for the third season. The New York Giants own the Jersey City club and the Yankees own Newark. These two clubs are separated by only a few miles of Jersey meadow and the game is local regardless of where it is played. The Giants and Bears are campaigning against the Shaughnessy playoff schedule for 1940. Both clubs were in the playoffs but lost this year.

Eddie Schrieder's B.C.I. senior interscholastic gridders failed in their effort to interest either the Kingston Collegiate or the Queen's juniors in an exhibition football game here for Saturday. While waiting for a C.O.S.S.A. playdown the "Collegians" should be engaged in some sort of exhibition games, but thus far have been unable to contact willing opponents. In the meantime the Lindsay and Peterboro' interscholastic squads are staging a merry battle along with Bowmanville for the supremacy of the Lake Shore loop.

Queen's still entertain high hopes of finishing in a play-off with Western in the senior Interscholastic group. The Mustangs took a fall out of Presbyterians on opening day, but Queen's has surprised all by not losing another game since. As the first and second placed teams in the senior intercollegiate group play-off, providing the top-placed team does not go through the season undefeated, so Queen's are banking everything on a win over the Mustangs at Kingston a week Saturday, regardless as to what hapens in Montreal against McGill this week.

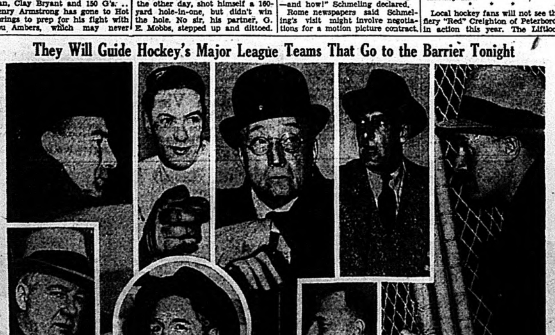
They Will Guide Hockey's Major League Teams That Go to the Barrier Tonight



Tonight the National Hockey League begins its twenty-third season when Detroit Red Wings and Chicago Black Hawks, two teams undreamed of when the league was formed, play in Chicago to pry the lid off a season that will run from now until the Stanley Cup playoffs are decided in early April. For the second successive year the major puck loop is composed of seven teams, and here are presented pictorially, the boss of the league and the bosses of the teams that go to make it up, seen in various moods at various times. From tonight—or shortly afterwards, whenever their respective teams go to the post—considerable will be heard from most of them, as they attempt to steer their clubs to the Cup both on and off the ice. Leaning over the boards at the left is Art Ross of Boston Bruins; pointing next to him, Paul Thompson, of Chicago Black Hawks; and in the centre, the president of the league since it was founded, Frank Calder. Next to the president, caught in a mood more turbulent than usual, Lester Patrick, Rangers; and peering through the screen at the right, Conny Smythe, Toronto Maple Leafs. Moving to the left again, we see Jack Adams, Detroit Red Wings, casting a sidelong glance; vociferous Red Dutton of New York Americans in the circle; and Jules Dugal of Canadiens in the small square.

CARELESS DRIVING CHARGE UPHELD

Allisonville Resident Pays Fine for Overturning Car in Ditch

Picton, Nov. 2—Found guilty of driving a motor car in a careless manner, Leonard Phillips of Allisonville, was fined $5 and costs of $4.75, in Magistrate's Court here yesterday.

The accident occurred Oct. 28 on the Belleville highway at the Swamp Road intersection. The driver lost control of the car when unable to make the curve and it went into the ditch. One wheel of the car was smashed but the three occupants escaped injury.

Ernest Cole, a passenger, said the car went into the ditch when the brakes were applied. Arthur Burd, the third passenger, said the car was travelling about 35 miles per hour.

County Constable James Lovelace said the car was travelling too fast to make the curve.

Out of this accident arose another charge. The car was sold to Murney Ferguson, local wrecker and he had resold it. He was charged with not having registered the purchase and resale of the car and was fined $10 and costs on each charge.

Pleading guilty to being intoxicated in a public place, Henry Deline was fined $10 and costs and given until Nov. 15 to pay, or failing that, to receive ten days in jail.

Not a great deal of damage was done on Hallowe'en though hundreds thronged the streets. It being pay day for the H. and P. E. Regiment, extra precautions were taken to guard against wilful damage or disturbance. Some thirty soldiers were designated as pickets and patrolled the streets, this being a pay day procedure. Two Belleville officers assisted local officers. No soldiers were permitted in beverage rooms after six o'clock. Dances and parties attracted many. Many children paraded the streets, dressed in a variety of costume.

The Stars Say

For Friday, November 3
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

UNUSUALLY promising and propitious planetary aspects are forecast although there are certain tenacious and difficult obstacles to be successfully negotiated. With determination, diligence and sound judgment, not complicated by whim, fancy or erratic impulses, there is good prospect of memorable achievements and fulfilled ambitions, with unusual business, cultural and personal gratifications and pleasures. Possibly romance, courtship, marriage or delightful friendships may crown such fair fortunes.

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a year of great and happy fulfillments, despite some tenacious and probably disappointing angles. In business as well as intimate affairs there are promises of cultural satisfaction and romantic gratifications, culminating in a high degree of pleasure.

A child born on this day may be bounteously endowed with talents, forces, faculties and aspirations that make for a conspicuously happy and successful life. But it may have to work judiciously to attain its objectives and to overcome certain moody characteristics.

Winning Address

Following is the text of the address "Labor-Saving Devices on the Farm" delivered by Lois Weaver, 12, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Weaver, R.R. No. 3 Stirling, and winner of the Hastings County Public-Speaking Championship held in Shire Hall yesterday under the sponsorship of the Agricultural Advisory Board of the Hastings County Council.

Little Miss Weaver, a pupil of Miss Esme Cole, S.S. No. 3, Rawdon Township, will represent the county at the district championships to be held in Brighton soon. She is the second consecutive pupil to bring the county title to her school section, a 1938 pupil of Miss Cole attaining that honor last year.

Her address drew the approving comment of Mr. J. O. Herity, chief judge of the contest. "It differs from other addresses in its originality, construction and different treatment of a new angle to that common subject 'The Farmer'" he said. The address follows:

"Agriculture is one of the first industries known to mankind. When God created Adam, he placed him in a beautiful garden, with instructions "to dress and keep it" and the farmer has tilled the land to feed the world ever since. So with all due regard to other necessary industries, we maintain that farming is the basic one. If this be true, then surely the farmer should be most highly respected for his work's sake. But is he? On the contrary, the farmer has been the most ridiculed of men. He is a hayseed, a rube, the funniest thing in the comics; and why? Why does the farmer sometimes appear at a disadvantage when he goes to the city? Is it shabby clothes, or slouching walk? I think in many cases the answer is farm drudgery. When a farmer toils from early morn until late in the evening, following a team up and down, up and down, with the milking and other chores thrown in, he is too weary when night comes for reading or any other self-improvement. He tumbles into bed to rest his weary frame for the next day's labour. He is leg weary and brain weary and wonders why his lot is such a hard one. On his trips to the city he probably wears boots and overalls—"Good enough for an old farmer like me!"

"But during recent years, a change has gradually taken place on our Ontario farms. Farming and farmers have "picked up" and on the city street it is hard to distinguish the farmer from any other business man (for the successful farmer makes a business of his work). The farm homes are beginning to claim as their right some of the life-brightening and labor-saving conveniences that were once thought to belong to the city alone. Electricity and machinery that goes with it are being used in the isolated country districts—where they are most needed."

"As we drive along our beautiful Ontario roads we see many evidences of the new trend toward the use of labor-saving machinery. Here is a tractor making its way up and down, leaving 2 or 3 curling furrows behind it. Surely this is not the field that was just nicely started when we passed yesterday."

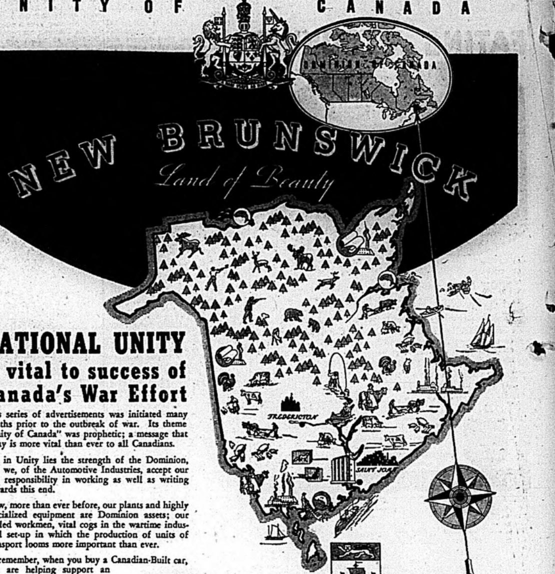
"Farther along we see a potato digger at work. See the lines of tubers it leaves behind it. Mr. Farmer now grows acres of potatoes when he used to consider a few rows enough. But how did he plant so many? With a planter, of course! And how will he market them? With his truck, he can reach the market by daybreak, and be home before dinner."

"For further evidence of the labour savers we must visit Mr. Farmer's barns some evening. Why they looked like a summer hotel as we approach, with lights gleaming from every window. Inside we see a hydro-operated milking machine at work. Yes, they now milk 20 cows with the same expenditure of time and labour formerly needed to hand milk 8. Water is pumped, feed is ground, milk is separated, all by this wonderful electric power."

"But after all, it is in the farm home that work savers are most fully appreciated. Can you estimate their value to the over-worked farm mother? A power washer is the best investment a farmer ever make. In 2 hours the mother can finish a washing that used to take the greater part of the day and she will be able to smile at supper-time instead of being too tired to do anything but scold. The family ironing, too, becomes play instead of drudgery. No more weary trudging between a roaring stove and ironing board on sweltering August days. No more black smudges on dad's best shirt collar! Mother would rather iron than go visiting."

"Time will not permit me to describe all the other marvels of power in the home—the electric range, the vacuum cleaner, the refrigerator, the lights in every room at the press of a button, the running water. (Oh! yes, the old oaken bucket may have been picturesque, but water on tap, hot or cold is more comfortable). And we can now acquire these new conveniences without sacrificing any of the old delights of country life. We can still enjoy the fresh air and sunshine, outdoor work, and the freedom produced by rolling meadows and woodland. Will the boys and girls leave the farm now for the bright lights of the city? Never! The city has nothing better to offer us than the broad acres of old Ontario, and we are proud, indeed, to be her loyal sons and daughters."

★UNITY OF CANADA



★NATIONAL UNITY is vital to success of Canada's War Effort

This series of advertisements was initiated many months prior to the outbreak of war. Its theme "Unity of Canada" was prophetic; a message that today is more vital than ever to all Canadians.

For in Unity lies the strength of the Dominion, and we, of the Automotive Industries, accept our full responsibility in working as well as writing towards this end.

Now, more than ever before, our plants and highly specialized equipment are Dominion assets; our skilled workmen, vital cogs in the wartime industrial set-up in which the production of units of transport looms more important than ever.

So remember, when you buy a Canadian-Built car, you are helping support an industry that distributes more than $22,000,000.00 in wages and salaries to many thousand families dependent on the industry itself. Add to these the families that are supported by industries supplying raw and finished materials to the Automobile manufacturers, and you get an idea of what this activity means to the Canadian Home Market.

A busy Automotive Industry in wartime is a live asset indeed—a truly national war enterprise.

"In the gigantic struggle upon which Canada has embarked by the side of the Mother Country, New Brunswick offers every assistance in the hope that her contribution will so help to strengthen the hand of the British Empire that she and her allies will emerge victorious over the forces of lawlessness and aggression. Worthy sons of courageous fathers who served King and Country in the Great War are already offering themselves in their thousands. The great natural resources of New Brunswick, her farm products, the rich harvest of her forests, her fish, her minerals, are at the disposal of His Majesty. Her all-year ocean port of Saint John stands ready to handle the great stream of goods which will pour through from all over Canada to help the Motherland in her hour of great necessity. New Brunswick in the past has taken second place to none in her loyalty to the British flag and the British tradition—she is prepared to demonstrate this once more to the world."

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Nov. 2—(CP)— The medium-priced golds were in demand in the second hour on Toronto exchange today and the index for the group was up at noon by a half point. Other indices were unchanged. Industrials appeared to be waiting for the vote in Washington on the neutrality measure, scheduled for the late afternoon.

Preston sold up to 1.83 for a gain of 13 cents to a new high and substantial gains were boarded by Sigma, Lamaque, East Malartic and Hard Rock. Broulan and God's Lake were penny features. In the base metal group nickel and Noranda were firm to strong while some of the cheaper issues were off.

Prices were slightly stronger for Royalite and Home Oil and steady for other western oils.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Nov. 2—(AP)—Stocks pursued a devious course in today's market with several specialties edging forward in the face of declining trends for most leaders. Moderate activity at the start gave way to sluggishness later and losses running to a point or more were reduced near the fourth hour.

Traders apparently were unenthused by prospects of a quick passage by the House of the arms embargo repeal, and Europe's "waiting war" again lacked speculative stimulus.

Dome and McIntyre Porcupine fell back a trifle among Canadian stocks but Lake Shore posted a small gain. Dominion 4s held unchanged in the bond market.

A bit backward most of the time —some eventually revived— were U. S. Steel, Youngstown Sheet, General Motors, Chrysler, Boeing, United Aircraft, Sperry, American Smelting, Union Carbide, Allied Chemical, General Electric and Johns-Manville.

"BUSINESS IS LOWER—HURRAH!"

Olympia, Wash., Nov. 2 (AP)—Business is falling off sharply, thank you, the State Liquor Board reports. The Board said it was "pleased to be able to report" that hard liquor sales in 1939 were the lowest in two years.

Eggs Continue Rise On Toronto Market

Toronto, Nov. 2.—The prevailing quiet spell caused the butter market to sag at Toronto yesterday, while eggs continued on their upward trend.

An easier tone developed on the butter market as trading remained extremely dull. Sellers experienced more difficulty in obtaining 28c per pound for top-grade Ontario creamery solids, and some sales went through wholesale channels at ¼c below this level. Offerings at the lower figure, however, were not being pressed on the market.

Demand for fresh eggs appeared to be in excess of available supplies. It was reported that offerings of fresh receipts to brokers were practically negligible. Demand was holding up and undergrades shared in the better movement on the market yesterday in view of the shortage and high prices of top grades. Prices were again increased from one to two cents per dozen on the three top grades in the graded division and on the two top grades in the retail section.

Montreal Produce.

OBITUARY

MURNEY ROBINSON
(Hungerford Township)

Death came suddenly to Murney Robinson, a well known resident of Hungerford Township, near Chapman's Corners, on Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 1st., about four o'clock. He was assisting a neighbor, Mr. Herman Tucker, in doing some work on his farm when he was taken with a heard seizure and expired immediately. Dr. Harold Welsh, M.P.P., Roslin, Coroner for the district, was called and he decided that an inquest was unnecessary.

The late Mr. Robinson was born 52 years ago in Hungerford Township, his parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Robinson. All his life was passed in the district and he was well esteemed. Many friends and acquaintances regret his sudden passing and much sympathy is entertained for those left to mourn his loss. In religion he was a member of the United Church and the funeral service will be conducted in Bethel church Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

E. Hodge, editor of the same paper. Colored pictures will be shown of the recent Provincial contest for Junior farmers. G. D. McCullough was winner in the Sidney contest and finished seventeenth in the Provincial contest. Prizes will be awarded at the meeting for those winning in the local contest, these prizes being donated by the merchants of Belleville and the Women's Institutes. There will be a musical program and a delightful lunch will be served by the ladies of the club.

AIR SCHEME OF

Canadian Factories to Benefit

Large scale training means large numbers of training craft must be provided, with a good supply of replacements. If the arms embargo is lifted, United States factories will share in the orders, but the bulk of the business will probably go to Canadian factories, it is believed in air circles here. Orders of the Canadian Government for training machines have recently been tripled, it is reported, though official secrecy regarding such orders is closely maintained.

Canadian aircraft manufacturers completed arrangements before the war broke out to build aircraft for Great Britain and the general understanding is that such orders will be at least doubled in view of the needs of the Allies for warcraft now that hostilities have started. Factories are being built by a group of Canadian companies associated for the purpose and actual production is expected shortly.

Supply Mission Here

A British war supply mission is here to co-operate with the Canadian war supply board headed by Wallace R. Campbell in providing war equipment for the Allied forces and Canadian production of warplanes is expected to be further augmented.

There are reports in the aviation trade that Jack Sanderson, veteran Fort Erie, Ont., airplane manufacturer, and J. A. McCurdy, associated with the first Canadian airplane flights on Cape Breton Island early in the century, will constitute an aircraft production board to collaborate with the manufacturing industry to organize production.

If the wartime plans are carried out, Canada will have a close linked chain of first class airports capable of accommodating large and fast machines, and there will be vast aircraft factories fitted to turn out the most modern types of planes. There will be thousands of trained aviation personnel for both air and ground duties when peace comes and civil aviation resumes normal traffic.

Canada in Path

Long before war came, aviation men with vision saw an important future for Canada in the air world. This Dominion is closest North American territory to the British Isles for a trans-Atlantic service. The Trans-Canada Air Lines Service provides a ready link with Pacific services for a service to the Orient and Australia, and if services open up by the North Pole route between this continent and Europe, Canada again lies directly in the path.

The war has had a more immediate effect on one phase of Canadian aviation — club flying. The call to the colors has sent hundreds of young men to the clubs for flying instruction and has brought old pilots out from retirement for refreshner courses before they try their wings again. The twenty-two clubs report flying time increased 2,810 hours or 17.2 per cent for the first nine months of the year compared with the same period of last year. The civil aviation branch of the Dominion transport department is swamped with applications for licences.

MANY GERMAN

One Says Little Difference Between Nazism and Communism

In the correspondent's presence, the officer questioned a captured flier on the impression provoked in Germany by Hitler's agreement with Soviet Russia.

"As things now stand," the prisoner replied, "there is very little difference between National Socialism and Communism."

A Bavarian Reservist, about 30, said he had no idea there was a war on the Western Front until Sept. 14.

Another Bavarian reservist, about 40, said the people in his part of Germany had long ago lost all confidence in the Nazi regime. The first he knew there was a war, he said, was when he was taken prisoner on Sept. 15.

Five privates in the regular German army declared, one after the other, that in their opinion Hitler was to blame for the war.

On the other hand, a young Second Lieutenant, downed Sept. 24, said: "I am not a member of the Nazi party, but I entirely approve its doctrine and policy. I don't believe the war will become intensified between France and Germany. If that should happen, however, it would be all over before the end of the year."

The correspondent was also permitted to see letters found on the Germans when they were captured.

A Discouraged Father

One letter, written Sept. 10 by a German father to his son in the Westwall, said: "We hope and pray to God that all will remain quiet in the west. The war won't be long then.

"How much those who have been stripped of all tneir goods have to complain about! We hope we'll be spared that. Bread and potatoes are still on the market, but everything else can be bought only with cards.

"We receive a quarter of a ton of coal a month, but that won't be enough. They have already come twice and requistioned our horses—21 head altogether, I think.

"Some of the youngest men have left, and 'they' have called up the 19-year-olds. I could tell you a lot more, but I can't trust too much to paper."

tives in addressing a note to Russia on the Finnish negotiations and his criticism of a government bill now before Congress are not the sort of remarks the United States is accustomed to hear from spokesmen of frienrly countries.

Molotoff spoke two months after Germany started the war by invading Poland. The fact that a speech could attract so much attention after two months of fighting emphasizes the slowness of the preent war to emerge from the diplomatic stage. The belligerent powers are still jockeying for position, still unsure of the ultimate position of neutral states.

PREMIER HEPBURN

Right to divert water from the Hudson Bay watershed into Lake Superior and to export surplus power from Ontario to the United States denied Mr. Hepburn two years ago and now reported to be a condition to his present co-operation, would be guaranteed under the new treaty proposed by the United States.

Likely To Increase.

It is stated in Ottawa that Mr. Hepburn has decided Ontario's power requirements are likely to increase shortly due to wartime industrial needs and this factor has resulted in his about-face.

(Washington last week President Roosevelt said the old St. Lawrence Treaty had been "taken out and dusted off" but did not make any definite statement. He had been advised of the resumed discussions between Ontario and Ottawa, however.)

The 1938 waterway plan called for its completion by 1949, development to be in easy stages under the control of an international commission. It is thought here that the project, particularly in its power development phases, may be speeded up, if it can be arranged, in order to ensure that there will be no shortage of power for Ontario industry geared to war-time production.

The premier has done more than withdraw opposition. He has sent to Ottawa to confer with federal government officials, Dr. T. H. Hogg, chairman of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission.

Could Divert Water.

Under the 1938 proposal, Ontario would receive not only power to be developed on the St. Lawrence, but would receive permission to divert water from the Albany River basin in Northern Ontario into the Great Lakes, the water so diverted to be utilized in the development of more power at Niagara Falls. Ontario now uses at Niagara all the water allowable under international treaty.

The 1938 proposal would give to Ontario also the right to export power to the United States. Already Canada exports small quantities of power. But when in 1938 Ontario sought to receive authority from the federal parliament passed a bill giving it complete authority over power export.

The Ontario Hydro system is rapidly nearing complete absorption of the power it has under contract from privately-owned developments in Quebec. St. Lawrence development would increase the margin between anticipated peak demand and supply anticipated within the next few years. A safeguard against unsaleable power would, it is believed, be the right to export power to United States industrial centres along the St. Lawrence River.

GERMAN

These commentators expressed belief that Adolf Hitler had decided on the advice of his general staff to postpone any general offensive until spring. They theorized that recent German feeler attacks had been staged by the high command to demonstrate to the Fuehrer the impracticability of a winter campaign.

The War Ministry, in its morning communique, dismissed operations in the west with the statement: "Night generally quiet".

Hitler Outmanoeuvred.

Summing up the first two months of the war, Henri de Kerillis, declared in the newspaper L'Euoque that Hitler had been outmanoeuvred in both diplomatic and military fields.

Having won an easy victory over his "weakest adversary" (Poland), Hitler now finds himself in "the ridiculous and paradocical position of launching a peace offensive without the shadow of a victory over France or Great Britain," de Kerillis wrote.

He said Germany is "without a single ally", that she has been gravely checked by the Turkish accords with France and Britain, that she has lost to Russia her age old position in the Baltic, and that her march toward the east has been checked.

Novel Appeal Launched By Olympic Committee

Many citizens were surprised recently on opening their morning mail to find a cheque for a dollar, drawn by the Canadian Olympic Committee and payable to the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association, with a covering letter explaining this unique method of raising funds for work among enlisted men. Already many have carried out the request to match the cheque with one of their own and the campaign is off to a good start.

Throughout the last war and afterwards, the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association was active in providing sporting equipment and entertainment for the troops. Most of those men who formed part of Canada's mighty army of 600,000 have reason to remember the S.P.A. for the good work that they did. Now the Association's services are again in demand and they hope that with this initial appeal they will be able to meet all requests from the various camps throughout the province.

As is pointed out in the letter, the money raised here will be spent in this district as required. When Canada draws together her various units for brigade exercises, either in Canada or in England, the S.P.A. will, of course, transfer its main seat of operations to that camp.

According to reports from general headquarters of the S.P.A., requests for equipment are more than keeping pace with donations received. Already about $5,000 worth of equipment has been distributed with further requests to be filled as soon as possible. The continued support of people throughout the province is necessary if this good work is to be carried on without interruptions for lack of funds.

CESAREWITCH TO CANTATRICE II

Race, Originally Scheduled for Oct. 25, Was Postponed on Account of War

Newmarket, England, Nov. 2 (CP) —Sir Alfred Butt's Cantatrice II, a filly by Fiterari out of Queen Iseult, today won the Cesarewitch, defeating F. Haslam's Cheerful Star by four lengths. Jaxs Rank's Black Speck was third, a length farther back.

Cantatrice II started at 7 to 2 and Cheerful Star and Black Speck each at 20 to 1. A field of 35 ran, Sir Hugo Cunliffe-Owen's Finish having been withdrawn at the post. Other late scratches were Verjus and Brocanteur.

The race, originally scheduled for Oct. 25, was postponed on account of the war. The distance was cut from the traditional two miles, two furlongs to two miles, 24 yards. It was run over the summer course as the winter circuit is being used for military purposes.

Canada May Make 4,000 Chassis For Australia

CANADA MAY MAE ETC. -F—

Sydney, Australia, Nov. 2—(CP Cable)—Canada is likely to benefit as a result of Australia's expanded defence program.

Prime Minister Robert Menzies intimated today that at least half of the motor chassis needed for the construction locally of 4,000 army vehicles will be imported. Industrialists expect Canada to gain the order, as it is believed here she could fulfil it more quickly and more cheaply than Britain.

J. V. Fairbairn, head of the Australian mission now in Ottawa, is expected to be asked to arrange details of the chassis shipments. Simultaneously, it is thought, he will also investigate the supply of airplan parts for the building here of air force training craft.

SCORES ARRESTED IN TRANSYLVANIA

Bucharest, Nov. 2 (CP-Havas)—A usually reliable source said that scores of Hungarian residents of Transylvania have been arrested by Rumanian authorities in what is believed to be a widespread Nazi-supported plot to hamper Rumanian military movements and promote dissension between Hungary and Rumania.

Most of the prisoners were reported to be Hungarians who recently joined the government-sponsored "National Renaissance Front" allegedly to cloak their activities against Rumanian interests in Transylvania, which was ceded to Rumania by Hungary under the terms of the post war treaties.

Mischa Levitzki Displays Complete Mastery of Piano

Famous Pianist and Composer Pleases Large Audience With His Rendering of Melodic Numbers

MANY ENCORES

That the name, Mischa Levitzki, is one to conjure with among the great of the modern musical world was revealed to Belleville audiences when this famous pianist opened the Canadian Concert Association series in the Collegiate Auditorium Thursday evening. Familiar to many through the medium of radio it was an added joy to music lovers to meet him in person. Born in Russia of naturalized American parents, he began his piano studies at the age of seven, and in 1914 his debut in Berlin at the age of fifteen was a sensation, his technical powers astounding his audience. His American debut was in 1916 and during the years of his concert tours his art has ranked him with the foremost musicians of his time. Belleville public owes an immeasurable debt of gratitude to the Canadian Concert Association for the privilege of hearing, in the city, such a renowned artist.

Cordial greetings from the committee to the members of the Belleville Association were conveyed by the president, Mr. C. A. Cameron, K.C., M.P., in his brief address previous to the concert. Mr. Cameron spoke of the pleasure of members to welcome back to the city Miss Leona Riggs whose efforts in connection with the Association had been in a great measure responsible for the success of the organization. Mr. Cameron introduced Mr. C. A. Mitford of Toronto, director of the Canadian Concert Association who commended the Belleville group and the other associations throughout the Dominion who are carrying on the British tradition of "business as usual." Mr. Mitford referred to Miss Riggs' earnest work in the interests of the Association whose concerts have brought so much pleasure to Belleville citizens.

To Mr. Mitford fell the honor of introducing Mischa Levitzki, and his Belleville audience found in his personality the same charm and sincerity of manner that his music conveys. Mr. Levitzki graciously announced his program, since the printed notices had not arrived, and explained the general plan which it would follow. The program, arranged with a rare understanding and appreciation, was one that filled his hearers with delight and made the evening unforgettable.

His first group containing as it did, Beethoven's Apassionata Sonata showed the artist's wealth of technical resources and his interpretative ability which gave fullest expression to the intent of the composer. Opening with the Sonata in A Major (in one movement) by Scarlatti, a charming number played with directness of style, the group continued with melody from "Orpheus", by Gluck in which the pianist brought out the full, rich melody characteristic of this composition. In the Apassionata Sonata, considered one of Beethoven's most compact and logical pieces of melodic writing, Mr. Levitzki's brilliant command of his art was most apparent. The theme of the Sonata is that of Shakespeare's "Tempest", and is one of continued interest, thoroughly maintained by the performance last evening.

Chopin's Numbers Pleasing

The artist's love for Chopin influenced strongly his program, the entire second group and many of his encores being chosen from this composer's melodious piano works. The variety of mood and exquisite charm in these numbers, the brilliant and moving rendition as the pianist gave full value to each succeeding piece, made this part of the program especially satisfying. The numbers included Impromptu F Sharp Major; Valse Brillante, A Sharp Major; Fantasie Impromptu; two preludes A Major and F Major; Scherzo in C Sharp Major; Waltz in G Sharp Major and Etude on the Black Keys. Aeolian Harp Etude was included in his encores.

Turning to modern piano works for his final group, Mr. Levitzki presented one of his own numbers Arabesque Valsante, another of his own compositions, Waltz in A Major being used as an encore. Familiar to many, these numbers achieved new beauty with the touch of the composer and the audience paid tribute to a remarkable talent in composition and performance. Ravel's The Fountain was played with flashing brilliancy and color while for a further example of modern writing the pianist chose, from the most popular and picturesque material of the Debussy repertoire the Children's Corner, that amusing piece of French ragtime "The Golliwog's Cake Walk." The supreme artistry of Levitzki, however, was demonstrated by the great power and tone with which he played the beautiful La Campanella by Paganini, from an arrangement by Liszt.

Artist Generous With Encores

An ovation greeted the artist as his program came to a close, and so enchanted was his audience by the moving quality of his performance that they called again and again for an encore. With the generosity of the truly great, Mr. Levitzki dispensed encores with a lavish hand. These final numbers included, as well as the compositions already mentioned, Andante Capriccioso by Mendelssohn, closing the program on a brilliant note.

$6,500,000 TOTAL OF SENATOR'S ESTATE

Toronto, Nov. 2 (CP)—Estate of Senator Frank P. O'Connor has been valued, for succession duty purposes, at $6,500,000, it was learned today. The greater part of the estate was comprised of a personal holding company, Candies Investments, Ltd. Senator O'Connor was founder of Laura Secord Candy Shops in Canada and Fanny Farmer Shops in the United States.

Candies Investments, Ltd., was valued at $4,500,000. Senator O'Connor held 1,996 of its 2,000 shares.

Living Birthrate Lower

Quebec, Nov. 2 (CP) — Quebec Province's living birthrate for August last was 19.6, one of the lowest August figures on record here, it has been announced by the Quebec Health Ministry. Living births during the month totalled 5,377 compared to 6,572 in August, 1938.

There were 2,258 marriages, 238 less than in the corresponding month last year, while the death total of 395 was 95 under the total for August, 1938.

12 NEW BOMBERS FOR GREAT BRITAIN REACH NEW YORK

New York, Nov. 2 (CP)—Three new monoplane bombers, ordered by the British Air Ministry from United States manufacturers, arrived here yesterday from the Pacific coast bringing to 12 the total of bombers at one airport here ready for immediate shipment to Britain in the event the United States arms embargo is repealed.

The 12 planes have been flown here from the coast in easy stages over the past week or 10 days.

GREEK-ITALIAN PACT PRAISED IN ROME AS BALKAN SECURITY

Rome, Nov. 2 —(AP)— Athens dispatches reporting an Italian-Greek peace agreement were regarded in diplomatic circles today as fresh evidence of Premier Mussolini's leadership in efforts to keep war out of the Balkans.

(The Greek announcement announced an exchange of letters with Italy "contributing to the preservation of peace in this part of Europe.")

Nothing has been disclosed here concerning the Italian-Greek negotiations, but diplomats heard two days ago that the two states were about to sign a non-aggression pact.

Foreign circles stated Italy now is on good terms with the Balkan countries which lie within Rome's sphere of influence. These sources considered her relations with Turkey satisfactory although Italy was not considered likely to sign an agreement with that power since it might give the appearance that Mussolini was lining up with Great Britain and France, with whom Turkey signed a mutual aid pact Oct. 19.

Farmer Said He Was Going to Die and He Did

Athens, Ont., Nov. 2 (CP)—Theodore Foley, 70-years-old and in ill health, felt death was near before he went to bed last night.

A few hours later, he awakened, asked for a drink, sank back and died. He had farmed for many years.

Duke of Gloucester Visits Front Line

By DREW MIDDLETON
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

With the British Expeditionary Force in France, Nov. 2 (AP) — The Duke of Gloucester, Major General in charge of Liaison between British general headquarters and the men in the field, told foreign correspondents yesterday that he did not know when action would start because "I can't read Mr. Hitler's mind no better than you can".

The Duke strode into a wayside inn for coffee and a smoke, and there met the correspondents. He shook hands all around, said it was "beastly weather".

He smoked continually. He had three cigarettes in twenty minutes, gesticulating with each.

The Duke of Gloucester, who was a captain in his own regiment when King Edward VIII abdicated, said he had seen the Duke of Windsor "twice since the show started".

He seemed as anxious as the newest private for action and admitted all he had heard was "a German plane was shot down near here on Monday."

MANION CHARGES PATRONAGE AND FAVORITISM USED

Conservative Leader Issues Statement to Correct Impression, He Says

OPPOSITION AS CRITIC

Dr. Manion Declares Government Must Bear Full Responsibility of Praise or Blame

Ottawa, Nov. 2 (CP)—Political patronage and favoritism continues in the King government's administration of Canada's war effort, Conservative leader Manion charged today in a statement.

"I must protest strongly the continuance of political patronage and favoritism in Canada's war work," said the opposition leader.

The primary purpose of the statement, he said, however, was to correct a popular impression the Conservative opposition in the House of Commons was consulted from time to time by the government. This was not the case and Mr. Manion held the government probably was following the best course in keeping full control of the war program in its own hands, leaving the opposition at liberty to criticize.

Says Responsibility on Gov't.

"The government are taking full responsibility for the carrying on of Canada's part in the war and therefore they are entitled to whatever praise or blame goes with their acts," said Dr. Manion.

The government, he added, must assume full responsibility for the "very regrettable lack of military preparations which has been apparent to all observers since the declaration of war."

Dr. Manion said he had recently received letters stating the writers had been refused government orders because they were not on the preferred patronage list.

"I submit that if Canada is to get a united war effort it is high time that this pernicious system should be eliminated. When all are making sarifices it is no time for political favoritism," he said.

In view of such incidents he suggested parliament should be called early in January "in order that we may have a balance sheet before us in regard to all war activities, with the accompanying parliamentary privilege of examination, enquiry and discussion."

Text of Statement

If one may judge by the letters and visits received by me daily, there seems to be an impression across Canada that the King Government very frequently consults with me, as Leader of the National Conservative Party, that they ask our co-operation, and that we are therefore equally responsible with them for Canada's conduct of the war and equally capable of giving favors such as contracts, appointments, and so forth. The purpose of this statement is to correct this impression and clarify the situation.

It is true that in the special war session called early in September to give authority to the Government to organize Canada's war effort, the National Conservative Party loyally offered to co-operate with the Government in advancing that program; but since the close of the session on Sept. 13 our party have never been called in for consultation or advice, nor have we been given any information other than what we read in the daily press.

The Government are taking full responsibility for the carrying on of Canada's part in the war, and therefore they are entitled to whatever praise or blame goes with their acts.

Full Responsibility

Certainly they will have to take full responsibility for the very regrettable lack of military preparation which has been apparent to all observers since the declaration of war, as our party in the sessions of 1938 and 1939 repeatedly warned them of Canada's unpreparedness; but, despite those warnings, the war came upon us with a serious shortage of clothes and shoes for the soldiers and a general lack of defence equipment, though over $100,000,000 has been spent by the National Defence Department during the past three years.

However, considering everything, the course followed by the Government in keeping full control of our war program is probably best for Canada, as, under our Parliamentary system, an alert and constructively critical opposition is second only in importance to the government itself. This, of course, suggests that in future we will feel ourselves at liberty to criticise when that action seems to be in the public interest, and not continue, as we have been doing, to avoid criticism of the government even when we felt that certain incidents deserved it.

Against Patronage

Since I am making a statement, there is another matter of importance against which I must protest strongly, namely, the continuance of political patronage and favoritism in Canada's war work. There has been a steady stream of letters from all parts of Canada to me complaining of this, as a result of which I wrote to the Prime Minister, on September 22 last, protesting against these tactics. In the special session I had very strongly suggested the elimination of political patronage, and Mr. King was very enthusiastic in his reply endorsing my position, but according to my reports the practice is still in control in many if not all parts of Canada.

Only yesteday a letter from an important center in the Maritime provinces informed me that a permanent official who handles government purchases had refused the writer's company the privilege of submitting estimates because the official said he "had no instructions to change the regular (Liberal) list that he had been using". A day or two before that, a letter from British Columbia told me of a reliable company there being refused business because they were not "on the preferred patronage list." And I have had protests along similar lines from nearly all other important points in Canada.

I submit that if Canada is to get a united war effort it is high time that this pernicious system should be eliminated. When all are making sacrifices it is no time for political favoritism.

Constructive Critic

In view of these incidents— and many others could be quoted —it should be made clear that the official opposition has not abdicated its duty as a constructive critic in the interests of Canada and the Empire. It might also be suggested that the House of Commons be called early in January in order that we may have a balance sheet before us in regard to all war activities, with accompanying parliamentary privilege of examination, enquiry and discussion.

Canada needs a great national effort to co-ordinate our resources for the purpose of carrying out our part in the war. All loyal Canadians want this, and they are not getting it—partly, at any time, because of these irregularities. While we are aiming at equality of sacrifice and service, there should also be equality of opportunity, with any chance of profiteering eliminated.

It is duty and responsibility of the government to give a proper lead in all these matters, avoiding politics and banishing patronage and favoritism from Canada's war effort. That is the only way in which Canada can do her full part in this time of national and international crisis.

Despite the loss of merchant ships "nothing has occurred to shake our confidence in our ability to overcome the submarine menace," Mr. Chamberlain told the House.

Striking Demonstration

Referring to the Empire, Mr. Chamberlain, with Hon. T. A. Crerar of Canada and other Dominion ministers in one of the galleries, said: "We have had in the last few days a striking demonstration of the united determination of the Empire."

"From Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, New Zealand, the Union of South Africa, and India have come cabinet ministers and representatives who have travelled thousands of miles in order to make personal contact with the ministers in this country and see with their own eyes the gigantic effort in which we are engaged," the Prime Minister continued.

"Discussions with these representatives have already begun and we are considering with them how best to coordinate the contribution each of us can make to our common task. The Empire has already shown how generous and wholehearted is its spirit of cooperation.

"The fuller knowledge we shall now gain of the plans of the different governments as a result of the presence of their ministerial representatives here will be of great value to us. In their turn we are confident that the Dominion Governments and the Government of India will find the first-hand impressions of their representatives will afford them invaluable aid in gaining fuller appreciation of our common problems and of the best and quickest means of solving them.

"Equally striking is the wholehearted cooperation we are receiving from all parts of the Empire, including Burma, and from the Colonies."

Discusses Speech

In discussing Molotoff's speech, Mr. Chamberlain said:

"In the international field, the outstanding feature of the week was the speech made on Oct. 31 by the People's Commissar for Foreign Affairs of the Soviet Union.

"M. Molotoff's speech, which had been eagerly awaited in Berlin but which I imagine had occasioned some disappointment in that quarter, has been carefully studied by His Majesty's Government who have noted with interest its definition of the Soviet Government's future aims.

"I remember that in an earlier speech on May 31 M. Molotoff issued a warning that his Government would not be drawn into international conflicts. He said also on that occasion 'we stand for the cause of peace and for the prevention of any sort of development of aggression.' That is also theposition of His Majesty's Government and I am not disposed to disturb myself over the flights of fancy in which M. Molotoff indulged when describing the aims of the Allies.

"We have stated those aims ourselves in plain terms and I am confident that they are fully appreciated by the great majority of the nations of the world."

An Equal Threat.

Recalling that he had already expressed deep satisfaction over the messages received after the outbreak of hostilities from all empire territories assuring the British government of their support, Mr. Chamberlain added:

"We did not ask for these messages. The colonies have not been forced into war by Great Britain against their will. The action of so many peoples of various races is witness to their consciousness that the threat to Great Britain is equally a threat to the freedom and wellbeing which has been assured to them under British rule."

Although to begin with the principal colonial effort would be in the economic domain and would consist of helping Great Britain by shipment of raw materials and foodstuffs, Mr. Chamberlain said he would like to express gratitude to the many inhabitants of the colonies who offered their own services.

"It is the intention of his Majesty's government to employ the manpower of the colonial empire as may be most effective and plans for doing this are being worked out.

Volunteers Exceed Requirements.

"In Africa the strength of the Royal West African Frontier Force has been more than doubled and that of the King's African Rifles in East Africa more than trebled.

"The voluntary offers of service throughout the empire have far exceeded our immediate requirements.

"As announced some time ago British subjects from the colonies and British-protected persons who are in this country, including those who are not of pure European descent, are now placed for entry into the armed forces on the same footing as British subjects in the United Kingdom.

"Such is the nature of the help we are receiving from the empire, eagerly offered and gladly accepted. It is a splendid example of free cooperation and ungrudging self-sacrifice in a noble cause throughout the lands which owe allegiance to the King."

Labor Leadert Heard

Praise of the co-operation of the Dominions with Great Britain was expressed by Clement Attlee, Labor Leader who spoke after Mr. Chamberlain.

"It is a striking demonstration of how the strength of the ties that bind peoples of different races, languages and creeds in the Empire depends upon freedom and not upon compulsion," he said.

Referring to the recent visit to France of a group of members of Commons, Mr. Attlee said:

"I believe very much in members of parliament of the two nations getting together in time of war. It is extremely important from the viewpoint of our undedstanding of each other and of undertanding between people on both sides of the channel, and I hope we shall soon have conferences with representatives of our Allies."

Sir Archibald Sinclair, leader of the Liberal Opposition, said he regretted that the Prime Minister was not able to reveal the number of submarines sunk, or the tonnage of ships which had been lost.

Concerning the Soviet Union, Sir Archibald expressed satisfaction at the decision of the British Government "to pursue a patient policy of negotiation an in particular to explore the possibilities and advantages for the two countries of expansion in trade relations".

Paper Comment

The Times said the only "certain effect' 'to be found in Molotoff's address Tuesday before the Supreme Soviet was "to disappoint Berlin, where much had been expected of it."

It added, however, "what (Joseph) Stalin and Molotoff do is after all a good deal more important than what the Foreign Commissar says in his speeches."

(In Berlin, where German-Russian trade arrangements were being hastened, the press lauded Molotoff's speech, particularly his reference to closer co-operation with Germany and asserted need for a strong Germany.)

Meanwhile, Hon. T. A. Crerar, Canadian delegate to the meeting of Empire statesmen discussing coordination of war efforts, discussed Canadian wheat problems with British authorities.

General, informal conversations among the Empire representatives and Members of the British Government opened yesterday and the delegates were welcomed by Prime Minister Chamberlain at luncheon.

500,000 Tons Seized

In a broadcast last night the Minister of Economic Warfare, R. H. Cross, said contraband intercepted by the Allies since the beginning of the war was considerably more than 500,000 tons. He defended Britain's inclusion of food in contraband since it was, he said, one of the most powerful of weapons.

(Soviet Russia recently criticized Great Britain's inclusion of food in its contraband list charging that civilian populations should not be made to suffer in wartime.)

"To except certain foods from our contraband list," Mr. Cross said, "would merely have the effect of prolonging the war.

"Of our total seizures so far, only about 14 per cent would normally be classified as foodstuffs, but of this, nine per cent consists of commodities containing oils and fats, which the German Government could just as easily use for munitions.

"Much of the other five per cent consists of cereals. These might be given to the German people as food but they could also be converted into spirit for use in mechanical vehicles.

86 Per Cent. War Material

"Of the rest of the intercepted goods, 86 per cent. of the total, in fact the overwhelming bulk of our seizures — have been materials which can be directly used for war purposes and cannot be used for food."

Government officials simultaneously were carrying on negotiations with Soviet Russia for a broad trade agreement and Turkey for an economic treaty to augment the recently signed Mutual-Aid Pact among Britain, France and the Middle-Eastern Republic.

Announcement by Food Minister W. S. Morrison that bacon and butter would be rationed beginning next month brought home to Britons the constant threat to the Island's supplies presented by the war at sea.

Some sections of the Press argued that rationing would not be necessary. One member of parliament said that in the last war many persons who ordinarily used only one lump of sugar in their tea started using both rationed lumps.

Paper Details Aims

The News-Chronicle, urging a government statement of war aims detailed its own:

Restoration of a free Poland and a free Czecho-Slovakia; settlement of disputed boundaries by third-party judgment and an association of European nations to make guarantees that the present situation should not recur.

Britain's prize court, in its first session of war, ordered that the 7,583-ton German freighter Pomona, seized in a British port, be handed over to the British Government. Sir Boyd Merriman, President of the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division of the High Court, presided. Attorney-General Sir Donald Somervell appeared for the government, and the Hambourg owners of the ship were represented by a London attorney.

Both were given into custody of Chief Beatty today and will be remanded in custody pending trial tomorrow.

TEACHERS ELECT E. S. FAIRMAN AS PRESIDENT

Hear Address by Rev. A. B. Payne on Situation in Europe

INSPECTOR SPEAKS

Mr. E. S. Fairman, of the staff of Queen Mary School, was elected president of the South Hastings Teachers' Institute at Thursday morning's session of the annual convention held in the auditorium of Queen Alexandra School. Following the day's very interesting program the convention was adjourned until Friday when the member will attend a regional conference in Peterborough Collegiate Institute.

Inspector —Mr. J. R. Pickering, B.A., B.Paed.; President, Mr. E. S. Fairman, Belleville; Vice President, Mr. W. D. White, B.A., Trenton; Delegate to O.E.A., Miss M. Martin, Trenton; alternate delegate, Miss E. Styles, Belleville; auditors, Mr. Wilbert Christie, Mr. J. Doran, Belleville; Secretary-treasurer, Mr. J. E. Bateman, Belleville; Executive Committee, Belleville, Mr. Harold Mott; Sidney, Mr. Harry Bates; Thurlow, Miss M. Burke; Trenton, Mr. Harold Campbell; Separate Schools, Miss Mary Lee; Treasurer of Strathcona Trust, Mr. J. R. Pickering, B.A., B. Paed.

Miss Mary Cowain was presiding officer for the morning's session after which the new president was installed. The convention was opened by devotional exercises by Rev. A. B. Payne, M.A., vicar of the Church of St. Thomas. Minutes and treasurer's report were presented by Mr. C. I. Frederick, secretary-treasurer. The report of the delegate to the O.E.A. was presented in interesting style by Miss M. Bedford. Miss Phyllis May, director of Music in Belleville Public Schools, delighted the members with vocal solos and also took charge of community singing. Miss Dorothy Boyle acted as accompanist.

Rev. A. B. Payne

During the morning's session the convention was pleased to have as guest speaker, Rev. A. B. Payne, who recently a visitor to the British Isles, discussed the attitude and reactions among British and French to war conditions. The people of the Old Country, he said, had already fought and won a very terrific warfare—warfare of nerves, in which every conceivable method had been used to shake their stability and to disintegrate the close feeling of friendship that existed between England and France. Calmly the British people withstood every stage of attack and maintained the solidarity of alliance. The speaker paid tribute to the work of Neville Chamberlain who in the years to come would receive the full measure of glory for what he achieved at Munich. During the breathing spell which followed his negotiations the whole country united itself into a solid front so when the sword of Damocles had to fall it found the British people as one, and unity with France as solid as it ever could be.

Civilian Preparations

Discussing war time conditions in England, Mr. Payne said the whole face of the land had been transformed, and told of civilian defence efforts that complemented the work of the military division. Of special interest to teachers was Mr. Payne's account of the transfer of three and a half million school children from vulnerable areas to places of greatest security. Whole school staffs were moved with the pupils, so that education of boys and girls could continue with peace-time precision and system.

The calmness of the British and French people and their determination to champion the cause of small nations until the great foe of civilization is vanquished, impressed and inspired the visitor. Mr. Payne in concluding appealed to the teachers as Canadian citizens to "carry on" and to reflect the spirit maintained by England's peoples.

Tribute to Officer

The result of the election was announced by the chairman of the nominating committee, Mr. S. McElwain. A vote of appreciation recorded the gratitude of the Institute to Mr. C. I. Frederick, who had for twenty-five years fulfilled most efficiently the duties of Secretary-Treasurer. Regret was expressed that he found it impossible to continue in office.

While it was the unanimous wish of the Convention that Mr. H. J. Clarke, B.A., accept the position of Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. Clarke although appreciative of the honor his associates wished to confer found it necessary to decline the office. Mr. J. E. Bateman was elected Secretary-Treasurer.

Resolutions

Mr. A. C. Wilkin presented the report of the resolutions committee which included courtesy resolutions of gratitude to all who had assisted in the convention program and arrangements for the complimentary banquet; a further resolution registered approval and support of the policies and activities of the Ontario Educational Association.

Miss Mary Cowain in her address thanked the executive members for their cooperation during her term as president.

Inspector's Address

Mr. J. R. Pickering, B. A., B. Paed. recently appointed Inspector for this area was welcomed by the Convention. Mr. Pickering gave a most interesting and instructive address as an introduction to Russell's "The Child and His Pencil," discussing the life of the writer and outlining the theories advanced in his book. The address was presented at a dinner, arranged for the teachers in Bridge Street United Church Sunday School rooms by the ladies of the Church.

Grade Meetings

The afternoon's session resumed in Queen Alexandra School at two o'clock and was devoted to grade meetings under the following chairmen: Rural — Thurlow—Mr. Harry E. Darling; Sidney—Mr. Sidney Martin; Grade 1—Mrs. Wanda Sine; Grade 11—Miss Mary Haffey; Grade 111 — Miss Florence Wallbridge; Grade 1V — Miss Norma Wedden; Grade V—Miss Olive Blue; Grade VI—Mrs. C. Sullivan; Grade VII—Mr. H. S. Campbell and Grade VIII—Mr W. G. Anderson.

RETURNS FROM S. A. CONGRESS

Major and Mrs. Alderman, of the local Salvation Army corps, have returned from the fifty-seventh annual congress of "The Army" for Eastern Canada which was held in Toronto and attended by thousands. The new commissioner for Canada, Benjamin Orames, attended the gathering.

Conant Not Likely to Appeal Case

Toronto, Nov. 2 (CP) —Attorney-General Gordon Conant declined to disclose today whether there would be any appeal from the acquittal last night of Mickey MacDonald, charged with murder.

"Unfortunately the trial has been very expensive and to the public it may seem very bewildering. The first jury convicted the man, the Court of Appeal ordered a new trial. The second jury acquitted him, although Mr. Jutice Makins is reported to have said very significantly 'it very well might have been otherwise ,in fact I am of the opinion that it ought to have been otherwise.'

"However, it is one of the unavoidable results of the British system of the administration of justice. The jury must finally determine the guilt or innocence in such cases. Every man is entitled to a fair trial. He is presumed to be innocent until he is proven guilty and, as has often been said, 'better that nine guilty persons should escape than that one innocent person should suffer'."

Max Terhune appearing in Republic's latest film, "Three Texas Steers," now showing at the Capitol with an added attraction, Boris Karloff in "The Mystery of Mr. Wong".

Charles Starrett now playing in "Outpost of the Mounties," on the same program with "Five Little Peppers and How They Grew," at the McCarthy Theatre.

John Wayne as he appears in "Three Texas Steers," now showing at the Capitol with an added attraction, Boris Karloff in "The Mystery of Mr. Wong".

AT THE McCARTHY

"Five Little Peppers and How They Grew"

Second-to-none in wholesome screen entertainment . . . a great picture for children . . . grand human fun for grown-ups . . . "Five Little Peppers and How They Grew" based upon the world-famous juvenile classic by Margaret Sidney, is now playing at the McCarthy Theatre with Edith Fellows, Clarence Kolb, Dorothy Peterson, Ronald Sinclair and the little Peppers in splendid featured roles, "Five Little Peppers and How They Grew" is outstanding and we urge you not to miss it. On the same program as a companion feature, Charles Starrett in "Outpost of the Mounties" is also now showing and the McCarthy Theatre takes pleasure in announcing that this hit is presented here before it plays anywhere else in the Province of Ontario. Belleville has the premier showing.

"Outpost of the Mounties" is an action-crammed story of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, and besides Charles Starrett the cast includes the Sons of the Pioneers, famous radio singers, who highlight the production by their rendering of several "mountie songs" that are really swell to hear.

This program ushers in the first of the new season productions that will play at the McCarthy Theatre. Watch for the others—Jane Withers in "Arizona Wildcat", "True Confession" starring Victor McLaglen, "Joe E. Brown in "Beware Spooks", and "Mr. Smith Goes To Washington" starring Jean Arthur and James Stewart. All of which are grand movie entertainment and coming during the month of November.

AT THE BELLE

"FIFTH AVENUE GIRL"

One of the season's most delightful pictures is "Fifth Avenue Girl" Ginger Roger's new starring vehicle for RKO Radio, which is now on the Belle screen.

Very different from Miss Roger's recent "Bachelor Mother", but even funnier at times, the new picture revolves around the hectic experiences of a working girl guest in a stately Fifth Avenue home. She is hired for the job by the discouraged head of the family, who despairs of ever persuading his wife and children to regard him as other than a walking bank-account.

The girl's advent, as expected, alters the situation considerably. The wife, thinking her husband intends to marry the girl as soon as she goes to Reno, changes her plans and decides to stick around. The son, who has been neglecting the family pump business for polo, starts to work again, and the daughter gives up her dizzy goldfish-gulping friends for a serious romance with the chauffeur.

How the various tangled threads of the principal characters' careers are finally straightened out forms the hilarious climax to the offering, while the heroine adjusts her own problems as well. The part might have been made to order for Miss Rogers' talents, and she gives a remarkable portrayal of the difficult role.

Walter Connolly heads the featured cast as the harassed husband, and James Ellison plays the part of the chauffeur, with Verree Teasdale as the mother and Tim Holt and Katheryn Adams as the two children, and such well-known players as Franklin Pangborn, Perlke Boros and Louis Calhern in important roles.

Gregory La Cava's brilliant direction of his own production, and the sparkling screen play by Allan Scott, contribute heavily to the film's excellence. Put "Fifth" Avenue Girl" on your must-see-list.

In addition "Metropolis 1939" is a special extra attraction and here is the thrilling, exciting, revealing story of the greatest show on earth New York City. See how every 47 seconds a New York cop goes into action, see New York as its 19,000 cops view it—It's the big City that even New York's don't see.

A star studded musical comedy, "Hello Mama", and a clever and unusual film, News Reel, will be exhibited on the same program.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Mystery of Mr. Wong"

Monogram's "The Mystery of Mr. Wong", now at the Capitol Theatre, is something new in screen detective stories, in that it has two supersleuths instead of one trying to solve the crimes.

Boris Karloff, as James Lee Wong, is one, and the other, played by Holmes Herbert, is "Professor Janney", noted amateur criminologist and university professor.

The two work together in harmony on "The Mystery of Mr. Wong" which is the story of how the ancient curse on a fatal jewel caused three people to meet violent deaths.

Of course it is James Lee Wong who finally solves the mystery and unmasks the killer hiding behind the old curse on a "fatal" star sapphire.

Outstanding in the cast of "The Mystery of Mr. Wong" are Grant Withers, Dorothy Tree, Holmes Herbert, Lotus Long and Ivan Lebedeff.

The added attraction features the Three Mesquiteers, John Wayne, Max Terhune and Ray Corrigan in "The Texas Stars".

HOLLOWAY STREET W.M.S.

The home of Mrs. S. P. Hagerman, 117 Bridge Street West, was very cheery with yellow mums and other flowers for the regular monthly meeting of the W.M.S. Following the reports of the various secretaries and discussion of general business the devotional period was taken by Mrs. Walters. Mrs. Maybee led in prayer. A solo "O Eyes that are Weary" by Mrs. Farnham was much appreciated.

The Scripture reading was taken by Mrs. Oliphant. Mrs. Cordes then introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. McClintock who took as her topic, "Jesus after His Baptism and Public Profession". She gave a very encouraging and enlightening talk making our every day duties seem worthwhile. She summed it all up in the following lines.

Life is worth living
Aye with the whole of us
Will of us; brain of us,
Senses and soul of us.
Aye with the whole of us
Heights of us; depths of us,
Life is the test of us.

THE RUNAWAY

by

Kathleen Norris

INSTALMENT 6

She, Rebecca Gibson was on the morning train going to San Francisco on a bitter cold day. She was running away at last. It was half-past eleven. For the past two hours she had been frightened, and the relief from that fright was so great that she kept returning to the thought of it. Since exactly ten minutes after nine o'clock she had been escaping everything, risking everything, fearing everything.

She had received Mrs. Kinpaw's letter at nine at the kindergarten. A letter from San Francisco and not from Gavin, she had marveled, tearing it open. It had been written in pencil on lined tablet paper, and signed "Mrs. D. Kinpaw." The address was on Ellis street. Mrs. Kinpaw had written briefly:

eDar Miss Gibson,

Thought you might be the one to notify that Mr. Flood is sick with flu and will not go to the hospital although advised. Has been laid up for a week now and no signs of improvement. Asked him last night if he would like to have anyone notified in case of fatal termination of his illness which frankly speaking is now pneumonia, and this morning he said you. Will keep you informed although hoping of course for the best.

Becky had read it, the solid earth wheeling upon its foundations about her as she read. She had put it into her sweater pocket and gone blindly toward the car, saying no farewells, leaving no explanations. She had gone straight home, finding her mother busy in the kitchen.

"What'd you forget?" Sarah had called unsuspectingly. "My press key," Becky had called back. She had forgotten before this to take the press key to school.

She had gone upstairs, had commenced feverishly, swiftly to pack, fearing at any minute that her mother might come up. But Sarah had not come, and Becky had carried her suitcase downstairs unobserved. She had put it and her big coat into the back of the car, and had gone to the kitchen.

"Mother," she had said with a quick kiss. "I'm parking the car outside of the Exchange. I'm going to San Francisco. Gavin's dying. I'll be back. I'll write if he lives. But he's got pneumonia, and the woman who runs the place where he's staying says he won't live. Good-bye, darling. Don't be mad at me!"

"Becky—" Sarah had clutched at the girl's hand. "Listen! Promise me you'll write; you'll come back. My darling, I'll worry so about you! Let me know—"

"I will!" Another kiss, a message for the boys, and Becky had vanished. Sarah, after a moment's stricken immobility, had gone out to the dooryard, watched the car move away.

Becky had hastily planned as she went. First to the bank for the precious six hundred and twenty-one dollars, then to the station to check her bag, and then to the Exchange.

"Your pa's out, Becky," old Cassell in the office had told her regretfully. "He and Lou Clark went over to Midden Ridge. He won't be back for some time."

Well, that had been a relief. Becky had scribbled a message, had walked to the train. She had bought a magazine. She had had twelve minutes to wait, an endless time in which imaginary obstructions had arisen on all sides, fears of her mother arriving, reproachful and pleading; Mart Kane from the bank to say there was something wrong about the money; Joe Peretta, accidentally destined to go to San Francisco on the same train and amazed to see Becky there; the stationmaster to say that the eleven-thirty wasn't running today. Now she was safely on her way. She was going to Gavin. The train rushed on. She must read her magazine. She must not think that Gavin could die. Oh, then what? Would she go back to Salletts and apologize for running away, and some day marry Joe....No, never Joe! What could she do that would not be desolation and emptiness?....

She opened her magazine. She would not think.

It was almost one o'clock when she crossed San Francisco Bay and found herself at the Ferry Bluiding at the foot of Market Street. Becky was hungry, but she did not know it. The air struck her coldly as she left the warm train, and felt shaken by chill, and nervous and anxious, but she did not think of hunger. She got into a taxi and gave the Ellis Street address. In five minutes she was descending before a dark-looking wooden building whose bay windows, draped in filthy soft lace curtains, were wedged tightly in between a languishing establishment which sold secondhand plumbing and a restaurant with a much gilded downstairs window full of steaks and green pepers. The side doorway was crowded with the cards of fortune tellers, dressmakers, foot specialists and passport photograph studios.

Becky rang, was admitted by a small pale Japanese woman in a dirty sacking apron who simply pointed upstairs. Lugging her bag and beginning to feel actually frightened now, Becky reached a small upper hallway bounded by many varnished brown doors in the last stages of peeling and chipping. One was open and in a room beyond she saw a stout dyed-haired woman working on her nails.

"Does Mr. Gavin Flood live here?" Becky asked. "I'm from Salletts. Someone wrote me. A Mrs....." Becky fumbled in her bag. "I've the letter here—" she was going on, when the woman nodded.

"Kinpaw. That's me, yes," she went on after a moment as Becky regarded her expectantly. "He's here. The Daniel House, next door, is full, and they sent him over to me. I rent rooms downstairs."

She was leading the way downstairs as she spoke. Becky felt almost faint by this time, but she was too much frightened and depressed to appreciate that it was long past her lunchtime. She was only conscious that the incense-scented, close air of the horrible place was making her ill.

In what once had been the back parlor of a somewhat pretentious double house, a dark room lighted just now by a narrow window jutting on a well and by the bulb of a redshaded dim lamp, she found Gavin. He was very ill, so ill that Becky forgot everything else in instant desperate concern for his life. Her brother Spin had almost died of pneumonia two winters before; she had seen him look like this during the dreadful night when she and her mother and father had sat up in hourly expectation of the end. She knew there was not much to do, but, tearing off her coat, and hat, she prepared to do that little.

"I want ice here, and a towel, and some milk. And have you a little stove? He ought to have hot milk every two hours. Where's the nearest drugstore? When was the doctor here?"

Gavin, almost unrecognizable, was lying on a couch whose dark day cover of mottled green and black chenille, heavily bordered with fringe, was part of his bedding. It was tangled in among limp spotted sheets and dirty blankets. His pillow protruded from a torn case; his rough, uncombed head rested on the stained ticking. He had not been shaved for days; a rough stubble, all but disguising him, covered his chin; his swollen lips were cracked and black and his eyes sunk into pits equally discolored. As Becky, with a little cry of love and pity, stooped just for a flying second to rest her cool cheek against his face, she felt the skin burn through the beard like the touch of a hot coal.

The room was hideous with cumbersome old furniture. There was also a narrow bed of white iron, its posts trimmed with brass knobs. It had been slept in, was not made. Another assortment of dirty bedding was tumbled upon it, and a man's vest hung on one knob. Sunk into one of the walls was a brown marble washstand scented suffocatingly from a piece of wet pink soap.

"There's another feller in here with him," the landlady volunteered. "I had to stick him in here just where I could."

Becky, in return for a bottle of milk and a grimy small alcohol stove, returned to the lady several empty milk bottles, one empty whisky flask, three towels so dirty she touched them through a scrap of newspaper, and some sticky plates.

Great Dragon at Seven

By WILLIAM L. GAYLORD

Doris fingered her coffee cup, two tiny little tears glistening in the corners of her pretty chestnut eyes. Morning after morning there were crisp slices of bacon, golden scrambled eggs, hot buttered toast, fragrant amber coffee all just as Ned loved them. But Ned abominable creature, buried his nose in the Morning Telegram, gulped his coffee, and pecked at her absently when he left.

"Ned dear, I subscribed to the Jobless Students' relief fund yesterday. Six dollars and seventy-five cents, as a matter of fact."

"Could use some relief ourselves, I should think," he grumbled.

"My gosh, how much did you say? Six seventy-five?" Ned was certainly looking at her now.

"But Ned, you don't understand. The nice boy who was soliciting needed help so badly—"

"Should think you'd grow up some day, Doris!"

"I think you're just terrible!"

"Well, my gosh, letting a slick-tongued crook wangle you out of six seventy-five!"

"He wasn't a crook at all!"

"Ever hear of the fund before?"

"Well, no, but—"

"Got your money, didn't he?"

"Of course, but—"

"What else can you call the bird then? Gee kid, got to tear off. Late already!"

There! You see? Ned didn't love her any more.

Suppose, just suppose, there was something besides business behind Ned's growing preoccupation? Suppose it wasn't just middle-age indifference creeping on him at twenty-four? Suppose it was someone else he cared for? Doris put in a bad half hour on these supposings. Then he heard the mailman on the front porch.

Half a dozen bills an invitation from Janice to spend the week-end in the city and a plain, thin envelope addressed in a masculine hand she didn't recognize. Its contents made her plump down hard on the davenport:

Dear Mrs. Wilton:

Perhaps you'll be interested to know that your husband is carrying on a rather serious affair with a pretty little chorus girl in the city. He has a dinner date with her for Wednesday evening at seven, at the Green Dragon cafe.

Regretfully yours,
A Friend.

It wasn't true, she told herself over and over.

Ned wasn't that kind. And she wouldn't under any circumstances demean herself and Ned by going to the Green Dragon. Certainly not.

Just as she had reached this chivalrous decision the telephone rang.

"Hello, dear! Everything K.O.D.?" Ned's voice sounded anxious and labored exactly as though he wanted to seem unconcerned but couldn't.

"Of course. Why?"

"Listen, dear, I can't make it tonight until late. Got a business engagement."

"Oh, very well. I suppose I can manage."

"Bye!"

That settled it.

Precisely at six forty-five Doris entered the Green Dragon.

She was wearing her new hand-knitted frock and a saucy suede sport hat to match.

Choosing a chummy, secluded booth, but one where she could watch the entrance, Doris gave a few deft touches to her hair and face.

How many times had he been there before? Doris wondered, with a savage leap of her heart.

Ned's eyes scanned the tables with a quick businesslike sweep, and came to rest finally at her own booth, without, however, a trace of the astonishment she expected.

"Am I intruding?" he asked, striding toward her.

"Not at all, Mr. Wilton. Sit down, won't you?"

"You bet I'll sit down! He fairly shouted.

"You might just explain, Doris, what this means."

"Hadn't you better do the explaining?"

"You're in reverse old girl! I can read writing, can't I?"

"I don't know what you mean, Ned."

"Take a squint at that then!

"You might be interested in my correspondence," Doris suggested, taking her own letter from her bag.

Ned stared at the two letters and then grinned.

"Somebody's trying to pull a swift one!"

He leaned over and grabbed both her hands as though he intended to kiss her then and there—with no absent-minded peck, either!

"Gosh, Doris, this fool thing had me going. You're wonderful, tonight. If I'd found any other guy here—"

"And if I'd found you with any other woman—"

"Let's eat," he proposed. "And then we'll go places!"

They reached home after a perfectly gorgeous evening. Ned went in first switched on the light.

Chaos met them inside.

Sideboard doors gaped, drawers were open, the silver gone, Doris' pearls and her diamond ear rings. On the dining table lay the remnants of a hurried but ample feast. Two empty bottles, recently supposed to contain some very authentic old stuff which Ned kept for state occasions, graced the centre of the debris. From the neck of one of these the third and final note protruded:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Wilton:

Hope you enjoyed your dinner engagement as much as we did ours. Sorry to paw things over so but you didn't leave a diagram. Thanks for the lift.

Grateful yours,
A Friend.

But Doris only snuggled deeper into Ned's arms.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was taking a walk with pop for his health, and Puds Simkins's father stopped going passed to shake hands, pop saying, How's things? and Mr. Simkins saying Pretty snug, I just came from my tailer's to collect this new overcoat he made for me, what do you think of it?

Not bad, very coggy, that one sleeve may be just a half a shade long, dont you think? pop said, and Mr. Simkins said, That's impossible, that statement is laffable, do you know who made this coat for me? Slimwitz, the best tailer in town, that's who made this coat for me. Why, that man has an eye like a gimlet, it's abserd to even suggest that he could make one sleeve shorter than the other. Do you know what this coat cost me? Mr. Simkins said.

Whatever it cost it was a bargain, pop said. Now that I look again it almost seems it's the other sleeve that's shorter, wich proves that the effect was nothing but an optical illustion or perhaps even a mirage. I think I had a little piece of dust in my eye. You must give me Slimwitz's address some time, but I suppose I can find it in any good telephone book. Well so long, I wish you lots of snappy weather, he said.

And we kept on going, pop saying, Yee gods your best friends are quite right not to tell you, the only sensible design for living is to strew compliments like a drunken French sailor.

Wich just then we came to Leroy Shooster's father on his front steps, pop saying, Well well, I believe I see a new hat on an old face, figuratively speaking. Except my compliments, it's a bewty, he said, and Mr. Shooster said, Maybe it would be, on a head 2 sizes bigger the robber that sold me this must of thought I wanted something for around my neck. But what's a difference, if everybody is as blind as you? he said.

I see your point, pop said.

Meaning the hat really did look fierse.

Wich it did.

SALEM W.M.S.

The October meeting of Salem W. M. S. was held at the home of Mrs. J. Sills. The president, Mrs. L. McLaren, opened the meeting with a hymn followed by the Lord's prayer in unison. Mrs. J. Hannah read the Scripture after which Hymn 247 was sung. After the business part of the meeting Mrs. L. McLaren in the absence of the group leader, Mrs. D. Smith, took charge of the program. Readings were contributed by Mrs. J. Cole, Mrs. Sills, Miss Ruth McLaren, Mrs. Leslie and Mrs. G. Badgley. A pleasing duet was given by Mrs. George Sills and Miss Stella Bradshaw. Responsive reading, 96th Psalm. Meeting closed with hymn 377 "Sweet Hour of Prayer", and prayer by the president.

Lois Weaver S. S. 3 Rawdon Wins Warden's Gold Medal In Public Speaking Contest

Compete, Was Given Compete Was Given Medal for His Effort

FIVE CONTESTANTS

Prizes Won During Year Presented to Pupils by County Officials

Dainty Lois Weaver, winsome little brown-haired Miss from School Section No. 3 Rawdon Township, won the Hastings County Public-Speaking Championship in a field of five contestants at the annual public-speaking function held in Shire Hall yesterday before a representative audience.

The clever twelve-year-old girl, who repeated the honor gained by her school section and teacher, Miss E[illegible]e Cole last year, when a former pupil won the coveted honors, will represent Hastings County at the district championships to be held in Brighton in the near future.

Appearing for the first time on the public platform, the new champion not only annexed the Warden's Gold Medal for winner in her class, but also won the Roscoe Vandewater Silver Trophy, emblematic of the county championship. Her subject was "Labor-Saving Devices on the Farm." The text of her address appears in another column.

Scout Winner

Carl Spencer, S.S. 12 and 13 Thurlow, dressed in Scout uniform was the only contestant in the boys division, other entries failing to put in an appearance. He spoke on "Sir Robert Baden-Powell," and naturally won the Warden's Gold Medal as the best in his class. However, he finished second to Miss Weaver in the contest for the county title. His Honor Warden George E. Thompson formally presented the medals and trophy to the winners.

Other contestants and their subjects were: Lorena Sine, Sidney S.S. No. 13, "The Background of Poland;" Helen Tate, S.S. No. 14, Madoc Township, "Life of Robert W. Service" and Rhea McCulllough Foxboro, "The Most Enjoyable Day of My Life." Judges were Messrs. J. O. Herity, P. C. MacLaurin and Mrs. John A. Kerr. Mr. Herity, representing the judges prior to announcing the awards, gave the contestants brief constructive criticism of their efforts. He congratulated them on their achievements, mentioning the rapid strides present public-school speaking has made over those of a decade ago.

Presentation of Prizes

A feature of the presentation of prizes and trophies ceremonies which followed the public-speaking contest was the awarding of gold medals to the winners of entrance examinations in the three inspectorates of the county. Official presentations with congratulations were made by the public school inspectors with Inspector J. F. Pickering, South Hastings, presenting his winner Donald Hubble with the medal; Inspector A. W. McGuire, Centre Hastings, honoring Miss Kathleen Wright, and the North Hastings winner, Frances Molloy being presented with her medal by Inspector J. D. Deyell, of that district.

Agricultural Prizes

Although special agricultural prizes have been officially presented to the winners some time ago, special mention was made of their names and achievements during the function. Congratulations of the county were extended to Allan Ketcheson, Madoc, winner of the Championship Livestock Judging trophy; Allan MacDonald, Stirling, winner of the Championship Dairy Cattle Judging Trophy; Wallace Pigden, Madoc, winner of the Canadian National Exhibition Shield for highest scoring novice at the County Livestock Judging Contest, and to Ralph Campbell, Foxboro, winner of the Championship Seed Judging Trophy and Gold Medal and Howard Cooney, Stirling, runner-up in the same contest.

School Fair Shield

The B. C. Donnan Champion School Fair Shield awarded to the public school of the county winning the highest number of points at any of the Hastings County School Fairs in 1939 was won by School Section No. 1 and 3, Huntingdon. Miss Margaret Wright is the teacher.

School Fair Prizes

Winners of school fair prizes, donated by the T. Eaton Co. Ltd. were presented with the handsome gifts by Mr. Linn Fair, Agricultural Representative of Hastings County who acted as chairman of the function. A number of County Council officials were present in the audience while members of the Agricultural Advisory Board of the Council, sponsors of the Public-Speaking Contest were also interested spectators. Warden Thompson officially welcomed contestants school children, prize winners, parents, teachers and guests.

School fair winners include:

North Hastings District—Helen Pesheau, S. S. No. 5 Bangor, winner of T. Eaton book, "The Arts;" Lorne Lebow, S.S. No. 3 Monteagle, winner of T. Eaton book, "Birds of Canada." Rawdon Township, Lois Weaver, S.S. No. 3, winner of T. Eaton book, "The Arts;" Joe Thompson, S. S. No. 20, winner of T. Eaton book, "Birds of Canada." Huntingdon Township, Beverley Foster, S.S. No. 2 and 5, winner of T. Eaton book, "The Arts," Allan Wallace, S.S. No. 1 and 3, winner of T. Eaton book, "Birds of Canada." Hungerford Township, Mary Farrel, S.S. No. 12, winner of T. Eaton book, "The Arts;" Raymond Geen, S.S. No. 1, winner of T. Eaton book, "Birds of Canada." Madoc Township, June Holmes, S.S. No. 5, winner of T. Eaton book, "The Arts;" Donald Burnside, S.S. Germany Lacks Well-Trained Troops In Adult Classes

Paris, Nov. 2 (CP Havas)—The increasing use of young German "Stosstruppen" (shock troops) on the Western Front was viewed in authoritative military quarters here today as evidence that the Reich is reviving the elite attack units of the last war.

The fact the age of the majority of the men is 18 or 19 was considered a confirmation of earlier reports that Germany lacked well-trained men in the adult classes which attained military age between the end of the war in 1918 and re-establishment of compulsory military service by Adolf Hitler.

These shock units are in action in the daily German patrols and raids on the Western Front. They are merely crack units, specialists in difficult operations necessitating a high degree of altrtness and military training. The troops, a number of whom have been captured by the French, are recruited from Hitler youth formations and the Labor front, having been highly trained since boyhood.

NOTE OF ALARM IN RUSSIAN-FINNISH TALKS

Soviet 'Directly Threatened' By Finland's Foreign Minister Says Communist Party Press

Pravda Says Eljas Erkko Made Provocative Speech and "Cannot be Appraised Otherwise Than as an Appeal for War With Russia"

LEADERS ATTACKED

Paper Further Asserts "We Shall Send to Hell Any and All Manoeuvres and We Shall Go Directly Toward Our Aims"

By WITT HANCOCK

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Helsingfors, Nov. 3—(AP) — An abrupt end to Russian-Finnish negotiations was regarded as a possibility in informed circles today after they received a report of the attack on Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko in the Moscow newspaper Pravda.

A government spokesman announced that while Finland was rejecting a Russian proposal for territory on Finland's southern coast, the delegation was prepared to continue the negotiations if any basis were provided.

Moscow, Nov. 3 (AP)—A note of alarm was injected into Russian-Finnish negotiations today by Pravda, organ of the Communist party, on the heels of indications that the two nations—while not entirely in agreement—at least had a working basis for reaching a solution of their problems.

The Finnish delegation was called to the Kremlin for a renewal of their talks with Russian officials at 6 p.m. (10 a.m. EST).

Pravda declared Moscow's foreign minister, Eljas Erkko, had "directly threatened" the Soviet Union and his remarks of Wednesday night "cannot be appraised otherwise than as an appeal for war with the U.S.S.R."

(Erkko asserted Finland was ready to make arrangements for improving Leningrad's defensive positions and increasing the safety of the Gulf of Finland, but that "any guardianship which a foreign power might receive over Finnish territory must be regarded" as endangering Finland's neutrality.)

Pravda intimated that Finland as well as the Scandinavian nations—particularly Sweden—were backed in their opposition to Russian concessions in the Baltic area by other powers. It emphasized that in the War balloons! Ordinary balloons with spherical bag inflated with hydrogen are commonly used for practice flights. These travel well, but care must be taken not to give them an initial twist or they will keep on twirling indefinitely. The observational war balloon is sausage-shape or streamlined because in a high wind the spherical ones are unmanageable. Observation balloons are captive, and may be flown as high as 6,000 feet. Held to the ground by a cable containing telephone wires, communication thus becomes an easy matter. In case the cable breaks the crew handles the balloon as a free one, using ballast and valving gas until a suitable landing can be made.

ALLIES TO AWARD HUGE CONTRACTS FOR WARPLANES

Britain And France Contemplate Purchase of 7800 Planes it is Reported

BIG ENGINE ORDER

Washington, Nov. 3 (AP)—A billion dollars worth of overseas orders is expected by some officials to be placed with United States manufacturers as soon as President Roosevelt signs the bill lifting the embargo on arms sales to belligerents.

They estimated that amount would be contracted within a few weeks, with most of the supplies going to Great Britain and France.

Enactment of the bill will permit Great Britain and France to obtain some 300 warplanes which have been completed since the embargo was imposed.

Cancelled export licences for planes and munitions probably will be reinstated. Great Britain's impounded orders aggregate $14,680,807 and those of France $58,205,739.

Negotiations Begin

Even before the House of Representatives today voted to repeal the embargo a French purchasing mission contracted for 4,600 aircraft motors from two eastern manufacturers at a price of approximately $50,000,000, officials were informed. A British mission, meanwhile, has been negotiating for some 1,600 training planes.

The arms embargo halted delivery on some 600 aircraft early in September. In addition to these, the French contemplate purchases of some 3,800 planes, and the British 4,000, it was reported authoritative-

BRITAIN PLEASED WITH HELP FROM AUSTRALIA

No Opposition to War But Instead Every Effort is Being Directed Toward Victory

DISCUSSIONS PROCEED

(By J. F. Sanderson, Canadian Press Staff Writer).

London, Nov. 3 — (CP-Cable)— Joseph Goebbel's propaganda machine has discovered there is "increasing opposition to the war in the Dominions."

The German radio has broadcast that Australia's decision not to send an air expeditionary force to France is due to opposition to the war which is now apparent in all the dominions.

Actually what happened was this: Australia offered to send six air squadrons soon after war was declared. This offer was accepted by the British Government. Later Britain suggested to Australia that the squadrons should be kept at home to serve as a nucleus of a training staff for a bigger expansion scheme, which in its final stages will be centred in Canada.

SCHOOL BOOK LEADS TO ARREST

16-Year-Old Boy and Juvenile Described by Police as 'Human Flies'

Toronto, Nov. 3—(CP) — A school book proved a clue today to an attempted safecracking in a downtown business office and led to the arrest of a 16-year-old boy and a juvenile described by police as "human flies." The lads were charged with shopbreaking and theft.

Employees of J. Caplan saw a battered safe in the office when they went to work yesterday. The combination and the hinges had been knocked off—but the strong box remained locked. Beside the safe was a note which read: "Too bad—we'll get it next time—the Bat."

Then the police spied the school book and investigated. Police said the intruders entered the second storey office by putting their feet against one wall and their back against another wall three feet away. Braced in this manner they worked themselves up to an unfastened window.

Hardy Commercial Pilots Taking Lessons From Youthful Instructors

Camp Borden, Ont., Nov. 3 (CP) —Forsaking highly-paid jobs in many cases to get into the "big show," northern bush fliers are coming all over the Dominion to Camp Borden to man the heavy bombers and pursuit planes of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Men experienced in flying the mails in the northwest territories, veterans of the tricky Rocky Mountains skyways and the manifold dangers attendant on reaching isolated mining posts of the north—all of them have to go back to school.

For mastering the technique of military planes with speeds ranging up to 400 miles an hour is an art in itself—even for men with several thousand hours' experience with commercial ships.

Many of the experienced northern flyers, after graduating from Camp Borden's difficult tests, will be used as instructors when the Empire air training scheme gets underway, reports say.

But right now they're taking their schooling from youthful teachers, three of whom have come from England on loan from the Royal Air Force. The bush pilots are being grounded in meteorology, navigation and other aspects of military aviation.

Flight Lieutenants K. C. Mellor and R. H. Waterhouse and Flight Sergeant W. M. Abercrombie are the English trio. All three of them have had thousands of hours of military flying.

Likes Flying Weather

"I like your pilots and I like your flying weather," said Waterhouse. "Back home we have plenty of fog and we're quite crowded. There's plenty of space over here, and we're not so very far from England. The new training plan will release our fields for service squadrons and allow us to carry on under much steadier weather conditions."

Two of the "recruits," flying officers Archie Vanhee and C. D. Gordon, are from Edmonton. Vanhee, a short time ago a pilot for the Mackenzie Air Service whose runs extended into the Yukon territory and beyond the Arctic Circle, holds close to 2,600 hours in the air.

"This military stuff is interesting" he says. "I'm certainly enjoying it and learning plenty. Especially the aerobatics. You don't go stunting around the atmosphere with a Bellanca loaded down with freight."

Gordon, with a record of 3,000 flying hours, left his job with Canadian Airways to enter the R.C.A.F. His former habitat was the Mackenzie River country up toward Great Bear Lake.

"I'll be glad when the snow comes and I can feel a pair of skis under my ship again," he said. "They'll keep me from getting homesick."

A native of Guelph, Mr. Guthrie was the dean of the House of Commons when he retired from active political life in 1935. First elected in 1900 he served for almost 35 years continuously as member for Wellington South.

During his parliamentary career he served in various cabinet posts under three prime ministers and for a time was acting leader of the Conservative party.

He was elected in 1900 as a Liberal but during the last war joined the Union Government formed by Sir Robert Borden. He was one of the few survivors of the Unionist cabinet, others being Sir Thomas White of Toronto and Senator Arthur Meighen and Senator C. C. Ballantyne.

After the war Mr. Guthrie remained with the Conservative party although some Liberal supporters of the Union administration returned to their former political association. He served in the post-war cabinet of Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen and in the shortlived "shadow government" formed by Mr. Meighen in 1926.

After Mr. Meighen's retirement as party leader following the defeat of the Conservative party in 1926, Mr. Guthrie led the party's forces in the House of Commons and was a candidate for the leadership of the 1927 Conservative convention at Winnipeg. The choice of the convention fell on Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett and Mr. Guthrie was one of Mr. Bennett's most trusted lieutenants.

FOE MOVEMENTS FIND FRENCH FORCES ALERT

French Guard Against Possibility of German Thrust in Foothills

PEASANTS SEIZE FLIERS

Paris, Nov. 3 (AP)—French military sources reported strong German troop movements today northeast of Saareguemines, accompanied by Heavy artillery screen fire.

They said the French immediately placed their forces on the alert against the possibility of a German thrust in the area between Saarguemines and Ordenthal, less than a mile from the frontier and about five miles south of the German city of Zweibruecken.

Patrols Fight On Slopes.

The French held a four-mile-wide salient near Ohrenthal, between the Blies River and the Vosges foothills and reports said they were concentrating their answering artillery fire in an attempt to smash German communications.

Patrol units fought on the wooded slopes of the Vosges, these sources said, and about nine miles east of Saareguemines. They said the French had taken another German prisoner.

Peasants Capture German Fliers.

Two French peasants were acclaimed for the barehanded capture of the crew of a German plane.

The men's quick action prevented the Germans from smashing their instruments and destroying their papers when their craft was shot down by Royal Air Force planes yesterday over northern France.

The unarmed men, Eugene Vantours and Jean Elbout, rushed to the plane when it came down in a field near where they were working and held the fliers until French soldiers arrived.

Of the four occupants of the German plane, one was killed, another was wounded and two were unharmed.

Foe Reconnaissance Plane Downed.

A French communique reported the downing of a twin-engined German reconnaissance plane "by a British fighter" yesterday. It said the night had been quiet with "some artillery and infantry fire".

JAPS REPORT RUSS. ATTACK

Tokyo, Nov. 3 — (CP-Havas)— Domei (Japanese) News Agency reported today in a dispatch from Harbin that Soviet troops last Friday opened fire on a convoy of Japanese and Manchoukuo autos and trucks on the right of the Argun River. The report said considerable damage was done to the convoy by the Soviet attack. The Argun is a tributary of the Amur River.

Enemy activity increases on the French front but the purpose remains as obscure as ever. The lateness of the season leads some commentators to conclude no major offensive will be undertaken until spring but this theory leaves unexplained the large German troop concentrations in the west, and recent artillery and infantry action.

Occasional intense shelling of points on the French side of the border within the last few days probably was designed to get the range of objectives and the scouting patrols and local attacks from youthful shock troops may have been designed to secure information about French positions which would be useful in a major attack.

The proclamation of martial law by the Netherlands government in districts along the German border indicates alarm at the prospect of a German march to the sea through Holland.

SALE OF ARMS TO BELLIGERENTS TO BEGIN SOON

As Soon as President Signs Bill Shipment of Supplies to Britain and France Will Start

HUGE ORDERS

Overseas Orders Will Total One Billion Dollars in a Few Weeks — Supplies Must be Carried in Foreign Bottoms

Washington, Nov. 3 (AP)—A joint Senate-House Conference Committee approved the Roosevelt administration's neutrality bill today, preparing the way for final congressional action today or tomorrow.

The Conference Committee agreed shortly after President Roosevelt expressed, to the press, gratification at the congressional decision to repeal the embargo against arms sales to belligerents.

Roosevelt Pleased.

"I'm very glad that the bill has restored the historic position of neutrality of the United States," Mr. Roosevelt said, authorizing the direct quotation.

Only assured final approval by the Senate and House was necessary to send the measure to President Roosevelt.

The Senate arranged to vote this afternoon. Leaders were hopeful the House would act immediately thereafter.

In response to a press conference request for comment on the legislation as it now stands, virtually approved by Congress, Mr. Roosevelt authorized this quotation:

"I'm very glad that the bill has restored the historic position of neutrality of the United States."

The President said he probably would issue several proclamations under the new measure, once he has signed it. He hoped to get the proclamations out of the way, he said, before leaving for his home at Hyde Park, N.Y., tomorrow or Sunday.

Mr. Roosevelt said that he hoped to issue the proclamations as soon as possible after the neutrality bill comes to the White House from Congress.

CANADA'S ACTION IS APPRECIATED

Australian Press Welcomes Appointment of High Commissioner to Australia

Sydney, Australia, Nov. 3—(CP-Cable)—The press today welcomed the decision of the Canadian government to appoint its first High Commissioner to Australia.

Charles J. Burchell, K.C., of Halifax, N.S., the High Commissioner-designate, is well known in influential circles here, having attended the international relations conference in Australia last year.

Australian newspapers recalled that Mr. Burchell, unlike some of the other Canadian conference delegates, did not believe in Canadian isolation and recognized the senior Dominion's future was wrapped up with the empire.

Mr. Burchell last year declared he was sure to return to Australia later in order to become better acquainted with the country.

Embargo Repeal Hailed by Allies, Germany Silent

Semi-Official French Note Greets With Satisfaction And Homage Sense of Fairness

MORAL SATISFACTION

Burgin Claims Action Transforms United States Into Arsenal of 'Unlimited Resources' For Britain

London, Nov. 3 (CP)—Delight was evident in Paris and London today over United States congressional action in voting to lift the arms embargo.

In Berlin an official spokesman said there would be no German government comment until the embargo actually was off the United States statute books.

A semi-official note issued after a French cabinet session at which Premier Daladier was understood to have devoted much of his analysis of the situation to the prospects of buying equipment in the United States said the action of Congress "is regarded in Paris as an event of great material and moral importance."

"It is greeted with great satisfaction and homage is paid to the sense of fairness which inspired debate of the American Congress and the personal reaction of President Roosevelt," it said.

The note added that "France and Great Britain gain a definite advantage since mastery of the seas and other financial resources permit them alone, in fact, to take delivery in American ports of products they need.

In London, Supply Minister Leslie Burgin, who is responsible for providing for every material need for the British fighting forces, declared the embargo action transformed the United States into "an arsenal of unlimited resources" for Britain. He said Britain probably would buy machine tools, raw materials, gun steel "and ultimately ammunition."

Most Important News

The doom of the embargo—since only minor differences between the House and Senate were in the way of final action—was hailed as an Allied victory and regarded as the most important news of the day in London and Paris newspapers.

Paris-Soir said the "ability to increase their armaments rapidly is an important advantage to the Allies. That is a consequence of the law which the United States foresaw and accepted. They are neutral in fact. They are not neutral in thought."

The newspaper L'Intransigeant, however, cautioned that France must pay cash for American arms.

No Pretext For Laziness

"We should fall back on American manufacture only in a prudent and limited way," the paper said. "Let's not find a pretext for laziness and slowness in facilities we are obtaining on the other side of the Atlantic."

Officials and the press in Britain showed obvious though restrained delight over the apparent certainty of repeal of the embargo.

One spokesman smilingly commented, however, "our soul is full of hope, but we don't want to count our chickens before they are hatched."

Empire Pools its Knowledge Of Supply Problems, Says Burgin

(By Harold Fair Canadian Press Staff Writer).

London, Nov. 3 (CP Cable)—The Empire is pooling its knowledge of supply problems, Leslie Burgin, British Minister of Supply, told press representatives at a luncheon today.

He said Dominion Ministers now in London had conferred at the Ministry of Supply and that experts of the Ministry already were in Canada.

Taking Australia as an example because it has a Supply Ministry, Mr. Burgin said he and Richard Casey, the Commonwealth Supply chief, had exchanged information on orders and legislation. An entire plan of production organization of the ministry had been borrowed by Australia.

Mr. Burgin hailed the United States embargo action as meaning the Allies are "faced with an arsenal of unlimited resources."

Asked by The Canadian Press representative if this would result in Canada becoming a great transshipping centre, Mr. Burgin replied that United States and Canadian supply were two different things.

Since the war broke out the ministry has extended 110,000,000 pounds ($489,500,000) in new commitments and not a day has passed without some extension being carried out. Asked how many people were employed providing supplies, the Minister said "at the moment I have not an idea within millions."

Cheese Producers Oxford Co. Favor Selling by Board

Woodstock, Ont., Nov. 3—(CP)— Cheese producers of Oxford County at their annual meeting yesterday, declared themselves in favor of retaining the present system of boarding cheese and of strengthening it by more strict enforcement of the government regulations.

McDONALD APPEAL DISMISSED

Toronto, Nov. 3—(CP)—The Ontario Appellate Court today dismissed the appeal of Charles W. McDonald, of Chatham, against his conviction for the murder of his wife, Adeline, one-time beauty contest winner.

McDonald has been sentenced to be hanged November 30, for shooting his wife to death at Chatham last May 31.

"We are all of the opinion that the appeal should be dismissed," Chief Justice R. S. Robertson said at the opening of court.

SPECIFIC CHARGES OF PATRONAGE WILL BE PROBED

Prime Minister Mackenzie King Answers Statement Made by Hon. J.R. Manion

WELCOMES CRITICISM

Ottawa, Nov. 3—(CP)—The wartime political truce between Canada's federal political parties appeared to be interrupted today by a dispute between Conservative Leader Manion and the Government over alleged patronage in the Dominion's war effort and lack of consultation by the Prime Minister with the official opposition.

The Capital's attention was focussed on charges by Dr. Manion that political patronage operated in granting of contracts and appointments, and a statement by Prime Minister Mackenzie King that if specific charges were made public by the Conservaitve leader they would be investigated.

In a statement last night made several hours after Dr. Manion's criticism was made public, the Prime Minister reiterated a declaration made in last Tuesday's radio broadcast to the nation in which he said "all possible precautions" would be taken by the Government to prevent patronage.

Most Wor. Bro. Dunlop spoke briefly to the members present largely upon their Masonic duties, especially during times of stress when patriotic efforts were needed. Wor. Bro. H. McCartney, D.D. G.M., of Prince Edward District, responded to the toast to Grand Lodge, while the speaker of the evening was introduced by Bro. G. B. Smith and conveyed the thanks of his listeners by presiding Wor. The Moira Lodge orchestra and Bro. Brooker singing two solos, provided the evening's entertainment.

WORK ON INTERIOR OF S. A. CITADEL IS NEARING COMPLETION

With interior decorators making rapid strides in auditorium and basement, completion of the new Salvation Army Citadel on Pinnacle Street is expected in the near future.

Actual construction work on the building is finished. The main auditorium walls and ceilings gleam in an attractive coating of white and ivory stucco-finished plaster. Laying of hardwood floors in this part of the building started on Wednesday.

In the basement which will house the Sunday School, band rooms and choristers rooms, a sanded plaster finish completes the interior picture. Heating engineers have installed the heating system.

Contractor Thomas Adams, still keeps the actual date of completion a deep secret, "Suffice it to say," he smiles, "that barring accidents we will be finished well within the time limit. Naturally, Salvation Army officials are anxious to have the building as quickly as possible, and I am just as anxious that they should have it. Just say that."

MANY LEAVES

Reported to be one of the heaviest "crops" in years, fallen leaves from trees of lawn and garden are being piled into neat heaps and windrows in various parts of the city today. Inmates of the County Jail, armed with rakes and forks cleaned the spacious lawns of the County Buildings today while curling columns of blue smoke in all parts of the city marked burning piles of leaves and other debris.

FEWER HITCH-HIKERS

Motorists of the city report a noticeable decrease in the number of hitch-hikers on the highways. Apparently the opening of more work throughout the country has cut down on the number of the "knights of the thumb."

OIL CO. ENTERTAINS DISTRICT DEALERS

Guests of the Cities Service Company, seventy-five service station owners, attendants and mechanics of Prince Edward, Lennox, Northumberland, Durham and Hastings Counties attended a "get-together" at the Hotel Quinte last night.

Motion pictures picturing in graphic detail the oil-production and refining, transportation and sales of the company's products were enjoyed by the gathering.

Following the business session, entertainment was provided by Tommy Mason. Refreshments brought to a close a highly enjoyable evening. Major Colin Hepburn, Belleville manager, acted as chairman for the occasion.

Attorney General Declares War on Filthy Publications

Toronto, Nov. 3—(CP)—Attorney-General Gordon Conant announced today that he has declared war on "filthy publications" in Ontario.

He has set up an organization within his department to check all periodicals as they appear on the news stands. "Where there is, in our opinion, any transgression of the law, the most vigorous prosecution will be launched," he said. "We spend millions trying to improve the educational and moral standards of our people and there is no reason for allowing them to be impaired or wasted by permitting filthy publications to be circulated.

"We have enough troubles now fighting a war without having the morals of our people and particularly our children contaminated by obscene or immoral literature."

REMEMBRANCE DAY TO BE MARKED

Service Will be Held Before War Memorial in County Town

Picton, Nov. 3—Plans are being made for a suitable observance of Remembrance Day here. Stores are being closed from 10 a.m. to noon while a service is held at the War Memorial. Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment will take part in the parade and along with other organizations will make it the greatest ever seen here. Plans for the parade and service are being worked out.

The veterans will hold their annual banquet on Nov. 10 and General Constantine of Kingston is to be one of the speakers. Poppy Day will be held as usual on November 11th.

Teachers of town and county attended the annual convention in Peterborough on Thursday and Friday.

Adjutant Arthur Bryant of the local corps of the Salvation Army has received word of his transfer to Territorial headquarters in Toronto. He will leave next Monday.

Hastings and Prince Edward regiment is now completely at wartime strength, replacements having been made after recruits had been discharged for various reasons.

Constable Frank Smith has been granted leave of absence. He will go to Kingston to act as instructor at the R.C.H.A. He served as a dispatch rider in the Great War.

GREEK FRIENDSHIP SOUGHT BY ITALY

Exchange of Letters Dated Sept. 30 Is Published in Rome

Rome, Nov. 3—(AP)—Italy, intent upon improving her status as a neutral and strengthening her influence in southeastern Europe, set out today to achieve more friendly relations with Greece.

An exchange of Greek-Italian letters, dated Sept. 30, affirming friendship and expressing a desire to give "more concrete form" to relations between Athens and Rome was published today.

The letters pointed the way toward negotiations for "happy and fruitful collaboration in all fields" —apparently prefacing a new non-aggression pact.

Foreign observers expected Italy to seek wider trade advantages from Greece as she has done in a new commercial agreement with Yugoslavia and another about to be signed with Bulgaria.

The pact with Greece which Italians hoped soon to conclude would replace the 10-year non-aggression treaty of 1928.

With it Premier Mussolini would seek to reinforce his influence in the Balkans to counter-balance the recent Turkish-French-British mutual aid treaty, protecting Italy's strategic as well as commercial interests in a region considered vital.

The Greek note published was signed by Premier John Metaxas and expressed, among other things, appreciation for Italy's "spontaneous gesture" in withdrawing troops from Greece's Albanian frontier on Sept. 20.

Negotiations also were reported under way between Italy and Turkey toward formation of a Balkan bloc under Italian aegis. Whether such conversations would result in a formal document was regarded as problematical because of the present Italian desire to avoid the appearance of joining forces with the Turkish-British French groups.

Bette Davis, Screen Star, Tours Canada

Seigniory Club, Que., Nov. 3—(CP)—With a pair of red woolen ski pants and a dozen sweaters as protection "against the cold," screen star Bette Davis said last night she intends to set out today with a group of friends on a motor trip through western Canada.

"I want to see Moose Jaw and Medicine Hat," said the actress. "We're going to try it, and we'll have something to talk about when we get back to California. We figure it will take about ten days."

Miss Davis, on vacation since May and here for the past three days, said she hoped to be in North Bay, Ont., by tonight as she would like to see "Dr. Dafoe and the Quints."

C., M.P.P., will bring greetings from the Toronto Zionist Council and Mrs. Chas. Rotenberg, greetings from the Hadassah Organization of Toronto. Reports from the various centres will be heard, including a report on the Youth Aliyah and the United Palestine Appeal Campaign, presented by Mrs. David Dunkelman. Royal Coat of Arms On Phone Directory

To commemorate the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth to Canada, the royal coat of arms, printed in royal blue ink, adorns the cover of the new telephone directory for Belleville and vicinity, which will be distributed by mail to local subscribers of The Bell Telephone Company of Canada within the next few days.

"The royal coat of arms replaces the familiar Greek god symbolic of the Spirit of Communication as the only decoration on the cover of the new directory," explained G. W. Proctor, Bell manager for this district. "It is framed, top and bottom, by the Company's name, the date of issue, and the points to which distribution is made.

"Altogether, there are 4,700 changes recorded in the new volume. About 4,270 of these new and revised listings are in the white pages of the alphabetical directory, showing subscribers' names, addresses and telephone numbers. Nearly 520 changes appear in the yellow pages of the classified section.

"In view of the large number of changes made since the last issue of the directory," Mr. Proctor concluded, "the need for carefully consulting the book before placing calls is obvious, if 'wrong numbers' are to be avoided."

Swift Canadian Co. Co-operates With Ciceri's Food Market in Sale

The full-page advertisement on page five of yesterday's paper for Ciceri's Food Market was made possible by the co-operation of the Swift Canadian Co., Limited. All the high quality meats produced by this company are thus made available for a special week end sale which started today. Many particularly interesting bargains are included, and should attract a large clientele.

In conjunction with the sale a demonstration of Blue Ribbon Coffee and Tea is being given by Miss K. Killoran.

Two telephone lines (996 and 927) to central and a speedy delivery service should enable Ciceri's Food Market to cope with the anticipated increase over their extensive normal volume of business.

A Few Dont's for Hunters

The deer hunting season locally opens on Nov. 5th this year, but as the fifth of this month falls on Sunday and no hunting is legally permitted on the Sabbath in Ontario, the season will not officially open until Monday.

It would be no harm, however, to remind hunters that there is no such a thing as an "accident" with a loaded gun. All such so-called accidents are carelessness, pure and simple, and there is no excuse for them.

There are a few excellent rules which have appeared from time to time, pertaining to hunting and guns. They are listed as follows: "never bring a loaded gun into your hunting camp; never point the muzzle of a loaded gun towards any person; never stand a loaded gun where it might be knocked down." Of course the majority of deer hunters know all this and they take no chances, but the younger men are apt to forget and then try to get by when something happens with the age old excuse of it being an accident.

Remember again, there is no such thing as an accident with a loaded gun; it is all a matter of extreme carelessness and the careless hunter is a menace to his fellow-hunters; so take no chances—unload guns after the shoot.

Loblaw Groceteria Opens its Doors To Large Crowd Admiring Shoppers

Belleville shoppers paid tribute to the new Loblaw Groceteria that opened its doors at ten o'clock today. Long before the official time arrived a crowd of impatient shoppers lined the pavement outside the gleaming windows of the store. From the time Manager George Fordyce turned the lock a steady stream of men and women paraded through the shining interior of the store, baskets in hand selecting their necessities from the shelves and containers that are placed at convenient intervals.

Justifiable pride gleamed in the eyes of Manager Fordyce as he surveyed his new store. "We have had many comments on the appearance and convenience of the store," he said, "and judging from the large crowd that has already been here to see and shop, Belleville is highly appreciative of the efforts and money spent to bring it one of the most modern stores of its kind in Canada."

POLICE COURT

When Wilfred Hand, war veteran who said he was enroute from Toronto to the Maritime provinces to re-enlist, appeared in city police court before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., today on a charge of intoxication, Hand intimated he had been beaten and robbed last night prior to his arrest.

Despite his subsequent protests, however, Hand was remanded to the custody of the city police station cell block upon orders of His Worship and police were instructed to check the accused man's story. "I hitch-hiked from Oshawa here and had a few drinks on the way. The next thing I remember I was lying in a field, with my false teeth, baggage and $21.00 in cash gone," revealed Hand, who asked the court to forego the charge and let him continue on his journey.

"If you were beaten and robbed we want to check this matter and try and bring the culprits to justice," interrupted Chief Kidd as he suggested Hand be kept at the police station for a few hours while the credibility of his story was probed.

Cpl. Hugh Fullarton, of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, appeared on a charge of the taking of a motor car without the owner's consent. Fullarton was arrested on Station Street in possession of a motor car, the property of a local citizen, police stated. Owing to the absence of Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., County Crown Attorney, this and several other important cases listed for trial in Belleville today were further enlarged.

The usual disposition was made in two cases where citizens appeared on charges of intoxication.

Armless Mother Who is Transient Cares for Babe

Father Finds Job on a Ranch And House For Family

Safford, Ariz., Nov. 3—(AP)— A six-day-old girl snuggled close to her armless mother, unaware that it was anything but normal to be juggled about for feeding and other care by a pair of feet instead of hands.

The mother, Mrs. Ruth Matthews, a transient, has eight other children. Despite dozens of offers for adoption, she expressed determination to keep the baby, born alongside a highway Saturday.

The woman's armless condition is congenital. Asked how she managed a family and household duties under such a handicap, she said:

"It will not take much to feed the baby. It won't cost much," she added.

Because of the child's birth, Matthews has found a job on a nearby ranch and a house in which the family may live.

C. GILLINGWATER, ACTOR, IS DEAD

Is Found Dead in Chair in Closet of His Quiet Home

Beverly Hills, Calif., Nov. 2 — (AP)— The death of bushy-browed C. Gillingwater 69, lovable character actor of stage and screen, stirred the film colony today.

Detectives, summoned by the actor's housekeeper, found the body late yesterday in a chair in a closet of Gillingwater's quiet home, a bullet wound through the chest.

Four neatly-typed notes—one to police and the others to his son, his physician and his housekeeper —told of suicide, said detective A. J. Gebhart.

Gillingwater, more than six feet tall, thin and stooped, alternated in film roles between self-righteous crookedness, honest crustiness and mellow thoughtfulness, depending on whether he played the part of a shady-principled banker, a judge or a southern gentleman.

Injured in a fall early in 1936 and in poor health since then, he had appeared infrequently in recent months.

Unbearable Stomach Pains Driven Away

Miss A. P. writes: "I had suffered many months from stomach trouble, sometimes not being able to eat a scrap of food. The pains were at times unbearable. I took Maclean Brand Stomach Powder and, to my surprise, found relief coming right away. I kept on with the doses, and in two days I was able to go on ordinary food, and I have had no pains since." Four potent alkalies in Maclean Brand Stomach Powder neutralize the acid, stop pain, aid elimination of fermenting waste, and protect the stomach lining against injury. Be sure to ask for Maclean Brand Stomach Powder, which is only genuine if the signature "Alex. C. Maclean" appears on bottle and carton. Not sold loose, but only in bottles in cartons, of powder or tablets—at druggists—75c; family size, $1.75. 140

KIPLING'S VERSE WILL BE USED

Quatrain Which Arrived Too Late for Memorial Will be Cut Into Face of Cairns

Sudbury, Ont., Nov. 2 (CP)—More than eleven years after it was written to order by Rudyard Kipling, a quatrain for this city's dead in the last war will be chiselled into two memorial cairns being erected by the Sudbury and Copper Cliff branches of the Canadian Legion.

The 22-word verse was not completed by Kipling in time for the dedication of city's war memorial in the spring of 1928, so a substitute was found, causing considerable controversy.

The Kipling verse, which came along later and will be inscribed on the two cairns which are to be dedicated within a month, is:

We, giving all, gained all.
Neither lament us nor praise.
Only, in all things recall,
It is fear, not death ,that slays.

There is an ironic note in connection with the two new memorial cairns. Space will be left on the rough face of each for another plaque—to honor the soldiers who died in the present war.

City of Flint Passes Maaloy on Norwegian Coast

Bergen, Norway, Nov. 2—(CP)—The United States Freighter City of Flint in charge of a German prize crew passed Maaloy, one hundred and ten miles north of Bergen, at 9.30 a.m. (3.30 a.m. E. S. T.) today en route to Germany

The City of Flint was followed by two Norwegian destroyers and was making a speed of 14 knots. The ship apparently was travelling in Norwegian territorial waters, the report from Maaloy indicated.

West Huntingdon

West Huntingdon—A large number of Hallowe'en concerts were held throughout the township this past week. It is thought more advisable to organize the youth and have them entertained rather than leave the young people to create disturbances which might be detrimental to the residents' property. The first of these entertainments was sponsored by the members of the United Church Mission Band, when a fine concert was staged in the Orange Hall. A large number were in costume, comic and original.

Mrs. Clayton Wright, and Mr. Frank Hammond were the judges. After the parade the following program was enjoyed:

Opening song; community singing; solo—Donnie McCurdy; contest conducted by Marion Hammond; reading—Kathleen Moorcroft; recitation—Joan McCurdy; recitation—Louis Emerson; contest—Theda Moorcroft; duet by the Misses Marion and Phyllis Hammond; reading on Hallowe'en —Dora Bird.

The teacher and pupils of West Huntingdon School were hosts to the parents and rate payers of the section when they entertained about one hundred people at a Hallowe'en party at the school on Monday night. This was a social opportunity given the section to visit and inspect the new school and many were loud in their praise of the modern school with its splendid lighting and heating system.

The class-room was decorated with Jack-o-lanterns, black cats and orange and black streamers and as the guests arrived they were welcomed at the door by a ghost dressed in white.

Mr. Elmer Post very capably performed the duties of chairman and after a few words of welcome a grand march led by John Kerby and George Dafoe playing mouth organs took place with all the pupils in costume. Mrs. E. Sarles, Mrs. Geo. Cook, Mrs. L. Vanderwater, the judges found it difficult to judge such an array of comic costumes but awarded prizes to the following: Indian—George Post, Joyce Wallace in red, white and blue, Donald Wilson, who represented a lady in modern dress, and Donald Runnalls, who was dressed as a cadet. Each pupil who took part in the parade received a candy sucker.

You should read what Bob Pearce says about Kruschen Salts.

"I consider Kruschen Salts excellent as a preventive against common ailments that bring discomfort and worry to people in all walks of life. The body requires certain mineral salts and the daily dose of Kruschen is a good way to get them into the system. I take Kruschen every morning, myself—just a little—and it is absolutely tasteless in coffee or tea.

Kruschen is a combination of several highly refined mineral salts. One, for example, combats excess acid so common in cases of heartburn; another aids the kidneys to eliminate poisons; a third helps purify the bloodstream—and so on. Why not try Kruschen Salts starting immediately and see for yourself how very little it costs to feel like a million dollars! Bottles, 25c, 45c and 75c at all drug stores.

MAY BE 50 AIR SCHOOLS

Fifty air schools under the Empire air training plan in Canada is what the undertaking may mean, the vastest project in the history of aviation and one of the greatest military efforts of all history. How tame would read today the story of the ancient Romans or Carthagenians making their preparations for war, as compared with this. In a new world not known five hundred years ago the great bulwark of British air power for the major and final days of the war is to be built up. There is something new under the sun.

The conception is almost beyond the mind of modern man, the development of that new arm of the service which requires territory free from interference for the training of men without interruption, great open spaces and a clear atmosphere in which planes may fly most of the year. Canada has territory enough and varied enough for all the purposes and is the closest of the Dominions to the theatre of war.

It is said that the new project will not immediately train 25,000 men a year but that it will naturally evolve from a smaller nucleus until it reaches this gigantic stride. Expansion is to start at once. Australian and New Zealand authorities are here for conference in the project. New airdromes are planned for the various parts of the country to bolster up the project.

That the scheme, besides its military value, will have untold value to this Dominion is generally believed for the war and in after years. Canadian expansion in civil aviation in the after-war years is something very intriguing to contemplate.

SAYS GERMANY MUST ATTACK OR LOSE

General Sir Hubert Gough the other day predicted that Germany must launch an offensive at once or prepare to lose the war through economic collapse, which he said, may be expected before next spring.

As wars go this seems a brief time in which to break down the robot nation of which Hitler has made Germany, with every man a mechanical soldier and in spite of his vast preparations. But it is remembered Germany must continue to secure supplies day after day and week after week, a sort of manna, which must not fail, otherwise Germany goes to the wall very quickly. In a sense it must be a hand-to-mouth experience and policy, for the nation cannot afford to throw away anything or let up in its restrictions placed upon the people of the Reich from the first day of war.

Everyone will hope and pray that the war will be successfully ended soon with the world in such a shape that it can go ahead with the assurance of peace. But Britain and France are preparing for a war of any length, long or short. The very reiteration of this point must be hard on the Chancellor's ears for it means that with the setting up of vast Allied reserves goes the meaning that the full measure of the Allied war effort has not been reached. The same cannot be said of Germany. Many believe German power has seen its peak. Guesses of all kinds have been heard as to the length of the war. Britain and France, however, are pursuing a course of action which will fit into either scheme, a long war or a short war. They are determined on the economic collapse of Germany as the cheapest and best way to win the war for the Allies and the world

DYKES IN THE LOW COUNTRIES

"As long as the dykes of Holland
Divide the land from the sea."

How many boys and girls of other years have read almost with tears in their eyes the story of little Peter who discovering water trickling through one of the dykes which guard his native land from the sea, stayed at the post of danger, plugging the small aperture with his hand and preventing further erosion until help came.

Today the Netherlands and Belgium are observing precautions. They are testing their dykes and in the Dutch defence zone martial law has been declared, with the object of bolstering up the defences and curbing operations of spies. About five hundred Dutch villages have been under martial law for two days. While these are in all parts of the country most of them are on the German border, or the northern and western seacoast areas and in the parts which would be inundated were the country invaded. It is said from informed circles that there are no outward threats but that the steps taken are merely precautionary.

It will be remembered that in September the first tests of the dykes were made by the Low Countries.

These small countries have to be prepared. Belgium knows what it meant to be unprepared in 1914.

POLAND'S SACRIFICE

Could all the Poles, living and dead, somehow leave to posterity a record of their sufferings caused because Adolf Hitler sent into that "fair land of Poland" his armies on September 1st., not all the presses in the world could run off the books which would go to make up that library of record of horrors caused by the Nazi ideal of domination and use of force. A man would not be able to read in thousands of years should it be possible for him to live that long, the full story of Poland's sacrifice. Only a minute portion of the story will ever see the light but what there is will inspire men to destroy the system with which Hitler treats his neighbors.

"Planes fifteen yards high . . .. three wagons of women and children blown to pieces . . .. German bombs falling in front of homes . . . Women and children screaming . . . Old men on their knees praying . . . Women starting to dig bomb-proof shelters, driven by the bombers to flee to cellars . . . All we had to eat was tea and bread three times a day and once in a while rice for dinner . . ."

That is a faint impression of stories told by Polish girls who are now in America, but who have minds seared with the memories of awful nights and horrible days as German fliers hovered over Poland, dropping, dropping, bombs, bombs.

The full story would blind the eyes and madden the brain of readers.

That is something a German army did in a foreign country.

Britain and France on behalf of mankind are determined that this shall never again be permitted by the Hitler armies, for war on civilians and the use of force to settle disputes which could be readily settled about a conference table are against every principle of justice.

Hitler said Germany's cup of trouble over Poland was full and overflowing. He should tell of Poland's cup of misery and degradation.

A VISION OF A FEDERATION

That out of this second war will come a determined effort to establish a federation of European nations on the basis similar to the United States plan so as to maintain peace and solve difficulties as they rise is the hope of many. Lord Marley recently said that this thought was in the minds of some even today. Hugh S. Watt, British journalist, gave expression to the same view and declared that Britain's leaders had virtually decided upon such a federation. He said he could say so on the highest authority that British political circles are thinking along these lines for the after-war days.

He declared that Britain would consider giving up some of the essential elements of her sovereign powers in order to establish some form of world order, but that such would depend upon Germany not going Communist after the war. Accordingly as he viewed the plan "each unit would give up its external sovereignty and pass over control of its foreign relations to be ruled by this supreme authority.

British speakers have it is said spoken of a better order in the future which would make war impossible. Of course a federation like this has been dreamed of over and over again and some may at the start have thought the League of Nations was something like this. A federation is man's dream as a means of ending recurring wars. How such a federation can be brought about after the experiences of Europe for twenty or more centuries is for leaders to decide and for time to reveal. Wars are sapping the life and spirit of Europe and Germany has lost all individuality in the last thirty or more years for everything has been moulded into one fashion—militarism, which means loss of culture and lowering of the level of civilization and the waste of human energy and wealth. If such a federation should come and succeed, the world would rejoice for humanity practically the world over would be guaranteed peace. Meanwhile a disagreeable task has to be done for the immediate future—to beat Hitlerism into ploughshares and pruning hooks.

Italian Birthrate

Mussolini's campaign for larger families has scored impressive results, and Fascism points proudly to one more victory. Since the end of 1921 the population of Italy has grown by very nearly six million. Back in 1921 the population of England and Wales was almost the same as that of Italy. By the latest estimates the increase in the English population would be something over three and a half million.

The test, however, is not wholly one between Fascism in Italy and Democracy in England. There is the original difference between the Italian birthrate and the English birth rate. Italy's population in the twenty years preceding the advent of Mussolini increased by virtually the same figure as in eighteen years of Fascism. Actually the growth of population before Mussolini must have been considerably more rapid, because emigration before the World War drained off anywhere between a quarter of a million and half a million people annually.

Today it is a question whether Mussolini attaches quite as much importance to more babies for Italy as he did up to a little while ago. Babies, of course, meant soldiers, but in an age of mechanized warfare quality of population counts more than ever as against brute numbers.

Quantity is not to be despised. Between two opponents equally matched in quality, say France and Germany, the latter's big numerical margin is a very important factor. But in the case of Italy it has seemed to some observers that the nation's military standing might be more rapidly advanced by spending money on elite air fighters and submarine fighters than on piling up just army divisions.

For that matter the quality rather than the quantity of babies might have profitably engaged Mussolini's attention even in the simpler war techniques of an earlier time. Today we have the spectacle of millions of men facing each other on the Rhine, but people speak of a decisive stroke for victory to be delivered by a comparatively few thousands of men in airplanes or on the sea.

People are even saying that the present temper of the world will not tolerate the enormous human wastage of the last war. If it is to be a war of attrition, it will not be by grinding millions of men out of existence, but by wearing down the opponent's nerves. The emphasis is drifting away from cannon fodder to twenty-four hours a day in the armament factories.—New York Times.

The house was gutted.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

The Cause of "Strange" Behavior

I have a physician friend, a former professor of medicine, who is now a practising psychiatrist. I have referred several cases to him and the results have been excellent but he dislikes putting a label on the particular mental disease present, that is, give the ailment some definite name. He has several long talks with the patients, some of the talks lasting as long as two hours. He seems to simply discuss the every day affairs of life, and gets the patient talking freely. In a casual way he'll ask the patient where he was born—city, village, or on a farm, — ask about his early life before and at school, how he got along at home and at school, what he liked best at that time, what particular disappointments or difficulties he had met. Whether he had played with the other children, and if not, why; what was his occupation, how did he come to choose it, or was it chosen for him by his parents; had he had any infections—teeth, tonsils, or other part; how was he eating and sleeping; and what did he do with his leisure time.

When the patient has thought up the answers to all these questions has talked ahead about his life, his habits, his likes and dislikes, he has given the psychiatrist a fairly complete picture of his inmost thoughts, feelings and emotions.

With this information, the psychiatrist is usually able to see or understand why the patient behaves as he does. The patient has 'his' reasons for 'different' or strange behavior because, as he sees things, his actions are absolutely normal or right, even if they are different from the actions of others.

In explaining to me how he was able to help these patients, the psychiatrist said: "After hearing his story I say to myself, "What would you do if you were in the patient's place?" I have to admit that I would likely behave as he does. And so I explain how the events of his early life, perhaps being over-protected by his parents, not playing enough with other youngsters and learning to give and take, had caused him to build up his own way of living, a sort of 'private' or 'special' way, which, of course, was not the way the other members of his family or the community lived. When he realizes how he got started behaving "differently", it is not usually difficult to get him back to behaving in a more normal manner".

Over 500,000 Tons Contraband Detained by Allies

Reports Spread Britain's Program May Extend to Seizures of German Exports

London, Nov. 3—(CP)— The Ministry of Economic Warfare announced today that the allied contraband control system had "intercepted and detained well over 500,000 tons of contraband suspected of being destined for Germany" since the outbreak of the war.

The figure was announced as reports were circulated in London that Great Britain's contraband control program might be extended to seizure of German exports as well as to goods shipped to Germany.

The ministry commented only that a statement dealing with the question probably would be forthcoming next week. Up to now only goods bound for Germany have been seized.

The announcement today listed British seizures for the first eight weeks of the war at more than 400,000 tons and the French at 150,000 tons.

Two Sentenced, One for Jail Break, Other for Aiding

William Maracle and Charles Brant of the Tyendinaga Reserve were sentenced to three months in the county jail by Magistrate E. J. Butler in the Deseronto Police Court yesterday afternoon on charges of jail-breaking on Oct. 31.

Maracle pleaded guilty to a charge of escaping custody while being under arrest on a charge of intoxication. Brant was sentenced to three months when he pleaded guilty to a charge of aiding Maracle to escape custody.

According to Chief Beatty, Maracle was arrested on a charge of intoxication and locked up. With the aid of an outsider, who broke the lock, he escaped from the jail. Later he was rearrested by Provincial Constable Barrett of Napanee. On the intoxication charge he was sentenced to fourteen days to run concurrent to the other sentence.

Bootleggers Cache Liquor Under Pulpit

Gaffney, S.C., Nov. 3 (AP)— Sharp-nosed policemen found 10 gallons of whisky under a church pulpit and began wondering whether bootleggers had caches in other places of worship. They discovered three 10-gallon barrels of whisky atop another church and 10 gallons on a third church's roof.

The Martyr-King

Three hundred years after Charles I was executed by Oliver Cromwell, England's first and last dictator, the justice of the drastic sentence is still a matter of heated controversy among members of the Church of England and the Presbytery. Warm in the affections of the Anglican laity and clergy is the memory of the Martyr-King who gallantly walked to the scaffold rather than surrender his monarchial rights.

Just as schoolboys on this continent play mounties and Indians or G-men and gangsters, so the English youngsters are still playing Roundheads and Cavaliers. The game has now been brought to the theatre by Maurice Colbourne, author of "Charles the King." In this chronicle-drama of 13 scenes and 48 speaking parts, the literary dice are heavily loaded and all sympathies lie with the gentle but bewildered monarch.

This is understandable when it is remembered that Barry Jones, long an exponent of kingly roles, brings vigor to his characterization of the human but fallible Charles who is torn between loyalties to his wife and people and that defiance which he hurls in the teeth of Cromwell and his accusers in that momentous trial which was held in the Privy Council of the Mother of Parliaments.

Restoration Welcomed

The brutal beheading of Charles I. and the assumption of dictatorial rule by Cromwell has its pro and con devotees. It is a matter of historical record, however, that the Restoration was joyously hailed by the great majority of the citizens. Too dull and monotonous had been the Puritan regime with its banning of all theatrical activities and that traditional merrymaking in the village square so dear to the English heart in the 17th century.

The "curse of Cromwell" is still a byword in Ireland, which was burned and ravaged by the Roundheads in their bigoted battle on the Papacy. Thousands of Irish—men, women and children—were taken and sold into slavery in the American colonies and the British West Indies.

Should the Royal Martyr have been executed? Manifestly, he was not tried by a jury of his peers. Two hundred years later, there was no one to give the lie to Macaulay and Carlyle when they wrote their damaging and character-blackening accounts of Charles I. Contemporary evidence is not now being ignored. This is evident in Lord Tweedsmuir's biography of Cromwell and in Maurice Coulborne's "Charles the King." Both are eminently fair. Whether Charles was the tyrant or Cromwell the apostle of liberty is left to the individual judgment of the reader or playgoer.

In "Charles the King," as in Lord Tweedsmuir's studious tome, fresh light is shed on the life and times of the martyred monarch and on events in this tumultuous period of British history which led to the execution of a king. Once again the subject is treated on stage. Fifty years ago, Henry Irving thrilled the playgoing public with his interpretation of the murdered monarch. Mid-Victorian and violently emotional in dramatics, this was not a true presentment of the causes of England's Civil War and the climax of the rebellion. Colbourne's play, based on impartial research, is scrupulously fair to King and opponents alike.

Since Macaulay and Carlyle, more impartial historians have examined the contemporary evidence ignored by the two mentioned. These are convinced that Charles I. literally fought to the death to save his Church. The accusation of that great historian, Sir Charles Firth, is that: "After eight months of futile negotiation, the Scots, disgusted by the King's obstinate refusal to accept Presbyterianism, resolved to abandon the King's cause and hand him over to his English subjects."

The King repeatedly refused to surrender the rights of the Church of England. With all the zeal of a fanatic, but gentle, he never wavered in his defence of the Church and he did give his life in its defence. The tendency today to undertake fresh examination of original documentary sources is casting new light on pre-conceived and ill-conceived misconstrued evidence.

That is the mission of Maurice Colbourne in his writing of "Charles the King." The Martyr-King he shows was not an oppressor of the people but stood between them and the Parliament of big business men who were then exploiting the nation at a time when there was no middle class. This about-face in historical estimation is the theme of "Charles the King." Because it clarifies the controversy that has been raging for so long, this chronicle-play should be seen not only by drama-enthusiasts but by sober-minded judges of historical events.

The King's Funeral

The body of King Charles was placed in a deal coffin costing only six shillings, and next day it was embalmed and the head sewn on. Herbert obtained permission to remove his master's remains to Windsor, performing this office by night, with the help of three servants. Four Peers were permitted to attend the burial. In his Memoirs Herbert writes: "This is memorable, that at such time as the King's body was brought out of St. George's Hall the sky was serene and clear, but presently it began to snow, and fell so fast as by that time they came to the west end of the Royal Chapel, the black velvet pall was all white (the color of innocency), being thick-covered with snow. So went the White King to his grave, in the 48th year of his age and the 22nd year and 10th month of his reign. Letting pass Merlin's prophecies, "some make it allude to the white satin His Majesty wore when he was crowned in Westminster Abbey, in the year 1625, former kings having on purple robes at their coronation."

In 1813, workmen constructing a new passage under the quire of St. George's Chapel accidentally struck a hole through one of the walls of the vault of Henry VIII. Peering in, they saw not only King Henry's coffin, but another, covered in a black velvet pall. On being informed of this, the Prince Regent ordered this coffin to be opened in the presence of himself and others. Among the company was the royal physician, Sir Henry Halford, who described in a document now in the British Museum, the opening of the coffin, the removal of the cere-cloth and how the head was easily "taken up and held to view." Of the hair, he states: "A portion of it which has since been cleaned and dried is of a beautiful dark-brown color. That of the beard was a reddish brown." He continues: "On holding up the head, to examine the place of separation from the body, the muscles of the neck had evidently retracted themselves considerably, and the fourth cervical vertebra was found to be cut through its substance transversely, leaving the surfaces of the divided portions perfectly smooth and even, an appearance which could have been produced only by a heavy blow, inflicted with a very sharp instrument and which furnished the last proof wanting to identify King Charles the First."

The head was then restored to its place, the coffin soldered up again, and the vault closed. A small piece of bone, retained by Sir Henry Halford, was presented to King Edward VII., who ordered the vault to be reopened and the relic laid upon the coffin.—Montreal Gazette.

As Frenchman Sees it

The sudden professed love of Germany for France does not catch Frenchmen napping. They know all too well that the Germans have no warm spots in their hearts for France.

There are Frenchmen living today who have seen their country invaded twice by hordes of grey-clad German soldiers. These Frenchmen know that only the Maginot Line and the soldiers of France are standing in the way of a third invasion in their lifetime.

That is why the German efforts to make a separate peace with France are falling on stony ground. Frenchmen turn a deaf ear to the cry for peace, because they appreciate that it would be only a truce.

Take the case of one French peasant, as an example. He is proud of his service for France, prouder still that he has six grandsons in the army today.

The particular Frenchman was only a little lad in the Franco-Prussian war. But, he can remember well how the invading Prussians stormed in from Germany. He knows the record of rape and pillage that the invaders from Germany left in their wake.

But, most of all, he can remember how the Prussians arrested his father, along with the fathers of other little French boys. And, having accused the fathers of sniping, the Prussians led them to the village square. The men were lined up against a wall and executed by a firing squad. Nor, were the people allowed to remove the bodies. The Prussians left them in the square to terrorize the rest of of the populace. The little French boy gazed at his father lying in a pool of his own blood. He never forgot the sight. Neither, did he ever forget that the Prussians had done it.

Then, over 40 years later, in 1914, the Prussians came back to invade France once more. This time the boy had grown to manhood. He was over the regulation army age, but he got into the ranks. In common with hundreds of thousands of his fellow Frenchmen, he fought at Verdun. His gallantry helped to stem the tide of Prussian invasion, when German troops tried to storm their way through the fortress of Verdun. The line held and France was saved.

Not only did the Frenchman fight at Verdun, but his son was killed early in the war.

He had lost his father in the Prussian invasion of 1871.

He had lost his son in the Prussian invasion of 1914.

And, he had fought himself against the Prussian invaders in 1915.

Now, as he nears 80 years, the aged Frenchman knows the Prussians are knocking on the door of France again. He realizes that six of his grandsons are manning the forts to drive back the invaders from the East. What his father had done, what he had done, what his son had done, now his grandsons must do again.

With all the bitterness of a third invasion in his lifetime burning into his heart, is it any wonder this Frenchman scorns the olive branch held out to France by Hitler? He realizes it is nothing more than a strategic gesture being made in the hope that France will withdraw and so be easier to gobble up at some future day.

He is not an isolated case, this aged French peasant. His story is the same story that many another Frenchman and Frenchwoman knows all too well. They delve into the wells of experience to realize how the Prussian feels towards France.

The enmity is rooted deeply in the hearts of France. The people don't want any part of Germany, but they do insist that Germany must quit, once and for all, the passion of the Prussians to invade France every now and again. Three times in a lifetime is three times too many.—Windsor Star.

COLDS
Don't Upset Stomach By Drastic Dosing

Taking strong medicines into the stomach for colds may add to the misery by upsetting digestion. That's why 1 out of 3 Canadian mothers treat colds externally with Vicks VapoRub.

Just rubbed on throat, chest and back at bedtime, VapoRub acts on the skin like a warming poultice and —at the same time—gives off soothing medicated vapours that are breathed direct into the irritated air passages. Often by morning most of the misery of the cold is gone.

CANADA'S EXPERTS STAY IN ENGLAND

But Hon. T. A. Crerar Will Return Shortly from Discussions

By FRED BACKHOUSE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 3 (CP)—Members of the Canadian mission here for empire discussions will remain in England after conclusion of the present talks in order to deal with special questions affecting Canada, it was learned from a reliable source here today.

It is understood that Hon. T. A. Crerar, Canadian Minister of Mines and Natural Resources, will sail for Canada as soon as his work is finished but that the rest of the experts will remain here on an "indefinite stay".

This source said there is at present no intention to establish a permanent commission of Dominion experts in London for duration of the war. It was added, however, that such a possibility always was "on the cards".

Experts to Work on Problems.

The other Dominions and India will also be leaving here smaller groups of experts when the main parleys have been concluded. The primary job of these groups will be to deal with details of problems affecting their several governments and also for purposes of liaison with each other.

Thus, it was pointed out, there will already be here the most necessary elements for quickly setting up a permanent consultative body representing all the empire should such a step be considered necessary.

The reason the Canadians will form the most important group of experts remaining here is, of course, the vast air training scheme in Canada, foremost item on the list of subjects under discussion between the empire representatives.

The atmosphere in which the present informal talks are being held was described as a "full appreciation that the problems are common ones and must, and would, be solved by closest co-operation."

Tribute to the empire co-operation was made in the House of Commons yesterday by Prime Minister Chamberlain who called it "generous and wholehearted". He placed a high value upon the fuller knowledge of the Dominions' plans which would result from the current conversations.

May Define Peace Terms Later.

In the House of Lords, Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax indicated a time might come when a more detailed definition of war aims would be made, "but the first purpose we must have is to defeat those who, by their repeated violation of European order and threats to freedom, have obliged us to take up arms."

The Labor party, meanwhile, went ahead with plans to publish what it considers should be equitable terms for ending the war.

Apparently the government saw no serious content in Premier Molotoff's speech to the Supreme Soviet Tuesday. The prime minister imagined it must have "occasioned some disappointment" in Berlin. And Viscount Samuel, Labor, said the Soviet premier's words showed clearly "that Germany in this war now is isolated militarily."

The government's determination to continue trade negotiations with the Soviet was seen in Mr. Chamberlain's reference to Soviet Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff's declaration in an earlier speech that the Soviet stood for "peace and prevention of aggression", aims identical with those of Great Britain.

Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal, cheered the government's decision to "pursue a patient policy of negotiation" with the Russians.

The Daily Telegraph commented: "Hopes, we know, were cherished in the dictatorships that the empire would never again stand together in war. Those delusions are gone with the snows of yesteryear. All the colonies, the prime minister was able to say yesterday, are doing their utmost to help us with raw materials and foodstuffs."

Queen Pays Visit.

W. D. Herridge, former Canadian Minister to Washington and leader of the new democratic movement in the Dominion, was in London today but the purpose of his visit was not announced.

The King yesterday visited an unidentified hangar to confer Distinguished Flying Crosses on five airmen for outstanding performances in the North Sea area and the raid on the Kiel Canal Sept. 4. It was the first time an English King has decorated active service men on British soil.

The Queen paid a visit to Queen Charlotte's Maternity Hospital and inspected the gas-proof room into which babies would be taken in the event of an air raid.

Criticism of British censorship regulations was renewed by the news picture magazine Picture Post which printed two "blacked out" pages in place of censored photographs of British military successes. Following pages showed French fighting units and German propaganda shots.

The Daily Herald called on Britain to prove her sincere attachment to democracy by giving the Indian people a concrete "token" of greater freedom. (The government has announced consideration of dominion status for India would have to await the conclusion of the war.)

THE COMMENT

Carrying On—Some months ago, the Automotive Industry of Canada undertook an educational campaign dealing with the subject of Canadian Unity. In spite of the war, or some might say, because of the war, the Industry has decided to continue this patriotic and timely effort.

Since the campaign began, the subject has assumed great significance in the minds of our countrymen. From all over the Dominion have come assurances of close cooperation with the national government from the premiers of provinces. New Brunswick's Mr. Dysart, has told something in the present announcement of the Automotive Industry of the part his province is prepared to play in this great struggle. We heartily commend a close reading of this story of New Brunswick.

4 MISSING AS VESSEL SINKS AFTER COLLISION

London, Nov. 3—(CP)—The captain and 24 crewmen of the 3,402-ton British steamship Mervyn, sunk in collision with an unidentified ship off the coast of Wales last Wednesday, were landed at Llanelly, Wales, today. Four of the crew still were missing.

THE RUNAWAY

by

Kathleen Norris

"Do you want to pay now, dear, or have me charge the milk?" Mrs. Kinpaw, who seemed amiable and sympathetic enough as she saw Becky's concern, asked as she handed over the bottle. Becky felt a moment's check.

"I can pay now," she said, opening her purse.

"Thanks," the other woman said in a surprised, brighter voice. "He's run up a little bill at the drugstore, poor feller," she added, thoughtfully, looking down at the unconscious and muttering Gavin.

"Well, I'll settle it later," Becky was not going to take out her money in this particular place. Intuitive caution warned her. She was absorbed in a score of duties as the landlady left the room.

No time to think or worry or reason or feel sorry for herself; it must be work now. She had straightened the bedclothes, shaken up the pillow; she had a sodden towl in her hand, was wiping chairs as she set them in order, was gathering scattered newspaper and cigarette butts and all the odds and ends of rubbish which accumulate in a neglected sickroom.

Ice arrived in a yellow bowl. Becky interrogated Mrs. Kinpaw. "The man who's rented this bed. Can you get rid of him, put him somewhere else? We can't have him in here. He'll get it. Get flu."

"He had it. I think he give it to him," the landlady answered, jerking her head in Gavin's direction. "Sure I can move him. It was just over the week end and we was so crowded."

"Could Mr. Flood be moved to a hospital, do you think?"

"Oh no. The doctor said yesterday it'd be death to move him or even open the window. As a matter of fact," Daisy Kinpaw went on, lowering her voice, "he didn't think he'd get through the night. Naturally I don't like this sort of thing—here. It gets my boarders nervous. I run a dramatic boarding house, you know," she added. "He's goin' on a long journey," she said with a shake of her head as her eyes followed Becky's to Gavin's dark face.

"He hasn't taken any nourishment since Sunday," the other woman volunteered. "I don't know as the doctor wanted him to have none."

"They gave it to my brother right through everything," Becky said. She had a desperate need of help, deep in her soul. Dr. Pringle from home; one of the nurses from the hospital; Mother, above all, mother! Oh, if she could only come into the room, broad and comforting and sure of herself!

The warm milk went in through the cracked black lips; Gavin gulped, moaned and muttered for a second. He half opened his mouth for a fresh supply. Becky did not change her position until the glass was drained. She recommenced her labors with a lightened heart. Just that he had taken some food did not mean much, but it comforted her.

INSTALMENT 7

An investigatory tour to a dark kitchen downstairs and to a hall closet on the floor above resulted in a clean pitcher and glass and some fresh towels. Sheets there were none to spare in the house; Becky put on her hat and coat at three o'clock and went out to find some.

The unfamiliar street was dark and cold and grimy, but Market street, filled with bright shops and markets and movie theatres, was only a few blocks distant, and when she reached it she saw the sign of a department store painted high on the massive sides of the big building, not far away. She could buy sheets there.

On her way she passed a restaurant and entered it in a sudden weakening realization of hunger. The good hot coffee, the sizzling ham and eggs were a feast she never forgot. Not in all her nineteen years had Becky so relished food. It seemed to penetrate in warmth and strength to every fiber of her being.

Sitting back at the restaurant with a great "Ah-h-h!" of relieved hunger, she meditated upon her present situation and wondered what she would do if Gavin died. She could not go home. Not with her love destroyed, and perhaps after years, when Joe Feratta was safely married to someone else...

Meanwhile, the sheet. She bought eight cotton sheets and eight pillow slips, two warm blankets, a little stove with solid spirit to burn in it, a small cream-colored saucepan, a tall bottle of toilet water, drugs, malted milk, two all-enveloping hospital aprons and a pair of tennis shoes.

Walking home, she felt a sensation new to her nineteen years, a feeling of power, of self-reliance. Her old world was gone, swept away in a few short hours. But she could learn to live in this new world and master it!

The doctor came in at eight o'clock and was openly pleased to find the sickroom so changed and Becky in charge. She had managed with the help of a man who appeared to be a sort of porter in the house, a mysterious sickly-looking fellow everyone called "Heimie," to move Gavin into the bed, a bed freshly made and smooth. One of the new blankets and two of the new sheets were on the couch, neatly arranged for her own sleeping place. Clean and fresh herself, in a white apron and white shoes, she reported that her patient had had ice water and orange juice continually, and two half glasses of milk.

"Very good work, Miss Gibson. Get Heimie to shave him tomorrow," Dr. Greer said. A fat, big, disorderly man whose face would also have been improved by a shave he handled his patient briefly, expertly, holding the hot dry wrist, opening a drowsy eyelid with blunt fingers, listening with his stethoscope at Gavin's exposed chest.

"Tomorrow"? she repeated, sudden hope in the eyes she fixed on his face.

"Yip," the doctor said, closing his bag.

"You think he's better then, Doctor?"

"I think it may break, say around midnight. He'll be better then. You'll want to change his pajamas if it does. You his sister, what?"

"We're engaged to be married."

"I see. Well, I'll tell old Kinpaw to come in and help you if he begins to sweat. Got clean things for him?"

"Yes. He's got three pairs of pajamas here still in the package. She says he sent out for them when he was first ill."

"How about you? How about you getting it?"

"I'm not afraid."

"I'll tell you," said the doctor, departing. "I can send a nurse in here sometime tomorrow morning, and you two can give him a good bath. That'll make him more comfortable He's pretty sick, but I believe — well, can't tell. He might and he might not. But you call old Daisy if it breaks."

"I've been sponging him off a little with alcohol."

"Good idea. And any time you want to; you pile him way under blankets, just leave a hole over his faceto breathe and open the window. Have to have radio going in the next room, I suppose?"

"It would seem so. It's been going since I got here this afternoon."

"Well," said Dr. Allen Greer in a cautious undertone, "if he gets better you can get him out of here pretty soon."

Becky had borrowed two crime magazines from her landlady. When the doctor had gone she performed as much of an evening toilet as was wise for a nurse on night duty, putting on pajamas and wrapper, brushing her hair off her face, assuming comfortable slippers. Then she aired the room for three biting clean fresh minutes, and tried her patient with still another half glass of milk. Once again he took it obediently, murmuring a feverish whispered jargon in which she sometimes recognized her own name. But to the touch of her finger tips he seemed hotter than ever.

She moved the lamp, lay reading on the couch. The radio went on in the front parlor, separated from her own apartment only by a folding door. She could hear girls' voices in there, men's voices, the clinking of glasses. Other unfamiliar night and city noises kept her long awake. Horns, the jangle and clang of streetcars, whistles on the bay.

LONG CONFLICT LIKELY, OPINION OF W. R. DAVIES

President of The Canadian Press Says 90% of People Behind Hitler in Germany

ITALY AGAINST AXIS

Truro, N. S., Nov. 3—(CP)—The war in Europe likely will stretch into a long conflict, W. Rupert Davies, publisher of the Kingston Whig-Standard and President of The Canadian Press, declared yesterday in a luncheon address to CP Maritime members at their annual meeting.

Recently returned from a prewar survey that carried him through nine European countries, Mr. Davies described public opinion and other factors bearing on the war as he had found them through inquiries on his trip. He was accompanied by E. S. Johnson, London Superintendent of the CP.

90 Per Cent Behind Hitler

In Germany, Mr. Davies said, he had concluded after personal interviews with many individuals that 90 per cent of the people appeared behind Adolf Hitler. But he emphasized their support might be shifted by a British blockade effective enough to leave much of the population in semi-starvation. At the time of his visit, though, the country gave no indications of scarcity of essential commodities.

Expensive cafes and night-clubs were well patronized then. He had found no lack of foodstuffs, except for an absence of cream. The Germans then apparently believed they would march into Poland without opposition from Britain; he and Mr. Johnson observed no sentiment against British people on the part of the German man in the street. Everywhere, the two Canadian newspapermen were met with kindness and courtesy.

Expectant of War

When Mr. Davies went to Danzig, he had found the people of the Free City expectant of war. There, he had been told the Poles were confident of being able to hold out against invasion for at least six months. And had the war not erupted before the rainy season that bogs Poland's poor roads, it might have been a different story.

In Czecho-Slovakia, a demonstration by marching German youth indicated the tension in that country. Truckloads of armed soldiers preceded and followed the marchers, watching the apathetic crowds. Here, he had been told there would be revolution when war broke out; but he explained that under present conditions attempts at revolution would be ineffectual because of lack of arms and rigid Nazi surveillance.

Poland was found by the Ontario publisher to be a land of peaceful peasantry, a land which had never waged an offensive war in its history. Its port, Gdynia, had grown swiftly into one of Europe's five greatest. Yet it, too, soon was to be violated.

Many Against Axis

As the outstanding characteristic of present-day Italy, Mr. Davies found a virtually unanimous, if silent, opposition to the Rome-Berlin axis. Not one person to whom he had spoken outside of official quarters expressed approval of the alliance with Hitler.

He had found, too, a growing opposition to the present regime. Where a year ago portaits of Mussolini hung alone, today the portrait of King Victor Emmanuel hung side by side with those of Il Duce almost everywhere. The Crown Prince commanded a strong following, and it was growing. If Mussolini's power were tested with the people today, he probably would find himself in the minority.

Primary object of Mr. Davies' trip was to visit European Bureaux of the Associated Press, which serves Canada's newspapers through The Canadian Press, in order to measure their staffs against the exigencies of impending war. All through the AP's European system, he said, he had found its personnel impartial, accurate and highly efficient.

Move in Beauty

By HELEN FOLLETT

FEW GIRLS are pleased with the contour of their legs and that's not surprising, since pretty legs aren't running around all over the universe. Too many feminine pins are emaciated; too many are cursed with fatted calves, and then there are those with bowed legs or knock knees. Terrible!

You can't do much about bowed legs after full growth has been attained, because the trouble is caused by deformities of the bones. Fat legs can be slivered and thin ones can be padded with firm muscles and adipose tissue. The best means of normalizing, treating both of these conditions, is to march high and march handsome.

Put on shorts; you can't do this exercise on skirts. Hand on hips, chest up like a good soldier, march. With each step lift the foot high; the higher the better. On your toes. It won't be easy to keep your balance, especially if you are a habitual cushion sitter and haven't been accustomed to exercise.

Don't forget that movement means nothing in the way of figure remolding unless the muscles are given a vigorous workout. Casual motions don't even wake up the blood stream.

Tap dancing is recommended, especially when the torso is slender, legs and thigh heavy. Jumping a rope is a splendid exercise, but not for the heavyweight, because it may prove a strain on the heart.

Skirts of evening gowns are not quite as full as they have been. With the arrival of the bustle there has appeared a new back fulness. This means that you've got to have a neat waistline and a flat tummy.

Skirts are almost long enough to walk on, which means that a woman has to learn to trip lightly, walk as if on air. That's nice. All the new modes are an inspiration for figure molding and the cultivation of graceful movements.

As we dress, so do we behave. In the way of the knee-length skirt, flat bust and boyish bob, girls were inclined to be hoydenish. Now, with curls and fluttering draperies, there's a return to the lady-like type. Grand!

Girls who are always on the gallop, rushing hither and yon and elsewhere on the map, had better watch their eating habits. Eating hurriedly will ruin the finest complexion because it has a depressing effect upon the digestive motors. Not enough gastric juice. Food not chewed properly. A digestive organ that is kicking up a fuss can cause enlarged pores, excessive oiliness of the skin, blackheads, eruptions.

Irradiated Milk Supplies Necessary Vitamin D

A good deal of progress has been made in adding to milk the vitamins in which it is deficient. For instance, Vitamin D is one of the hardest vitamins to get in foods. We have only two good sources of it—sunlight and cod-liver oil. But now we can get milk to which the vitamin has been added by irradiation.

Of course in the summer, this vitamin takes care of itself mostly because we are out in the sunshine so much, absorbing it into our systems. The vitamin is found in the ultra rays of the sun. In winter the ultra rays diminish so much that there isn't much of the vitamin to be had from that source. Added to this, people don't expose their bodies to the sun in the winter as they do in summer.

These are the reasons we must find supplies of the vitamin elsewhere. Normally it is present in milk in such small quantities that it doesn't help greatly. Today, however, science has developed a way to add this vitamin to milk.

When the milk is being processed by a dairy that does this sort of thing, it is run through shallow pans. While in these pans it is passed under the ultra-violet ray irradiator. This deposits the vitamin D in the milk. About 135 units of vitamin D per quart is the amount milk will absorb under the present process.

By controlled feeding tests, this concentration has been found sufficient to prevent rickets in a normal baby without his receiving the vitamin from any other source. However, it is pretty close to the minimum, so to be on the safe side I always advise parents not to neglect giving cod-liver oil as well.

Milk loses nothing by irradiation; it does provide an extra supply of the vitamin we are talking about. If you like, you may decrease the amount of cod-liver oil the child takes, particularly if he is one of those who hates the stuff. This irradiated milk is especially good for older children and adults. In spite of good intentions and instructions, an older child, left to administer the cod-liver oil himself, may avoid or neglect it. The same is true of adults. I know I try to make a practice of taking cod-liver oil every day of the winter months. But often I forget. Well, if you are taking irradiated milk this oversight isn't so important or so serious.

In most cities now you can get irradiated milk that is, with vitamin D added. There are two other ways of adding the vitamin to milk. One is to add a concentrated form of cod-liver oil to the milk. The other is to feed the cattle that supply the milk on a diet of high vitamin content. Both these methods are good, but they aren't used as widely as the irradiated process.

It is interesting to see how the milk of various mammals vary. For instance, when a baby whale swims over to is mother at meal time he gets milk which is almost fifty per cent fat. The mare feeds her colt milk which is only one per cent fat. To show you how close cows and human milk compare, the average cow's milk contains 3.95 percent fat, and the human milk, 3.86 per cent—less than a tenth of one per cent difference. Of course this is the reason that cow's milk is the most beneficial food man has—it comes the closest to the food his mother gave him when he was a baby.

Hospitality Must Never Be Criticized

It is absolutely unforgiveable to accept hospitality and then criticize it. Unless you are prepared for any kind of experience, do not make a prolonged visit. But, if you have elected to stay under a friend's roof, never say anything about that visit that could be construed as derogatory. You may have had a "perfectly awful" time; you may have been "horribly uncomfortable"; you may even have been neglected. But, because you have been a guest, you must suffer in silence . . . .at the time, and forever after.

Puzzled Over Announcement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

I am planning to be married soon and do not know what to do about announcements.

1—I have been married before, my parents are dead, and the only relatives I have are my two sisters and one brother. The young man I am to marry has never been married before, and he knows about my first marriage. His uncles and aunts however, do not know of my previous marriage ,and he does not want them to know unless they find out about it themselves. His mother is not living, but he has a father. Could we have regular announcements, or what?

He has a very large family of relatives, and there are some we want to announce our marriage to and some we want to invite to our wedding. We are very much confused about all this.

Mary

Well, this question that you sent me is indeed a stickler! I am sure that you and your fiance would not wish me to subscribe to anything that "conceals" a fact, especially such an important fact as your first marriage. Facts such as this are inevitably revealed, sooner or later, and I like the honest way of revealing them oneself, with no clouded sense of being indirect or dishonest.

If, as I judge, you assumed your maiden name (with the 'Miss') after your divorce, you and your fiance might hide behind this name and nobody need convince you that this isn't the straightforward thing to do. But I can't help feeling that you would be happier in your marriage if you convince your fiance that integrity is a shining thing and half-truths or concealed truths are clouded. Those uncles and aunts may bother him now . . . but later he won't be so much concerned with them as he will be with your willingness to enter into a concealment pact. Make him proud of you, and make yourself proud of yourself, by refusing to be a partner to this.

Your invitations to your informal house wedding, and the small reception afterward may be, appropriately, in the form of notes of invitation, written either by you, or whoever is to be the hostess of your wedding.

Then you may, if you wish, send formal announcements to those relatives and friends who are not invited to the ceremony and reception. It is not necessary to send announcement, but they are a convenience. If one of your sisters or one of your brothers is married, your sister and her husband, or your brother and his wife might send the announcements in their names. Or you and your fiance might send these announcements in your names.

The Case of the Poor Little Poor Girl

If we were to read of the problems of this 17-year old girl and it hadn't as a date line, one of our principal cities, we'd say smugly: "That couldn't happen here in the United States".

The case of the poor little poor girl, neither of whose divorced parents want to give her a home—the remarried father, because he has only a two-room flat, and the remarried mother because she says "the girl won't obey me and help wash the dishes", is something to think about.

Asked what women could do to help keep this country out of war, Mrs. Roosevelt answered at her press conference that women should know conditions in their own community, that she was amazed, in travelling about the country, to realize that often people who escorted her were often seeing their home conditions for the first time.

But to return to the case of this rejected child, from a home broken by divorce, the only solution offered will seem amazing to a good many of us. The judge who had studied the case of this 17-year-old girl six months ago and had given the child to her mother's custody as an experiment, seemed to think the only way out of the difficulty was to marry her off.

There was no waiting suitor, no deeply-in-love young man impatiently waiting for his bride. The plan, as proposed by the kindly judge, was more suggestive of the Orient than this "Land of the Free". It seems that some people regard the Judicial office as more or less of a matrimonial bureau, and write to judges to pick out husbands and wives for them. So the judge thumbed through a sheaf of letters and said: "I'll look into these marriage proposals that have come in the mail. Here's a college man from New York who says he'll marry this girl and give her a home. I'll take the case under advisement."

Judging from her picture, the girl is charmingly pretty, with a sensitive little face under a big floppy hat tied with a narrow velvet ribbon tied under the chin. Looking at it, we hope this marriage to the strange young man who offers to give her a home, will turn out well. But —one's good old-fashioned Americanism suffers a shock. Isn't there some other solution?

Is there no educational institution in these United States willing to give this girl a chance to train her to earn her own livelihood, instead of turning her over to a strange young man in this Oriental fashion

It looks as if we were a bit too prompt in patting ourselves on the back about our way of doing things. When Katherine Mayo wrote about child marriages in her book "Mother India", we were properly horrified and yet our own country is full of such unnatural matings,—little girls of 10 and 12 married to men old enough to be their fathers and grandfathers. You've seen their pictures in the papers scores of times.

In the July number of an American magazine, Pearl Buck winner of the Nobel prize, had a stirring article on "America's Gunpowder Women", and the laissez-faire manner in which they accept conditions in this country which should be remedied.

Looking round our well furnished women's clubs—I belong to several myself—it seems at times to me that we might play less bridge and take less seriously the question of our non-fattening luncheons. For whether we realize it or not, there are things of more importance.

But now, happily, at long last, comes the formation that the paternal grandfather of this homeless girl has volunteered to take her "where she'll find love and understanding".

Tweed

Tweed — The presentation of "The Royal Visit to Canada," a new series of colored motion pictures photographed by Mr. Fred L. Roy of Peterborough drew a large crowd in the auditorium of Tweed United Church on Monday evening. The presentation was made under the auspices of the United Church choir.

Colour effects and sound accompaniment with Mr. Roy's own descriptive comments, added greatly to the success of the presentation. The audience thrilled anew as they watched the first British monarch ever to set foot on Canadian soil, with his beautiful queen.

The audience was taken from Quebec to Montreal where a soul-stirring welcome again awaited them. Ottawa, the capital city, was a riot of colour with magnificent decorations and the uniformed Scottish and Dragoons.

Toronto, Hamilton and Niagara Falls repeated the welcome already extended to Their Majesties. At the ambitious city, some of the finest close-up views of Queen Elizabeth were obtained. Mr. Roy stood only five feet from Her Majesty when he secured these shots.

Rev. H. L. Morrison, pastor of the United Church introduced Mr. Roy. He saw in the results of the recent Quebec elections the effect of the royal visit. The French-Canadians are intensely loyal to their church, their province and also as they have shown, to their King and Queen.

One interested member of the audience remarked that he had seen practically all of the leading motion pictures of the royal visit to Canada "and that Mr. Roy's pictures were far superior to all the others."

Hallowe'en in Tweed was observed as usual by members of the younger generation on Tuesday evening. For several hours they paraded the streets, going from door to door where they were met by generous householders, who, recalling their own youth, were liberal with their gifts of candy, nuts and apples. Little, if any, damage was done by the youngsters; a welcome change from conditions prevailing not so many years ago.

A Hallowe'en party was held in Tweed High School on Tuesday evening. The members of the staff and the students with some of their friends were present. The freshettes of Form I were duly initiated into the High School and were required to perform various stunts.

Through the generosity of Tweed Hardware a radio was installed in the school to furnish music for the dance. Lunch was served by a committee of the girls.

The district convention of the Boy Scouts is being held in Kingston on Saturday. Rev. A. E. Pepper, Scout Master, Messrs. Gil Cardy and Tip Cotton, assistant Scout Masters, Dr. W. A. Paul and Doug Connor, Fred Hayes and Bill McCrea, patrol leaders, are attending the rally.

Collegiate News

B.C.I. & V.S. Nov. 3—Sound of merriment ascended from the boys' gym on Friday, October 27 after four o'clock. This was the Hallowe'en tea dance put on by the Elevator. The balcony was open for spectators, but many paid the extra 5c to come into the gym in case they recovered from their fright enough to try to jitterbug. Speaking of jitterbugs, some members of fifth form weren't doing too badly. The punch bowl was in charge of Mary Cooke. The music was supplied by Mr. Nicelodian and his orchestra.—K.W.

On Wednesday afternoon it was our very great pleasure to hear Mischa Levitzki in a half-hour of exquisitely-rendered selections. One of the most enjoyable was the Fantasie of Chopin's.

Last Friday the Elevator Hallowe'en dance held at 4.15 was an interesting feature of the Autumn social season.

(The enthusiasm of our reporter is being reserved for the big rugby dance tonight at the Trianon ballroom!)

Girls' Athletic Society

The plans formulated by the Girls' Athletic Society several weeks ago are progressing favourably. Girl volley ball teams are in full swing in Grades XI, XII, and XIII. A very successful field day was carried out several weeks ago.

On Monday, November the sixth, the Grade X girls' wiener roast will take place on Zwick's Island. Every girl in Grade X is invited to attend. A small nominal fee will be charged. The wiener roast will be after four, and a large attendance is expected. Last year a very successful Grade X party was held, and this one will be even better.

The Stamp Club

Last week a fifty-cent mint Bluenose was raffled off at the Stamp Club, Miss Wallen being the lucky winner with ticket number 13, A games party was planned for Friday, November the third, and a stamp bulletin called for November the second. The Treasurer's monthly report was given, and we found that we were distinctly "in clover" (for the present, at least.) Mr. Jury, one of our Honorary members, has promised a very interesting speech and we are all waiting with scarcely-suppressed enthusiasm for it,

The meeting was given over "a bonne heure" to trading, and the members were left haggling back and forth.

Fashion Flashes

A good investment is a fur-trimmed suit consisting of dress and matching jacket. A lovely model is in foggy sea-blue green with rolling shawl collar and peplum of nutria. The frock, of sheer woolen has a gathered top of matching silk jersey.

Just the thing to wear for afternoons is a heavily corded black faille dress done on soft shirtwaist lines with a very narrow pale blue faille collar.

Ready to set off any simple black evening frock is a fitted jacket of bright green velvet with all-over embroidery of gold sequins.

All set to shine at a dinner party dressed in a long sleeved dinner dress on sheath lines, fashioned of black crepe with a big square yoke of ecru lace studded with pearl beads and brilliants.

Snare snoding and drape it in intricate folds to make a nice turban.

At last a bright idea for slippers. A smart little D'Orsay of black satin has a trimming on the toes of flowers done in a long-lasting phosphorescent paint.

ST. ANDREW'S W.M.S.

The Presbyterian W.M.S. met in St. Andrew's Church hall on Wednesday p.m. The opening hymn was "Unto the Hills", followed by "God Save the King", after this Mrs. Moore read the 27th Psalm. Mrs. Worrell then led in prayer. After Mrs. Fleming and Mrs. Ranson read the reports, a nominating committee was appointed to choose officers for the coming year. This committee was composed of Mrs. V. Weir, Mrs. Moore and Mrs. (Dr.) Reid, Mrs. Weir, being convener. Mrs. McLenan of the Upper Canada Tract Society gave an interesting account of their work. Mrs. Bell sang by request a fine solo "I love to hear my Saviour say". Mrs. Worrel discussed Chap. V of the Study Book "Moving Millions" in an exceptionally splendid manner. The service was closed with the hymn "I Love to tell the Story" and Mrs. Fargey gave the closing prayer. Mrs. Worrel's group consisting of Mrs. Muir, Mrs. Middleton and Mrs. Moore and Mrs. A. Cameron served tea.

MAX SCHMELING ARRIVES IN SPAIN REPORT STATES

Presence There Creates Baffling Mystery in N. Y. Fight Circles

COMING TO U.S.

Joe Jacobs, His Former Manager, Don't Believe He Could Get Fight Here

By GAYLE TALBOT
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Nov. 3—(AP)—The reported presence of Max Schmeling in Spain, supposedly en route to the United States, has created a baffling mystery in New York fight circles.

At last account nobody had yet offered a sensible solution and practically everybody had tried. Only one thing was certain: The former heavyweight champion was not sent for. If Max is indeed on his way, then it's his own idea.

"I don't know a thing about it," declared Promoter Mike Jacobs. "If he gets here I might be able to use him. But I don't know. It depends on how people feel about it."

No Word for Long Time

"I ain't heard from him since he was here last winter," said Joe Jacobs, who used to be the German's more-or-less manager. "Somebody told me he was raising potatoes since the war got started."

There is a widespread inclination to doubt that Max would come here looking for a fight—not after the bouncing around he received last February.

He was in this city, demanding a third battle with champion Joe Louis, when the news reached him from Miami Beach that Tony Galento had been signed for the big outdoor shot. Max returned to Germany in a huff.

Joe Jacobs, who began managing Galento seriously only after Schmeling had done everything except kick the little guy down a flight of stairs to prove that he no longer valued his services, considered that he had squared accounts with Max. He whooped it up for several days and the drinks were on him.

Knowing all that, the locals could not imagine the proud Max coming back now and asking for another helping. They preferred to believe, as they expressed it, that he was taking it on the lam.

"What good could he do hisself fightin' over here now?" propounded Mushky Jackson, the noted student of international affairs. "He couldn't take no dough wit' him back to Germany. Not wit' all these British battleships stoppin' him."

W. STANOWSKI PRIME FAVORITE WITH THE FANS

Toronto Defenceman Likely to Catch Place on the Leafs

BLUES WIN 6-4

Billy Taylor Shares Spotlight With Stanowski in Kiwanis Benefit

Toronto, Nov. 3—(CP)—If it was left for the crowd to say, Wally Stanowski would be a cinch to catch on as a regular with Toronto's National Hockey League club. The former St. Boniface Seals junior, with his swishing style of skating and adroit passing, was a prime favorite with most of the 12,181 fans who saw the Leafs officially open the season in an intra-club game here last night.

The game was in the nature of a test to determine which of the 22 players would line up against Boston in the N.H.L. opener here Saturday. Proceeds of the game went to the Red Cross Society.

Stanowski's team, the Whites, were beaten 6-4 by the Blues but that didn't detract from the Polish lad's performance. A forward with Syracuse's International League team last year, Wally last night was back on the defence—a position he played when the Seals beat Oshawa Generals for the Canadian Junior Championship and the Memorial Cup in the spring of 1938.

And Stanowski showed all the thump he had as a junior. Within the space of a minute in the second period he dumped bashing Bucko McDonald to the ice twice and evoked cheers from the crowd.

Wally also set up the play for his team's first goal, carrying the puck into the defence area and passing to Sweeney Schriner who relayed to Pep Kelly, the marksman.

The game brought before a Toronto crowd for the first time the spectacle of Stanowski and Billy (The Kid) Taylor playing on the same team. Taylor led Oshawa in the memorable 1938 series and shared the headlines with Stanowski. Last Spring when Oshawa won the title, Taylor had the headlines all to himself.

CANADA'S A. A. U. TO DECIDE ITS WARTIME PLANS

Athletic Union Meets at Hamilton to Decide Future Activities This Month

Edmonton, Nov. 3—(CP) — One big question — whether athletic activities will be suspended in Canada during the second Great War—will overshadow discussions when the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada holds its 52nd annual meeting in Hamilton, Ont., Nov. 28-29.

One indication the union may carry on despite the war is contained in a circular issued by the honorary secretary, John Leslie, of Edmonton. The circular invites applications from the various branches for the staging of national chmpionships in 1940 of the various track and field events, gymnastics, boxing, wrestling, weightlifting, fencing, handball, volleyball, baseball, bobsleighing and tobogganing.

Second place will be given to other features like amendments to the constitution, reinstatement to amateur standing of athletes who have seen service in professional ranks, reports of committees and recognition of new records.

So far no action has been taken on the suspension of athletes by the union. The Canadian Amateur Hockey Associatoin, which broke away from the A.A.U. of C. several years ago following a decision to run its own show, is going to carry on as usual for this winter at least.

That decision may be followed by the A.A.U. of C. Except for track and field events and baseball most of the sports which come under the union's jurisdiction are carried on actively during the winter.

A definite stand in regard to the 1940 Olympic Games also is expected to be taken at the meeting. Originally the Olympics were billed for Tokyo. When the Sino-Japanese war broke out, they were changed to Helsingfors, Finland, but now most of the world regards them as cancelled. There have been proposals of a western hemisphere Olympics.

Connor after schooling in Toronto joined the 48th Highlanders signal corps here. In 1938 he joined the Royal Air Force in England as a wireless operator.

C. DAHLSTROM SCORES WINNING GOAL OVER WINGS

Chicago Hawks Open Season With 3-2 Win Over Detroit

ROOKIES SMART

Hawks Had 2-0 Lead Until Howe and Dillon Click for Wings

Chicago, Nov. 3—(CP)—Paul Thompson is probably still one of the smoothest left wingers in hockey but he won't have to prove it providing his rejuvenated Chicago Black Hawks keep flying the way they did as the curtain went up on National League activities.

Curly-headed Paul, tackling one of the toughest assignments in the major puck whirl, sat on the bench last night as his rookie-studded Hawks flashed to a 3-2 victory over Detroit Red Wings. Cully Dahlstrom scored the winning goal one minute and 11 seconds from full time.

Thompson took over the job of bossing the Chicago entry mid-way through last season when Major Frederick McLaughlin fired Bill Stewart. But the Hawks just didn't have the class and thrived no better under Thompson than under Bald Bill—they finished last in the seven team loop.

Rehired to carry on during the current campaign, Thompson demanded a free hand in rebuilding the Hawks, warning his employers it would take time to produce a winning combination. He decided to play himself only in an "emergency" and that situation may not arise if his team continues to show its opening-night form.

Blues Down Whites

The only other activity on the N.H.L. front came at Toronto where the Maple Leafs played an inter-club charity exhibition game in preparation for their opening home fixture with the champion Boston Bruins Saturday. The Blues downed the Whites 6-4.

A crowd of 14,864 fans turned out at Chicago for the game and were satisfied that the six yannigans Thompson has brought under the big tent, will play an important part in the doings of the 1939-40 edition of the Black Hawks.

The rookies didn't take long to swing into action and early in the first period, George Allen converted a pass from another first-year man, Joe Demarco. Mush March made it 2-0 in the second period before the Wings entered the score column.

Past the half-way mark in the second period Syd Howe scored for Detroit on a pass from Cec Dillon, veteran sniper the Wings purchased from New York Rangers. In the third period Dillon tied the count on a lone effort only to see Dahlstrom end the party to the delight of the Chicago fans.

LOCAL WRESTLER MEETS PEARSON

'Chuck' Thorne Hopes to Win Over His Hamilton Opponent

Increased patronage at the weekly professional wrestling bouts, held each Friday night at the Hume Arena, prove beyond contradiction the fact that this "bone-crushing business" is meeting with the popular favor of the sport fans of the community. Tonight when Rudy Epps, the lithe and agile grappler from Columbus, Ohio, meets Dave Khoen, the scientific Jewish lad from Detroit, the patrons will doubtless find the zenith of their ring expectations in this main bout attraction. Both men are qualified and have appeared locally before to prove their ring ability.

A slight change was made today in the semi-final bout, that sees Pedro Valdez, the Mexican adonis, meet Young Griffins of Niagara Falls, Valdez replacing "The Leopard" of Detroit, who sustained an injured arm while working out for this bout recently.

The opening bout sees Church Thorne, a native of Belleville, meet a newcomer to local wrestling circles, Al Pearson of Hamilton. Pearson comes to Belleville highly recommended as a clean orthodox leg and arm twister. Thorne is anxious to prove his ability before the home crowd in his first appearance as a professional tonight at athe Hume Arena.

DAVE CASTILLOUX BEATS WALLACE

Punches His Way to Technical Knockout in Seventh Round

Montreal, Nov. 3—(CP)—Dave Castilloux, fleet-footed Montreal lightweight, punched his way to a technical knockout over Frankie Wallace of Cleveland last night in the seventh round of a scheduled 10-round boxing match.

A barrage of straight rights in the early rounds weakened Wallace steadily and a swift left hook finally keeled him over after two minutes and 35 seconds of the seventh. The American went down once in the third for a three-count. Castilloux tipped the scales at 134½ and Wallace at 137½.

In a hard-slugging semi-final, Charlie Gomer, 132¾, of Paris, pummelled Joey Bagnato, 133½, of Toronto, to win an unanimous eight-round decision. The Toronto fighter's features were covered with blood after the bout.

Sports Roundup

New York, Nov. 3—(AP)— National League higher ups say it must be some other N. L. that wants Senator Chandler of Kentucky for President.... a deep cold has Lloyd (Little Poison) Waner under blankets in a Sarasota, Fla. hospital.

Kiki Cuyler is running far ahead of the field in a newspaper poll for a new Chicago Cub manager.. old Cholly Grimm is second and Rogers Hornsby, third....eighty per cent of the wimmen are voting the straight Hartnett ticket.

The $6,580 he got for being stopped by Al Davis was the biggest purse of Tony Canzoneri's 18-month comeback campaign.... the medicos want to operate on Whitlow Wyatt's trick knee, but won't proceed until Larry MacPhail gives them the green light.

Ten members of New York Rovers have graduated into National Hockey League ranks....eight of them are in the current Ranger squad....Ex-Rover Murray Armstrong is over in the rival American camp while Joe Cooper made his way to Chicago Black Hawks..

As if Rice weren't having a bad enough season, they tell this one on the Owls....after Rice had scored its second touchdown on Vanderbilt, Coach Jimmy Kitts sent in a placement specialist, a left-footed kicker, but in the excitement the ballholder made the mistake of setting the ball up for a right-footer. The kicker was afraid that if he said anything there'd be a penalty for a substitute "communicating" before the first play had been run. In his disgust he booted his teammate square in the pants.

P. S.—Rice lost the game on the extra point.

BEACHES CAN TIE FOR FIRST PLACE BY WIN SATURDAY

Entertain Leaders of the O.R.F.U. Loop, Westmounts of Montreal

ARGOS PLAY TIGERS

Tricolor Can Cinch Second Place by Downing McGill in Montreal

(By Jack Calder Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Down where Toronto schoolboys scrimmage on week days, two teams aspiring to the Canadian senior football championship will battle tomorrow while giants of the Interprovincial Union hold sway uptown.

Montreal Westmounts and Toronto Balmy Beach are running first and second in the Ontario Union and no one can count them anythig but front-rank contenders for the second-last Saturday in the schedule, is fraught with significant possibilities.

Hamilton Tigers and Toronto Argonauts, ancient rivals of the Big Four, will play in a more colorful setting and to the music of bigger bands in Vtrsity stadium, but they can scarcely hope to match for grimness the game in the other end of town.

Race Quite Tight

For one thing, the race in the O.R.F.U. is a little tighter than that in the Big Four, with the Westmounts two points in front and Sarnia only one behind Balmy Beach. For another, two of the greatest all-around backs in the east will face one another in the Westmounts-Beach encounter.

There hasn't been a more valuable player to any team this year than Eddie Thompson, the Beach's running and kicking half. And through all the years Johnny Ferraro has been a great passer, a terrific plunger and a chance-taker who kept on taking chances when they recoiled right back at him.

Balmy Beach almost has to win to stay in the race for the two-team playoffs, for Sarnia figures to have a shoo-in against the winless Orfuns at Peterborough. The Imperials, who got hot to earn a 6-6 tie with the Westmounts last week, remember well the 3-2 beating they took in Peterborough last year and aren't likely to let it happen again.

Argos Have Tough Game

Theer are possibilities but remote—or drama in the Argo-Tiger contest. After winning on successive Saturdays over Montreal Royals, Hamilton can advance now into a second-place tie by downing the champions. Bob Isbister, who used to kick for the Argos, is booting high and far for the Bengals now.

The Rough Riders, smarting after the defeat they absorbed from Toronto last week, will seek to maintain their first-place tie with the Argos by spilling Montreal Royals in Ottawa. That shouldn't be hard, for the Royals haven't won yet.

Queen's University, coming along fast, takes on McGill at Montreal in an effort to preserve a hold on second place in the Intercollegiate Union and to force a playoff with the University of Western Ontario. Western's undefeated and untied Mustangs will be at home to the University of Toronto.

TOMMY HARMON TO LEAD MICHIGAN

Michigan's Half-Back Being Compared With the Great Red Grange

Chicago, Nov. 3—(AP)— Michigan's whirling wolverine, Tommy Harmon, will try tomorrow to lay a 15-year-old red-headed "ghost."

Michigan's undefeated football team will roll against Illinois at Champaign—on the same field where Illinois' famous galloping ghost, Red Grange, romped through a Michigan team in 1924 for four touchdowns within the first 12 minutes of play.

There are many who think Harmon may match the old galloping ghost's record of five touchdowns in that 39-14 Illinois victory. Harmon, a great star now, scored 27 points this season against Iowa and last Saturday compiled 21 against Yale. His coach, Fritz Crisler, and Michigan's All-American ace, Willie Heston, say "we'll take Harmon over Grange any day."

To which Ray Duncan, assistant Illinois coach who saw Harmon this year, replies: "Per-Harmon this year, replies: 'Perhaps Harmon is the best since Grange, but he's not as good as the old red-head."

BRITAIN TO REPLY

London, Nov. 2—(CP) — Great Britain will reply with a broadcast in German tonight to a Nazi radio statement that British Ministry of Information leaflets dropped in Germany had stated "It is only a matter of time until the United States enters the war."

British officials classed the German statement as "absolutely incorrect in every detail."

George Marshall, the Washington laundryman, is cleaning up in professional football. Marshall, originally just a red hot sports fan regardless of the game, made his debut as backer of a professional basketball team several years ago. From that he went to pro football and auto racing. He bought the Boston Redskins, but when the Boston support was not to his liking he moved the franchise to Washington last season.

The Redskins caught on in the nation's capital and this year, a week before the season's opening, there wasn't a reserved seat for any game nearer than behind the goal posts.

Contending that instead of breaking away from the Ontario Baseball Association, the disgruntled Chatham "Colored Stars" and kindred clubs should take matters in a different light and instead of bolting the O.B.A., vote out the present officers, who they blame for the unsatisfactory conditions now prevailing. Unfortunately the individual clubs do not have a vote at the annual election of officers of the Otario Baseball Association, which is an association of baseball leagues, rather than an association or organization of separate or individual clubs. Each amateur baseball league affiliated with the O.B.A. is permitted two delegates, whether the league is a one or a ten-teamed loop. All grievances of individual clubs must be tabled through the district O.B.A. executive member, or by one of the two league delegates, which gives the individual club concerned little opportunity to present its case in some incidentts. In the league operations, however, the individual club has voting power, but unfortunately such is not the case in some incidents. In the moguls meet. The Kingston scribe agrees with us that minor league ball has been neglected too much in the east, however.

Did you know that the "wall game" is a unique sport, in that it is played at only one school in the world, Eton college, in England. Of doubtful origin, the game is a peculiar mixture of football, rugby, and a general free-for-all tussle. It has been played at Eton for more than 100 years and during a period of about 90 years only three goals were scored.

Sixty years ago the Wimbledon tennis tournament realized a profit of one shilling and tenpence (44c). Recently gates have been as high as £70,000 ($329,000) and profits as high as £14,000 ($65,000).

Just why they are referred to as "the fair sex" is sometimes hard to reason, especially at wrestling bouts at least. Women are by far the more rabid wrestling fans and demand that their favorite matman wins, or woe-be-tied the opponent. Perhaps there is a bit of cave man attraction for them, but we have noticed of late that the more biased fans at the Hume Arena every Friday night are the ladies. Tonight, however, it will be interesting to see which side the fair sex assume when Rudy Epps and Dave Khoen clash in the main bout. Both are of the adonis type, tall, lithe and good-looking, and to cap these features off, they're both top-notch ring performers and to select a winner would be difficult. Three bouts in all are carded with Belleville's own Chuck Thorne meeting Al Pearson of Hamilton in the curtain-raiser.

Do you remember when baseball's "Georgia Peach", Ty Cobb, resigned as player manaer of Detroit Tigers thirteen years ago today? Cobb started with the American League club in 1905 and cracked out a double in his first appearance at the plate. He became baseball's greatest player, ending his career with Philadelphia Athletics in 1928.

In an effort to raise funds to purchase uniforms and equipment, the Belleville Collegiate senior interscholastic football team, champions of the Bay of Quinte C.O.S.S.A. group, are holding a dance at the Trianon Ballroom this evening. The kids have put considerable effort behind the project and are hoping for the support of the Belleville sport-loving public. The Students' Council at the B.C.I.V.S. took it upon themselves to equip and field a senior football squad this year. How's about a boost tonight?

A number of records in reverse —or negative marks—were established in the 1939 World's Series.

The Yankees did not use a single pinch-hitter and committed only two errors—a new record in each instance.

Only fifteen walks were issued during the Series, compared with the previous mark of seventeen for a four-game series, set in 1927 and 1938.

Only one base was stolen, compared with the previous low of two thefts in the 1927 and 1932 series.

By going hitless throughout the entire series, Wallie Berger and Lonnie Frey equalled a record, while another mark was tied by the two defeats charged against Bucky Walters.

Scoring quite consistently, a goal a period, the Chicago Black Hawks are today leading the National Hockey League by virtue of a 3-2 win over Jack Adams' Detroit Red Wings in the Windy City last night as the Hawks and Wings pried off the N.H.L. lid. Close to 15,000 fans saw Paul Thompson's homesters take an early lead to score twice before Jack Adams' revamped Wings bulged the twine. The Eddie Shoreless Boston Bruins appear in Toronto versus the Leafs on Saturday night and the old hockey grind is on once again.

Entries into the George Van-Horne Memorial Cup series, played annually as a pre-season hockey loop at the Jock Harty arena, Kingston, close on Tuesday next. For those who have been asking—the Kingston rink opens next week. There is a possibility that the Redmen, Flyers and maybe the Belleville juniors will all be entered in the Kingston pre-season league. More about this next week, however.

Sport Spice — Max Schmeling is getting to be about as elusive as the City of Flint—first Derr Moxie was reported in Rome, today it's Spain, enroute to the U.S.A.; where next?....Toe Blake, leading scorer in the N.H.L. last season, came to terms with the Canadiens at last ....Goody Rosen says he'll stick with the Dodgers next year, because they're going to win the National League.

Mr. Kelly Felt Tired and Sluggish — Complexion Sallow and Pale—Bowels Constipated — Now He Says: "Mosby's Tonic Has Relieved me. I feel Fine!"

"Oh! How my sluggish kidneys hurt me! The backache. The sharp pains. The stiffness and soreness. And all night long my sleep was disturbed, due to this kidney sluggishness. I couldn't rest. But since I got MOSBY'S TONIC my sluggish-acting kidneys are relieved. Now I can sleep. Backache relieved. Here is a Splendid Medicine!"

MR. BERNARD KELLY

That is what thousands of people here in Belleville and vicinity are saying about MOSBY'S TONIC, a "New Mixture of Roots and Herbs and Other Splendid Medicinal Agents," now being introduced to the public daily in this city at Lattimer's Drug Store, 228 Front Street, your Tamblyn dealer.

And remember—MOSBY'S TONIC not only helps. Nature relieve weak, sluggish kidneys but also clears gas and bloat from stomach, cleanses bowels, invigorates the liver action, acts to relieve pains of rheumatic and neuritic trouble, caused by contaminated system. It accomplishes several things in the body at the Same Time.

For instance, just a few days ago, Mr. Bernard Kelly, of 103 Roseheath Ave., Toronto, Ont., made the following statement. This grateful man's testimonial, praising Mosby's Tonic, follows:

Was Low in Energy; Felt Weak and Sluggish

"About a year ago I began losing weight," said Mr. Kelly. "And as time went on I seemed to lose all my energy. I had no appetite and what little food I did eat wouldn't nourish my body properly and as a result, my complexion took on a sallow "muddy" colour and I simply felt worn out ALL THE TIME. My back was full of aches and pains, which was due to sluggish kidneys, and I was also a victim of bowel constipation.

"One day a friend of mine told me what Mosby's Tonic had done for him, and he almost insisted that I get this medicine and start taking it, which I did, and now I want to tell you that the first bottle has given me a great surprise. Why, do you know, within ONE WEEK I could see the colour coming back into my cheeks. At the same time, this medicine helped me to gain back my weight, and, say, what an appetite-builder this Mosby's Tonic is! Now I eat like a schoolboy, and I have gained in energy and never feel tired and worn out like I did before. It also relieved those pains in my back and regulated my bowels. I simply feel fine in general. It is SPLENDID!"

MOSBY'S TONIC is sold here in Belleville at Lattimer's Drug Store, 228 Front Street, your Tamblyn dealer.

PRE-SEASON PUCK LOOP TO OPERATE IN KINGSTON

Belleville and Air Force Are Expected to Enter Van Horne Memorial

QUEENS PRACTICE

Kingston, Nov. 3.—With ice expected to be ready for use next week-end in the Jock Harty Arena, the Queen's seniors will hold their first hockey practice next Monday and may play Washington Eagles in an exhibition game next week if plans to bring the new United States eastern amateur league team here materialize. The starting of practice should also give fans an idea of how much hockey strength there is in the soldier settlement here. About 3,000 soldiers are expected to be stationed here for the winter and at lease two military hockey teams are expected.

Plans were made last night to organize the Kingston junior league, the annual pre-season series that will continue until early January, while the Kingston senior league for the George VanHorne trophy, will be organized next Wednesday at a meeting with entries closing next Tuesday.

Eddie Thomas' Belleville Redmen and the league champion R.C.A.F. Flyers are expected to play again this year in the VanHorne series.

AT THE BELLE

"THUNDER AFLOAT"

Epical story of courage at sea, adding a seldom-told chapter to the history of the United States Naval Reserve, "Thunder Afloat" brings Wallace Beery next to the screen of the Belle Theatre amid some of the most thrilling action ever filmed.

Teamed with Chester Morris, as his rival throughout the story, and with Virginia Grey, as his daughter, Beery appears as tugboat captain who joins the navy after the U-Boat has sunk his beloved craft. The action-packed sequences in which the principals participate include the raiding and sinking of the tug and its string of barges, the torpedoing of a light-ship, the disabling of a subchaser after Beery, in command, has attempted to sink the sub with depth bombs, the attempted ramming of the U-Boat by a Gloucester schooner which is sunk by gunfire, and the final crippling of the undersea boat.

Scenes were shot at off the Atlantic Coast with the remnant of the subchaser fleet of World War days, and off the Coronado Islands on the West Coast, with the United States submarine Sturgeon.

3 Select Featurettes

Three selected featurettes are announced for exhibition on the same program including a novel screen miniature, "Hollywood Hobbies", a very funny Walt Disney color cartoon, "The Pointer", and the popular Belle Newsreel, with its gist of important World Events.

"Fifth Avenue Girl"

Affording her an unusual opportunity to display her talents as a comedienne and dramatic actress, RKO Radio's "Fifth Avenue Girl" presents Ginger Rogers in the title role now at the Belle.

The lovely star portrays the part of an unemployed working girl who becomes involved in the marital problems of a wealthy family. The manner in which she solves their troubles and finds romance at the same time, provides the basis of the absorbing plot. Her sharply etched and strongly human characterization is said to be one of the finest things she has yet done on the screen.

Walter Connolly, Verree Teasdale, James Ellison, Tim Holt, Kathryn Adams and Franklin Pangborn have prominent supporting roles in this Gregory La Cava production.

"Metropolis 1939", interesting film life in New York City, George Jessel in a smart vaudefilm, and an unusual film, News Reel showing how a screen newsreel is assembled, completes the program.

AT THE CAPITOL

"MYSTERY OF MR. WONG"

A true actor can always be spotted by his love of make-up. This is the statement of William Nigh, director of Monogram's "Mystery of Mr. Wong" now showing at the Capitol Theatre.

Hollywood is flooded by people who think they can act, and by some who do very well at playing themselves, but the true artist is the man who can play any kind of a part, and usually one who doesn't like to appear as himself on the screen, but wants to create a character.

Paul Muni is one of these. Only two or three times has he appeared in pictures as himself, and he has won his greatest fame by playing historical characters with such accuracy that no one of his screen characterizations resembles another.

Like Muni, Boris Karloff, star of "The Mystery of Mr. Wong", also believes that make-up is one of the most important parts of characterization. The farther removed from his own personality the character he is called on to portray, the better Karloff likes it. He loves to experiment with make-up, and often will spend weeks in research for just the right face.

For the character of James Lee Wong in the Monogram series based on the adventures of the famous fiction detective, Karloff actually wrote to a brother in China for authentic pictures of cultured Chinese.

Director Nigh says that this love of making faces, of creating new characters with grease paint, is a quality that is present in every great actor.

"The Mystery of Mr. Wong", second in a series of four James Lee Wong mystery films Monogram is making with Karloff in the title spot, tells how Mr. Wong guest at a San Francisco house party, solves a mystery that had its beginnings in China, six thousand miles away.

Screenplay based on the Hugh Wiley stories, was by Scott Darling.

The added attraction features The Three Mesquiteers, John Wayne, Max Terhune and Ray Corrigan in "The Three Texas Steers" and on the same program the fourth chapter "Flaming Frontiers" starring Johnny Mack Brown.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Five Little Peppers and How They Grew"

Rich in humor, warm in tenderness and permeated with the rollicking high spirits of youth, "Five Little Peppers and How They Grew" is a perfect movie for the whole family to see.

Now playing at the McCarthy Theatre "Five Little Peppers and How They Grew', Columbia Studios film version of the Margaret Sidney juvenile classic is a sympathetic and sensitive treatment that successfully transfers the humor and poignancy of the book to the screen.

An excellent cast, headed by Edith Fellows as the dynamic little Polly Pepper, appear just as if they had stepped from the pages of the book and the result is a film that should be every bit as popular as the amazingly successful literary series.

All the five little Peppers, Polly, Phronsie, Ben, Joey and Davie, emerge in the film as the same irrepressible quintet of youngsters, lovable and mischievous perpetrators of one madcap escapade after another. Merrily they cavort across the screen, living with a smile, laughing with their hearts and captivating the audience with their bright and cheery manners.

The film is actually composed of a series of rather simple incidents, but the sincere playing of the cast and the deft direction of Charles Barton endow these incidents with comedy, drama, suspense and heart-appeal. The efforts to provide a birthday cake for Mrs. Pepper, the home-made presents, Polly's difficulty with the smoky stove, all become memorable bits of screen adventure in the hands of the Peppers.

Edith Fellows surpasses her previous film triumphs as the beloved Polly, making the character irresistably appealing. Another who scores impressively is little four-year-old Dorothy Ann Seese, who makes her screen debut as Phronsie.

Tommy Bond, Jimmy Leake, and Charles Peck, three others of the Pepper clan, acquit themselves creditably and Ronald Sinclair as the boy from "across the tracks", makes a fine contrast to the irrepressible quintet. Dorothy Peterson and Clarence Kolb as Mrs. Pepper and King, the financier, respectively are splendid as the elder generation.

An excellent adventure story of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, starring Charles Starrett, entitled "Outpost of the Mounties" is also now playing as a companion feature presentation at the McCarthy Theatre. Truly here is a swell show—do not miss attending the McCarthy.

As You Were

By THAYER WALDO

She sat slumped down in the thickly upholstered chair, receiver to her ear. One hand covered the telephone's mouth piece and her fingers drummed irritably on the metal.

Before her stood a seamy-faced man with pendulous jowls, gesticulating, his voice a vehement hoarse whisper:

"Don't be a little fool, Letty; tell him yes. Then he'll fix everything for you—salary and stories and casts."

Her narrowed hazel eyes gazed at him for a full second with unspeakable disgust. Then she took her hand from the instrument and spoke flatly:

"Thank you, Mr. Bernstein, but I'm afraid I really couldn't manage it this week-end. So sorry."

With meticulous care she placed the earpiece on its hook and stood up.

The man was speaking again, in a louder, nagging whine.

"That's it — throw away every chance to get yourself in right with these big people. How do you think you're going to land the things you want, acting like a snippish old maid?"

Letty Claire faced him.

Her fists were clenched, her whole body rigid with a fury she barely kept under control.

"Oh, you vile, horrible man!" she spat. "To think that my own father should stand here and beg me to indulge in a cheap and tawdry affair just to gain more money or curry someone's favor!"

Instantly his manner became conciliatory.

"Now baby, don't talk like that. You know daddy's only trying to look out for your interests. A clever girl like you wouldn't have to do anything she didn't want to. It's—"

"Hooey!" The word fairly dripped acid scorn.

"You and that brother of mine are just a couple of drunken, greedy parasites who'd sell me if you could, body and soul, to the highest bidder. Oh, don't imagine I'm only finding this out now. I've been wanting for months to yell it at you both."

He put out one hand in a hesitantly soothing gesture.

"I know, little lamb," he croaked, "you've worked real hard lately and your nerves are all upset. What you need's a nice little vacation; that's why I thought you'd like to go on Mr. Bernstein's yacht."

Letty Claire's anger mounted to crescendo.

"Don't hand me those sniveling lies!" she raged. "Sure my nerves are shot, but work didn't do it. You and Bill and the rest of the rotten Hollywood people who are always after me would drive a stone statue crazy. Peace and comfort and decency are just things I read about in books."

"So this is your gratitude for all I've done!"

"I wish I'd never been born!" she wailed, heedless of him. "Or anyhow, not what I am. I wish—" her tone became almost tremulous with longing—"that I'd been born somewhere out in the country, away from everything, perhaps on a farm."

The rancor had ebbed, dreamy-eyed, she seemed oblivious to all save some vision her far-away gaze encountered.

"Yes, that's it! Just to be quiet and happy on a little ranch, with cows and chickens for company and green fields all around you. Oh, that's how I was meant to live, why d'd it have to be this mess?"

For a moment then she stood silent, still looking spacewards.

Old Man Claire watched her in a furtive way.

Suddenly a buzzer sounded somewhere in the bungalow's rear. The girl stirred and glanced around.

She nodded; a vague conflict was in her manner. Again the buzz. Letty frowned, the man suggested:

"Maybe she's out; I'll answer it."

"No! You look like a tramp in that nasty old bathrobe. I'll go myself."

With a sigh she crossed the room and flung open the front door. On the stoop stood a thin young woman in faded calico dress and cotton stockings that bunched over her shoe tops.

Either hand held a market basket; one had eggs in it, the other a jumble of none-too-fresh-looking vegetables.

"Good morning, ma'am," she started to singsong: "would you like some nice—"

The words trailed off and her eyes went goggly.

"Oh, land sakes! I mean—gee, you're Letty Claire, ain'tcha? Gosh?"

In spite of herself, Letty smiled.

"Why, yes. I am. Was there something you wished?"

Awe and self-consciousness seemed to hold the girl speechless for a few seconds. Finally she stammered:

"Well, I didn't know—I only wanted to ask the maid to buy some stuff, but—golly, I'm sure glad you came. Only now I s'pose—I mean, you don't want to bother with this, do you?"

"I think so," she answered, "but tell me—how did you happen to be selling it?"

"Oh, me and the old man has a ranch out by San Berdoo. We raises truck and keeps chickens, but you can't get nothin' for nothin' for 'em at the markets these days. Peddlin' 'em around, though, we manages to clear 'bout four bits a day—'nough to eat two meals on . . . My, Miss Claire, you look even purtier than in the pitchers!"

"Just a minute — I'll get my purse."

Going towards the bedroom, she thought in an abstracted fashion of a number of things: Happiness in the country . . . the way I was meant to live . . . fifty doorbells for fifty cents a day. . . .

She found a five dollar bill and returned.

"Here," she said, tendering it; "I'll take all you have."

"Gosh, that's swell of you. But I'll have to go fetch change from pappy."

"Please don't," Letty said. "I'd like you to keep that for showing me—that is, for being so sweet in what you said about me."

Stuttering embarrassed thanks, the girl relinquished her goods and departed. Letty took the baskets and walked slowly to the kitchen with them. There, she stood a brief while fingering the limp and dingy produce. At last she laughed, just once, and abruptly turned away. From a cupboard over the sink she took a half-empty bottle of port wine and poured herself a tumblerful.

When the glass held no more, Letty Claire left the kitchen and went again to the front room. No one else was there now. Dropping into the chair beside the phone, she picked it up and dialed. Response came quickly, and in a voice almost mockingly saccharine, Letty cooed:

"Hello, Benny-boy, is that perfectly ducky invitation for the week-end by any chance still open?"

Little Benny's Note Book

Sattiday morning I went downtown with ma so she could buy me a new pair of shoes, and she gave me the money to come home alone on the bus, only I walked home instead to save the buss fare, and I was going passed a big red house with about 10 front steps leading up to the front door, and some kid was sitting on the bottom one as if he lived there, and I stopped going passed, saying, Is this your house?

Sure, what's you think? the kid said.

Being a kid with big blue eyes and little red nose, and I said, Well G, it's a pretty big house, some other people must live here too.

Sure the rest of my family, what's you think? the kid said, and I said, O well, my house is pretty big too, it's got 2 whole bathrooms.

What's that, this one's got 5 not including the servants bathroom, the kid said.

Sounding like a hotel, and I said, Well is all that grass back there part of your yard?

Sure, what's you think, the kid said, and I said, Our yard's not so small either it's got a whole tree growing in it and there's still room to walk around.

Do you see that long glass house back there? the kid said. That's a conservatory and it's got about a hundred diffrent kinds of plants and flowers in it, and even trees, he said.

Sounding like enough to win the argument, and I said, Well anyways do you see this tiny little wart on my knuckle, well that's always been there, it was born with me and it wont come off, and even doctors have looked at it and dont know what to do. Have you got anything like that? I said.

I dont remember, the kid said looking jellis as anything, and I said, Then that proves you haven't because that's somethinz you cant forget.

And I kept on going feeling better instead of worse.

SAYS FELLOWSHIP IS NOT LINKED WITH COMMUNISM

New York, Nov. 2 (CP) — John Nevin Sayre, chairman of the American and International Fellowship of Reconciliation, said today any charge the organization is connected with Communists is "utterly untrue".

Attorney General Gordon Conant of Ontario said in Toronto last night he had been told by a "reliable authority" that a statement expressing the pacific views of 75 ministers of the United Church of Canada was prepared by a member of the Fellowship of Reconciliation. Mr. Conant said "a reliable authority in such matters affirms this organization is a Radical Pacifist organization using the cloak of religion to spread Communist propaganda."

Has Not Seen Statement.

"I've never seen the statement Mr. Conant refers to and if anyone in our organization here prepared it I would have seen it," Mr. Sayre said. "It's highly likely some ministers of the group are members of our organization but it's their own statement."

"The charge of 'using the cloak of religion to spread Communist propaganda' has been made many times to discredit us. The fellowship never has had any connection with Communism on the board of the Fellowship in the United States or England."

Attitude Against War.

The Fellowship's "statement of purpose" explains its members refuse to participate in any war; strive to build a better social order; campaign for penal reform and seek to avoid bitterness and contention.

"I suppose it is a radical pacifist organization as Mr. Conant terms it, insofar as its members' beliefs are radical on such things as wars, but a better description would be a Christian pacifist organization," Mr. Sayre said.

WALL STREET

New York, Nov. 3 (AP)—The stock market recovered quietly today after a fast early sell-off that knocked down aircrafts and other leaders fractions to more than two points. Modest gains at the opening, especially in aviations, were quickly wiped out as profit takers hit the list. The ticker tape fell behind for a brief period.

In a mixed Canadian group small gains were recognized for Hiram Walker and Distillers, while International Nickel and Lake Shore lost as much. Dominion 4s moved evenly in the bond market.

Curtiss-Wright Common and "A" shares managed to retain small improvement at new highs for the year. Douglas, Glenn Martin, Sperry, Boeing, Consolidated Aircraft, North American Aviation and Bendix reduced or cancelled declines.

Twin Coach and Greyhound, envisaging heavy truck orders from abroad, edged forward. Resistant were Bethlehem Steel, Phelps Dodge and Sears Roebuck. Rising vigor was lacking in Allied Chemical, Union Carbide, Great Northern, Western Union, U.S. Steel, Chrysler, General Motors and Kennecott.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Nov. 3 (CP) — Prices weakened narrowly in the early session today on Toronto Exchange. The golds stood unchanged from the previous close. Weak spots among the senior golds were offset by the strength in Preston, Kirkland Lake and a few juniors. Preston moved up to a new high for the year at $1.95.

Steel shares recovered part of their morning losses and the foods and utilities replaced a few recessions with minor gains. Building and miscellaneous industrials were slightly firmer. Removal of the arms embargo had no apparent effect on the trading tempo.

'We'll Remember The Meadows' Novello's Song

London, Nov. 3 (CP)—Ivor Novello, playwright, musician and matinee idol, who 25 years ago wrote "Keep the Home Fires Burning" and made an estimated $75,000 out of it, has contributed a song to this war's musical budget. It is called "We'll Remember the Meadows" and its chorus goes like this:

"We'll remember the meadows
And the fields of waving corn,
We'll remember the music
Of the land where we were born,
We'll remember the laughter
And the sunshine after rain,
And we'll grin, grin, grin,
Till we win, win, win,
And then come back again."

Daily War Survey

Regarded as Feints

Assuming the German high command has settled on a definite plan either for early action in the west or for a period of defensive warfare extending until spring at least. Many of the troop movements and local attacks may be regarded as feints.

In a war involving millions of men, not to speak of machines, guns and supplies the first requisite is a careful plan of operation, worked out in the minutest detail as to time, place, quantities of material and numbers of men.

But a scarcely less important requisite is the concealment of the plan from the enemy. This involves feints and ruses as well as the maintenance of secrecy. The concentration of troops along the Dutch border may be a trick to divert attention from preparations for an offensive at some other point.

Bombardment of French positions may, in turn, be a ruse to keep the French army in the Maginot Line on the alert while a smashing blow is prepared for some other quarter.

Top Grade Eggs Quotations Higher

Eggs maintained a firm tone under continued light receipts. Dealers turned cautious in afternoon dealings on the market, however, and A-mediums were not moving as readily as A-large and pullets. Lower grades were clearing more freely. Further slight improvement occurred in the three top grades.

The butter market still lacked action. Limited demand appeared at spots, but buying enthusiasm was generally absent. The first grade Ontario product remained at 28c per pound.

Montreal Produce.

Butter — First grade creamery prints, job price, 28½-29c; first grade solids, job price, 28-28½c.

Eggs—Graded shipments in used free cases, selling price, A-large, 42-43c; A-medium, 40-41c; A-pullets, 30-32c; B-large, 28c; C, 19c. Receipts, 350 cases.

HON. H. GUTHRIE

learning of the death at Ottawa of Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Chairman of the Board of Transport Commissioners, Sir Thomas said:

"I am exceedingly sorry. Honorable Mr. Guthrie was a veteran in Dominion politics and an exceptionally able parliamentarian. He was an eloquent speaker on ceremonial occasions and a particularly effective debater in the House. He was popular with all his fellow members and his passing will cause widespread regret."

Montreal, Nov. 3 (CP)—President S. J. Hungerford of the Canadian National Railways said the death today at Ottawa of Hon. Hugh Guthrie removed a distinguished Canadian "who served his country faithfully and well both at home and abroad."

"He won the esteem and respect of his fellow citizens during his long parliamentary career," Mr. Hungerford said, "and as head of the Canadian delegation to the League of Nations, represented our country at the International Financial Conference summoned by that body, his keen mind and wide knowledge of international affairs proved of great value to the Dominion. His passing will be particularly regretted by the many railroad men who were associated with him as chief of the Board of Transport Commissioners."

Cheese Board

A marked increase in the price of cheese was registered during last night's buying on the Belleville Cheese Board of Trade when the top price was made at 14 5-8c., an increase of 13-16c. over the previous week's sale. A total of 2293 boxes were offered for sale, of which 107 were special colored. All were sold.

Of the cheese listed, however, only 540 sold at the top ranging price, the remainder being sold at 14 9-16c.

During the board meeting Mr. Edward Pyear, Director of the Cheese Patrons' Association, spoke briefly regarding the proposed fixing of prices by a Dominion Board to govern the price of foodstuffs during the war period. Mr. Pyear urged that the Belleville Board cooperate with the Cheese Patrons' Association in the matter of having the proposed government foodstuffs board arrange the price of cheese in order to assure the farmers of obtaining at least the cost of production.

The Board went on record as being desirous of assisting the Empire and the Allies, but requested, through the Cheese Patrons' Association, that the cost of production of cheese be protected as a guarantee to the producing farmers. The motion carried unanimously.

The buyers present last night were: Messrs. Hunter, Morton, Cook, Hart, McCreary, Stiles, Taylor, Fraleigh and Murphy.

PRIVATE'S BODY FOUND

Thorold, Ont., Nov. 3—(CP)—The body of Private Royston Morgan of the Lincoln and Welland Regiment, missing for the past two weeks, was found last night floating in Welland Ship Canal near the Ontario Paper Mills.

Officials believe the body was turned up by the wash of a passing boat. An inquest into his death will be held next Thursday.

SALE OF ARMS

A sweeping administration victory in the House of Representatives that rejected proposal for complete and partial embargoes by more than 60 votes set the stage for quick final action and adjournment of the special session before the week end.

The Senate and House appointed conferees to work out a composite draft of neutrality legislation at a meeting today. In view of the fact that both Chambers gave sizable majorities for repeal, approval of the committee's draft was a foregone conclusion. The House may withhold formal consent until tomorrow.

As soon as President Roosevelt signs the bill, belligerent nations can begin buying American munitions, guns and planes. Some administration quarters predict that overseas orders, chiefly from Great Britain and France, will total $1,000,000,000 within a few weeks.

"Cash and Carry" System.

Under the bill's "cash and carry" system, belligerents must take title to the goods before they leave American docks, where many supplies now are piled. They must be transported in other than American ships for a major purpose of the legislation is to avoid "incidents" by keeping American vessels and passengers out of war zones.

Three roll calls yesterday capped a stirring session that saw Speaker William Bankhead leave his rostrum to make an unusual plea for lifting the four-year old embargo. He received a tremendous rising ovation from Democrats and Republicans alike.

Opponents also brought up their leading orators to advise against taking a step which they contended would bring the United States nearer to war.

But a motion by Representative James Shanley, Connecticut Democrat, to instruct the House conferees to incorporate the existing embargo on shipment of arms, ammunition and implements of war was rejected, 243 to 181.

By 245 to 179, a margin of 66, the House turned back a proposal by Representative John Vorys, Ohio Republican, for the modified embargo which it approved in June. This would ban virtually all arms and other war equipment except commercial planes.

The first roll call rejected, 228 to 196, a proposal by Representative Jesse Wolcott, Michigan Republican for a specific prohibition against the export-import bank and similar federal agencies extending any credits to belligerents. As passed by the senate, the bill prohibits any "person" in the United States from making loans to belligerents.

Allies' Press Approves.

London, Nov. 3 (AP)—Great Britain and France, with piles of supplies waiting in the United States, learned today that only last-minute formalities stand in the way of writing the embargo off the American Statute Book.

News that the United States House of Representatives had approved lifting of the embargo arrived in Berlin too late for immediate comment.

In London, the news was displayed prominently with headlines such as the Mirror's "The United States Does It" and the News Chronicle's "United States Finally Approves Arms Ban Repeal".

In Paris news of the repeal was prominently featured in newspapers. Le Petit Parisien said the event was of "enormous importance".

"Free America has responded to a just cause. To its already precious moral support it will soon add material support that will hasten the day of our victory," the paper said.

Le Jour-Echo de Paris said that "2,500,000,000 francs in French orders, especially in planes, awaited the lifting of the embargo to move toward our shores."

The newspaper Excelsior said that the inference was not to be drawn that "the United States is entering with us in battle".

"We demand no more," it explained, than the right to buy supplies in the United States and transport them to French in French ships.

Back Orders of $110,000,000.

Los Angeles, Nov. 3 (AP)—Three major aviation companies in the Los Angeles area — Douglas, Lockheed and North American—report orders for more than $110,000,000 worth of overseas and domestic airplanes.

British and French orders placed before the arms embargo went into effect total $30,000,000. Remaining orders represent war and navy department expansion business and non-military commercial trade.

Lockheed has yet to fill one-third of its $27,000,000 order from Great Britain for 250 reconnaissance bombers. North American has yet to fill 10 per cent of its $14,000,000 British order for 400 single-motored combat and training ships and 25 per cent of an $8,000,000 order for 150 similar craft for France.

Douglas has not yet delivered any of 100 twin-motored attack bombers ordered by France on a $12,000,000 contract.

SOVIET

days before 1918 when Finland was part of Russia and the Russians controlled the area, there were no expressions of fear from Scandinavia.

Pravda said Erkko's position was "precisely like that of the former Polish foreign minister, Josef Beck. It is known that he too made provocative speeches before the Polish-German War, and the result was that he provoked war with Germany".

Beck, it said, "had the support of certain powers, and because of this, Poland perished." Great Britain and France were not named directly.

Go To Our Aims.

On Russia's part, Pravda asserted: "We shall send to hell any and all manoeuvres and we shall go directly toward our aims. We shall assure our safety and obtain our goal, crushing all in our way."

The newspaper attacked unnamed "political leaders" in Sweden, saying, "during the Czarist regime, when Russia had all of Finland, including the Aaland Islands, they were licking the boots of Czarist Russia. Now, when we ask for only one naval base, they are screaming protests.

"We know that in doing so they are meeting the request of their western bosses."

The article dealing with negotiations for concessions which Russia has asked of her little Baltic neighbor came on the day a Finnish delegation was expected to start its final discussions at the Kremlin.

Foreign circles had interpreted Erkko's speech Wednesday night as conciliatory in tone and foresaw an early settlement of the Russia requests, but the Pravda article used the strongest language yet employed publicly in the four-week negotiations.

Citing the fact that Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania already had signed mutual assistance pacts with Russia, Pravda said:

"Attempts to deny the mutual advantages of these agreements for all their signatures are made only by their common enemies interested in fomenting war not only in western but in eastern Europe as well, particularly on the Baltic coast."

Natural Assumption

It said that "naturally, the government of the U.S.S.R. was bound to address similar proposals to the fourth Baltic country bordering on the U.S.S.R.—Finland.

"It is sufficient to glance at the map of Finland to realize that the problems of security of the U.S.S.R. are especially acute on the Finnish border.

"The Soviet Union not only has the right but it is obliged to take measures to assure security of the sea and land approaches to Leningrad, whose population equals the entire population of Finland.

Met Half-way is Claim

Pravda declared Russia had met Finland half-way on all important questions, mentioning that Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff Tuesday told the supreme Soviet, that Russia had not insisted on a mutual assistance pact because Finland believed such a pact was incompatible with her position of absolute

"In exchange for territories on the Karelian Isthmus and certain other areas, vitally necessary for the security of the U.S.S.R., said Pravda, "We offered Finland territory of double size in Soviet Karelia.

"The proposal for creation of a naval base for the Soviet at the northern entrance of the Gulf of Finland meets not only the interests of the Soviet Union but those of Finland herself, fully securing the Gulf of Finland against hostile actions on the part of third states.

"However, contrary to common sense, certain leaders of Finland express no desire at all to reach an agreement with the U.S.S.R."

It said that the Finnish Government had taken "a number of emergency measures comprehensible only when a country is preparing for war: the evacuation of urban populations, mobilization of reservists and reorganization of industry to serve war needs.

"On the very next day after Molotoff's speech, which fully clarified the position of Soviet-Finnish negotiations, Finland's Foreign Minister Erkko made a speech which cannot be appraised otherwise than as an appeal for war with the U.S.S.R.

Attempt Against Sovereignty

"The Minister declared the proposal of the U.S.S.R. for peaceful negotiations and consolidation of Utmost Care Exercised

stitute an attempt against Finland's sovereignty.

"Erkko asserts, allegedly referring to removing the frontier line near Leningrad for several kilometres, 'from Finland's point of view this is Russian Imperialism. There is a limit to everything; Finland can friendly ties with Finland to connot agree to the Soviet proposal and will defend her territorial inviolability and independence by any means.'" (Erkko's speech asserted Finland was ready to make arrangements for improving Leningrad's defensive position and increasing the safety of the Gulf of Finland, but that "any guardianship which a foreign power might receive over Finnish territory must be regarded" as endangering Finland's neutrality.

SPECIFIC CHARGES

"I have every reason to believe that in every department of the Government the utmost care has been exercised to carry out the known wishes of the Government in this particular," Mr. Mackenzie King said in his statement.

The exchange between the two leaders marked the first break in the tacit agreement between the federal parties to refrain from criticism of the Government's war efforts.

The Prime Minister invited Dr. Manion to make public specific details of any instances of political patronage in Government appointments or in awarding of contracts.

Welcome Course Adopted

"I may say that I should wholly welcome this course being adopted by the Leader of the Opposition and will undertake to see that where specific charges are made they will be at once investigated."

Referring to Dr. Manion's statement that the Government has not consulted him concerning the war since parliament prorogued, the Prime Minister stated that "responsibility in so grave a matter cannot be divided."

"I have already made it plain the Government will welcome constructive criticism," he said. "Had matters arisen which I felt required consultation with the Leader of the Opposition, I would immediately have requested a conference."

bombers were brought down by British fliers in northern France yesterday and a third chased toward German territory. It was not known whether that was the same air fight as reported by the French.)

French Plan Purchases

Action of the United States House of Representatives toward ending the embargo on arms sales to belligerents considered an important development here.

Premier Daladier was understood to have devoted much of his analysis of the general situation at a cabinet meeting today to prospects of buying equipment, particularly airplanes, in the United States.

French sources estimated that 12 German planes were shot down during October compared with 28 in September. They said bad weather reduced aerial activity last month.

THIS MINE CAN GUIDE YOU IN STARTING YOUR CAR!

Far underground in the mine the old mule is fast becoming a thing of the past. Train-loads of ore are now pulled by electric locomotives propelled by batteries. Mine engineers have the facilities to exhaustively test the batteries they buy and they have found that the all-round dependability of Exide batteries with their long, trouble-free life makes them first choice in mine equipment.

Unfortunately, the average motorist is not able to accurately test the battery he is about to buy. There is a tremendous difference in batteries but you can't see it, it's inside.

Therefore, don't buy batteries on the guesswork plan or upon their appearance. Take advantage of the experience of mine engineers to help you in your choice of a dependable battery.

Have you a radio in your car — a heater — a defroster? Do you start and stop a lot? Exide has developed the Exide Hycap for just such conditions. It has ample power to operate all these extras and still start your car in any weather.

Go to the nearest Exide dealer. You will know him by the familiar Exide sign. You are in good hands at his station. He has the ability to render dependable battery service. What other battery so thoroughly merits your confidence!

Great Britain Adopts New Rallying Cry Credited to General 'Tiny' Ironside

BILL-BOARDS USED

By EDWIN S. JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Nov. 3—(CP)— Great Britain, at war with Germany for the second time within a generation has adopted a rallying call destined to become as famous as Kitchener's "your country needs you" of 25 years ago.

On billboards throughout the United Kingdom the new message cries out in bold, red type: "Your freedom is in peril, defend it with all your might." It is a message ascribed to General Sir Edmund Ironside, tall, rugged and dynamic chief of the Imperial General staff, whom Britain has acclaimed as her modern Kitchener.

The slogan fits the energy of "Tiny" Ironside, as his men affectionarly call this six-feet-four soldier. A leader of action, he has installed respect and confidence in his men through his very name and his eagerness to be two steps ahead of the other fellow. The man-in-the street admires his straight-from-the-shoulder frankness.

Born in Great Days

While Poland was being overrun by Germany and pessimistic talk of allied strategy on the western front was heard, General Ironside remarked bluntly.

"I cannot agree with people who keep on complaining of the dangers and troubles that confront us. I thank God I was born to go through these tremendous events."

He is a man of many achievements. He speaks 16 languages. In the latter part of the first great war he was given command of the British expeditionary force sent to Archangel, where he won distinction for his skill in directing the campaign against the Bolshevists.

Two assignments in India, a term as Governor of Gibraltar and periods in important posts at home brought him close to retirement when the war started. But when hostilities broke out there could be no question of stepping from the ranks for this giant of determination.

THE KING RECEIVES CRERAR

London, Nov. 3—(CP)—The King today received in audience the Canadian Minister of Mines and National Resources, Hon. T. A. Crerar, who represents Canada at the empire war talks now in progress.

Richard Casey, Australian Minister of Supply, who represents his country at the talks, took his oath as a member of the Privy Council, to which he was appointed in the King's Birthday Honors last summer.

The Stars Say

For Saturday, November 4
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THE LUNAR aspects of this day seem to hold omen of interests working at cross-purposes. There is much to be done to realize smooth running in employment and to maintain the good graces of authority. It may be difficult to secure co-operation or favors under such adverse signs. Be judicious and conservative in making sudden changes, and shun extravagance.

Those whose birthday it is may have to exercise good judgment and wise management in counteracting tendencies of affairs to become muddled or upset by friction, overinflated ideas, expansive and extravagant impulses. All are likely to inflame opposition or open hostility of employers or superiors. Similar egotistic or indulgent attitudes may complicate personal relations.

A child born on this day may have rather extravagant ideas which may prove detrimental to its success in employment and to the happiness of its private associations.

Gangster Spirit Pervades Nazi Regime Says Hoover

New York, Nov. 3.—(AP)—Herbert Hoover said last night that "cunning organization and organized thuggery are the foundations" of the spirit and method of "the groups who now control both Russia and Germany."

In a speech at a fund-raising dinner of the Young Men's Christian Association, the former President declared:

"This same gangster spirit expresses itself in the political machines which control some of our municipal governments, plundering their taxpayers and controlling elections by corruption and intimidation by gunmen.

"The spirit of organization of Al Capone differ not at all from the spirit of Pendergast. (Tom Pendergast, the former Kansas City political boss, now in Federal prison for income tax violations.)

"And the spirit and the method of both of them do not differ from the groups who now control both Russia and Germany. That is its development on a nationwide scale. And if you examine them all you will find they are largely fed by the products of the pavement and frustrated youth.

MISSIONARY TELLS OF BOLIVIANS

Miss Dorothy Francklin Gives Illustrated Lecture in Victoria Ave. Church

Miss Dorothy Francklin, missionary on furlough from Canadian Baptist Missionary fields in Bolivia, gave an illustrated lecture in Victoria Ave. Baptist Church Thursday evening.

An eloquent speaker, Miss Francklin enthralled her listeners as she told of the progress of missionary endeavor in the high altitudes of the South American Republic. The beautifully colored slides gave a complete picture of Bolivian life and they seemed to leap into reality as Miss Francklin graphically explained the various phases of her work and detailed special points of interest.

Both native Indians and people of Spanish descent evinced a hunger for the word of God, stated the missionary, as she told of many wonderful episodes in her work where people were brought to love and serve the Lord Jesus Christ.

Miss Francklin's home is in Winnipeg and at the present time she is visiting with her brother, Mr. Charles Francklin, of George St., Belleville.

The visiting speaker was introduced by Miss A. Lounsberry. Miss Ethel Turner performed the duties of chairman for the occasion. A lovely vocal solo was given by Miss Edna Jobson.

Dumbells to Give Concert in Ottawa On Armistice Night

Toronto, Nov. 3 — (CP)—The Dumbells, famous Canadian company of soldier entertainers during the last war, will don grease paint and costume again on Armistice night at Ottawa in a special engagement for troops in the capital, it was announced here today.

Captain M. W. Plunkett, the original producer, said a report from Great Village, N.S., that the company was reorganizing on a permanent basis is "premature." It was indicated, however, that permanent reorganization is a strong likelihood.

Ross Hamilton, female impersonator who created the role of "Marjorie," a famous lady of the last war, will be back in the cast Nov. 11th along with Red Newman and Pat Rafferty, comedians, and Al Plunkett.

BUTTER EXPORT BANNED

London, Nov. 3 — (CP-Cable)—The Eire Government's ban on the export of butter, announced without explanation last night, has no immediate connection with the British rationing scheme which begins next month, it was stated here today.

The Eire Government hopes that as a result of negotiations proceeding in London a better price than 145 shillings ($32.25) a hundred weight will be secured, when the ban will be lifted.

The prohibition order provides that the government will purchase from creameries all stocks which would have been exported.

'CONCHIES' HEARD BY TRIBUNALS

Interesting Cases of Declared Conscientious Objectors Tried in London

(By Harold J. Fair, Canadian Press Staff Writer).

London, Nov. 3.—(CP)—Out of fashion for a decade, the term "conchie"—conscientious objector—has come into fashion in Britain once more as tribunals hear from persons who believe they should not be called upon to fight.

Names of declared conscientious objectors are placed provisionally on a register. Judges decide whether the names shall remain there or be removed. They can be removed unconditionally, which involves being called up for actual military service, or on the condition that they be assigned non-combatant duties.

The case of an aircraft worker was the strangest of twenty-five recently before a tribunal in the London area. Leslie George Victor Skelton said that as a Christian, he was convinced war was wrong. Sir James Bailie, one of the tribunal, commented: "Your position, in plain words is that you have a strong objection to fighting but no objection to making a fighting machine." The tribunal decided that there was no conscientious objection and, as Skelton was doing work of national importance, he should remain there until he was twenty-one when he would be in a reserved occupation.

Poems to Show His Thoughts

Poems typical of his thoughts and feelings were handed in at a tribunal by Frederick George Crandley. He said he had written a 100,000-word novel, not yet published, containing many of his thoughts about love.

Declaring he was physically unfit and only " a poor puny person," Crandley added: "I am very proud that England is a country where such an objection can be raised."

"Worth fighting for?" asked the judge.

"Yes, if I am able to fight for it."

He was registered for non-combatant duties.

Gilbert A. Platon said he was a "Christian mystic" and as such favored non-resistance to any enemy. When the judge asked if he had confided his pacifistic views to anyone who would be willing to testify that he conscientiously did hold them, Platon replied, "Only to my fiancee, but I'm of a very retiring disposition, as a mystic naturally is."

NATIONALIST LEADERS IN INDIA CONFER

New Delhi, Nov. 3 (CP-Reuters)—Indian Nationalist leaders conferred here today on what was believed to be a declaration setting forth to the Viceroy, the Marquess of Linlithgow, their position with respect to Great Britain's Indian policy.

Rajendra Prasad, rightist president of the All-India National Congress party, conversed at length with Pandit Nawarharal Nehru, former leftist head of the party. Prasad was believed to be planning a statement in conjunction with Mohandas K. Gandhi setting forth the Congress party's position in the light of their talk with the Viceroy and their subsequent conference with M. A. Jinnah, head of the Indian Moslem League.

Low Casualty Lists Mark Present War

(By The Canadian Press)

Despite deadliest weapons in history—or perhaps because of them—the second Great War, two months old today, has lagged behind the last war.

The conflict on the Western Front has lacked the huge casualty lists, battles with hundreds of thousands engaged and swift manoeuvring that marked the corresponding period of 1914.

Only in the Polish campaign, starting Sept. 1, two days before Great Britain and France went to war against Germany, were there any large scale or decisive battles. Casualties there were vastly greater than on the Western Front but less than on the Eastern Front in 1914.

Dead and wounded in the opening days of the last war were counted in the scores of thousands; 1939 Western Front reports count them in the low hundreds.

Germany reported only 196 killed and 356 wounded in the west up to Oct. 17. The Royal Air Force, only British service issuing casualty summaries, reported 122 dead up to last night. There have been no French casualty figures.

No Enemy Raiders In Firth of Forth Says Air Ministry

London, Nov. 3—(CP)— The Evening News reported "intense aerial activity" in the Firth of Forth area today and said an engagement between German raiders and British fighters was believed to have occurred a few miles at sea.

An air ministry spokesman said no enemy raiders had been sighted off the Scottish coast today and suggested planes seen there probably were a British patrol.

CONVICT HOLIDAY BRINGS DEATH TO 2

Conflicting Stories Told and No Trace of Lethal Weapons Found

Redwood City, Calif., Nov. 3 — (AP)—A convict holiday which brought swift death to two men today left San Mateo County officers with conflicting stories from witnesses and no trace of the lethal weapons.

The bullet-riddled bodies of Ray Lagomarsino, 32, mail robber, escape artist and the first man ever to win his freedom from Alcatraz Prison on a Habeas Corpus writ in 1935, and Leo Tyma, 30, convicted of sex crimes, were found yesterday near the ocean beach south of San Francisco.

Soon after police arrested Ray Thompson, 30, who escaped with the slain Folsom prison convicts from a Tehachapi prison camp two weeks ago, James Lee, 19-year-old San Francisco Korean, and three other persons.

Lee was quoted by police as saying the slain men shot each other after an argument over a girl and Lagomarsino's refusal to attempt a holdup.

Illinois Senators Protest Waterway No Enemy Raiders

Washington, Nov. 3 (AP) — Two Illinois Senators lodged with President Roosevelt today a protest against the St. Lawrence Waterway Treaty, directed chiefly at its provisions affecting Lake Michigan.

Senators Slattery and Lucas, accompanied by Benjamin Adamowski, floor leader in the Illinois House filed a protest which Governor Horner had forwarded here earlier in the week.

The Senators reported the President read Horner's Telegram and told them there was no possibility of immediate action.

There have been reports recently that the Senate would be asked soon to ratify a treaty with Canada for development of the St. Lawrence waterway.

Reason for Raeder's Message Mystery Until War's End

Washington, Nov. 3—(AP)—President Roosevelt characterized today as a mystery that probably could not be cleared up until the war ends the reason why Grand Admiral Erich Raeder of Germany gave the United States government information which sent naval and coast guard ships scurrying to meet the American liner Iroquois.

Through the Embassy in Berlin, the White House was advised by Raeder that the Iroquois, loaded with refugees, would be sunk when near the American coast. Armed vessels met her far from shore, however and she came through without incident.

At his press conference Mr. Roosevelt was asked why the German naval chief had given the tip which sent the naval and coast guard ships "on a wild goose chase."

He said that mystery probably would not be cleared up until the war was over.

Charge Withdrawn Butter Shipped by British Dealer

London, Nov. 3 (CP Cable)—The Ministry of Information today withdrew its charge that Arthur Hentzen, Bradford merchant, sent butter to Field Marshal Hermann Goering and other Nazi leaders.

A letter from the Treasury Solicitor to Hentzen's solicitors conveyed the retraction declaring the Minister is "now able to accept the explanation which you have made on behalf of Mr. Hentzen that the persons to whom the parcels of butter in question were sent were friends and civil servants."

It added it was apparently a coincidence that the names of some were the same as those of Nazi leaders.

EIRE TO INCREASE PARTIAL BLACKOUT

Action Taken to Avoid Possible Protests From Britain of Glare of Irish Cities

Dublin, Nov. 3 (CP)—From Nov. 18 Eire's partial blackout is to be intensified in all east coast areas and in Cork, Waterford and Limerick, according to regulations issued by the Department of Defence.

The regulations, which cover public, domestic, advertising and other lighting were not published in the newspapers because the department refuses to pay for them as an advertisement. The department, however, has sought to call attention to them by means of the State radio stations.

Protests against the blackout have been made by the labor party on the ground that there is no reason for it in a neutral country. Switzerland, Denmark, Sweden and other neutrals have been cited in support of this contention.

The policy of the government in ordering the blackout is to avoid possible protests from Great Britain that the sky glare of Irish cities and towns, visible more than 150 miles away, would assist raiding aircraft in attacks on Britain's western coasts.

Efforts are being made to patch up the differences between the newspapers and the government.

WAR BRIEFS

London, Nov. 2—(CP)— Idea of a possible German invasion of Great Britain was scouted last night by Maj.-Gen. Sir Ernest Swinton in the weekly war commentary broadcast during the British Broadcasting Corporation Home Service program. Sir Ernest, characterized as an "eye-witness" in the last war, said that "fantastic threats of an invasion of this country which are causing anxiety to some people can, I think, be absolutely ignored.

Rome, Nov. 3—(AP)— Italian newspapers, including Premier Mussolini's Il Popolo D'Italia of Milan, published a report today that Field Marshal Hermann Goering, Adolf Hitler's chief lieutenant, was coming here next Tuesday. An official source said the rumor could not be confirmed.

Shanghai, Nov. 3—(AP)— The British Church Missionary Society reported to the British Embassy today that its hospital at Mingwa, 70 miles southwest of Foochow, was wrecked in a Japanese air raid on Wednesday. There were several casualties among Chinese.

London, Nov. 3—(CP)—The Copenhagen correspondent of Reuters News Agency today reported receipt of a telegram from Helsingfors saying the Soviet Union may seek a common border with Norway by making a demand on Finland for the Petsamo region, in addition to demands already made. In exchange the dispatch said, the Soviet Union would give Finland 1,158 square miles of land north of Lake Ladoga.

Paris, Nov. 3—(AP)—Soldiers who have become fathers since the war began went home today to see their babies. Three-day furloughs were made possible under a special decree in keeping with Premier Daladier's program of encouraging family life in wartime. The government paid the fares.

Vera Cruz, Mexico, Nov. 3—(AP)—The commander of the coast guard cutter G-25 reported today discovery of the bodies of two sailors from the German liner Columbus on the beach five miles from here. Four seamen from the Columbus, which took refuge here when war broke out, disappeared Wednesday when a storm caught their launch. The two still missing were believed drowned also.

Pontiff Praised On His Encyclical

Vatican City, Nov. 1 (CP-Havas)—Thousands of letters and telegrams from all parts of the world have come into the Vatican expressing gratitude for the Papal encyclical, L'Osservatore Romano said today.

Among the messages received were many from non-Catholics voicing solidarity with the sentiments expressed by the Pontiff. The Vatican paper said it would soon publish the most significant excerpts from some of the communications.

Pope Pius will resume next Wednesday his collective audiences and the audiences to young married couples which were interrupted during his summer stay at Castel Gandolfo.

BRITISH SIGHT CITY OF FLINT

London, Nov. 3.— (CP) — The British Navy has sighted the United States Freighter City of Flint, it was announced officially today.

A communique said:

"The admiralty announced that the Steamship City of Flint has been sighted by our light forces proceeding to the southward inside Norwegian territorial waters.

"It is possible for the City of Flint to remain inside Norwegian and Swedish territorial waters until she enters the Baltic."

The Admiralty avoided any hint as to whether the British ships would attempt to intercept the City of Flint before it reached a German port in charge of a German prize crew.

Bergen, Norway, Nov. 3—(AP)—Several British warships were observed off the Norwegian coast today, apparently watching the progress of the captive United States Freighter City of Flint.

The City of Flint, in the hands of a German prize crew, passed the Bergen Naval District at 9:30 a.m. (3:30 a.m., E.S.T.) today accompanied by the Norwegian Minelayer Olav Tryggvason and two Norwegian destroyers.

Authoritative sources said an unidentified member of the City of Flin't American crew was sick and under treatment by a physician from the Olav Tryggvason.

Observers here speculated on the possibility that the British warships might attempt to take the City of Flint from her German captors a few hours after she leaves Haugesund, 75 miles south of here, when she cuts into the open sea across the entrance to Bukken Fjord.

The freighter was expected to reach Haugesund at about 4 p.m. (10 a.m., E.S.T.)

The possibility was considered that the City of Flint might have to leave the three mile limit of Norwegian territorial waters south of Stavanger, farther down the coast from Haugesund and across the wide mouth of Bukken Fjord.

German Assurance Given

Washington, Nov. 3—(AP)—The German government gave the United States today formal assurances that the safety of the American crew aboard the seized freighter City of Flint would be respected.

Alexander Kirk, American Charge D'Affairs in Berlin, cabled the State Department a foreign official had informed him that the foreign office had requested the appropriate German naval authorities to respect the wishes of the United States government.

The wishes referred to were set forth in a communication presented to Berlin and London governments Tuesday expressing the government's concern for the safety of the American crew of 40 men under Captain Joseph Gainard.

The government also expressed its expectation that all belligerents would take precautions to avoid exposing the American crew to unnecessary danger. The British government said the Flint's crew would not be exposed to danger by British action.

Wide Range of Purchases

The British-French Allies have stressed their need for warplanes of all types, but their purchases are expected to cover a wide range of other products, including:

Motor trucks and motorcycles, clothing, machine tools, field ranges, explosives, foodstuffs, surgical instruments, hospital supplies, searchlights, gas masks, pontoon equipment, water purifying units, ambulances, tents, saddles and telephones co-ordinated as were the Allied purchases toward the end of the first Great War, but measures to avoid competition between the two buyers are anticipated shortly.

French Orders Placed

A British purchasing mission headed by Lieut.-Col. J. H. M. Greenley, an official of the British industrial firm of Babcock & Wilcox, Limited, has been at Ottawa, but is expected to extend its activities to New York.

While Congress debated the neutrality issue, the British appeared to have withheld their purchases, but France's representatives are known to have placed quietly many orders whose fulfilment was subject the repeal of the embargo.

Most of the foreign orders are welcomed officially as an aid to American national defense. It is pointed out that they will mean expansion of industry's capacity to produce munitions of all kinds. Aircraft industry officials have insisted that United States plants could handle the additional contracts even though they are turning out more than 4,000 planes for the army and navy.

United States military orders have priority over foreign contracts, and the army and navy are in a position to exercise direct control through the licensing system of the State Department.

Discussions Proceed

Meanwhile it is learned the British Government is "extremely well pleased" with the progress of the informal discussions with Dominion cabinet ministers. So far progress in coordinating the war effort of the whole empire has exceeded the expectations of the British Government. So far there have been joint meetings on foreign policy and the general political situation, strategical issues, shipping and supply and economic warfare.

In addition the leader of the Canadian delegation, Hon. T. A. Crerar and other Dominion Ministers have discussed individual problems with British ministers.

Devising Best Methods

The general object of the discussions is to devise the best method whereby Britain and the Dominions can each progressively make its most effective contribution to the common cause in man power and resources.

There will be no permanent organization established but under Hon. Vincent Massey, the Canadian High Commissioner, and some other high commissioners full-time technical advisers may be appointed. Specialists in military affairs, supply and finance may be appointed as regular members of the high commissioner's staff so they can continue the contacts already established here.

A reliable source disclosed that members of Mr. Crerar's staff will remain here on an indefinite stay" after the delegation leader sails for Canada when the main conversations are concluded.

FARMER TRUSSED UP WITH WIRE, ROBBED

Orillia, Ont., Nov. 3 (CP)—Police are seeking three men who last night held up George Duff, 45, Orillia township farmer, bound him with wire and took $81 in bills.

The robbery occurred on the highway about four miles north of here. Duff was first held up with a gun, then bound. He ran to the general store at the village of Aedtrea, half a mile from where he was accosted, and told the proprietor he had been robbed. His arms were still bound.

ROOSEVELT SIGNS NEUTRALITY ACT OF 1939

Belligerents Able to Buy Arms on "Cash and Carry" Basis Under New Act

Bill is Signed at Formal Ceremony in President's Office in Presence of State Secretary and Legislators

BILL IS PROCLAIMED

Use of American Ports and Territorial Waters by Belligerent Submarines Outlined in New Neutrality Act

Washington, Nov. 4 (AP)—President Roosevelt signed into law today "the Neutrality Act of 1939", ending the embargo on arms sales to France, Britain and Germany and establishing a neutrality policy designed to keep the United States from being drawn into the war.

The new law, strictly regulating all dealings with belligerents in a series of safeguards against war unprecedented in the nation's history, was signed at a formal ceremony in the President's office in the presence of State Secretary Hull and a large group of legislators.

Press Secretary Present.

Press Secretary Stephen Early stood at the open door and waved to newspapermen in the lobby when the chief executive affixed his signature shortly after noon.

His signing of the bill gave a signal which some officials expected to result in the placing of $1,000,000,000 worth of war orders in the United States—mostly by France and Britain—within the next few weeks.

The bill was signed at 12:04 p.m. E.S.T.

A second later the President signed a proclamation putting the law into effect immediately by re-declaring this nation's neutrality in the war between Germany, and France, Poland, the United Kingdom, India, Australia, Canada, New Zealand and the Union of South Africa.

Ports Regulated

Another proclamation signed at the same time regulated the use of American ports and territorial waters by belligerent submarines.

Both of these proclamations had been issued under the old neutrality law, carrying the arms embargo, which was repealed by the new statute.

It was necessary to issue a new neutrality proclamation because the new law, as had the old, provided the neutrality program should become operative whenever the president found a state of war existed.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Scoresby, the younger! Many great sailors of the past have contributed to our knowledge of meteorology. William Scoresby was no exception. He was a great explorer, sailor and scientist. He is noted for having reached, with his father, the highest latitude in the eastern hemisphere at the early age of 21, in the year 1806. Later he investigated magnetism, refraction of light and density of ice and he was the first to establish the fact that the polar waters are warmer at great depths than at the surface. He kept careful weather notes, including remarks on the formation of fog and sun haloes. He somewhat anticipated modern thought in his theory that the rain off Greenland was caused by the meeting of warm, moist air from the south with cold air from the north.

RETAIL BUSINESS SHOWS INCREASE

Housewives Hurried to Market to Stock Up After War Opens

Ottawa, Nov. 4 (CP)—Canadian housewives hurried to market to stock up pantry shelves during the first months of war, and retail business profited accordingly, Dominion government surveys showed today.

Retail purchasing for September climbed 24 per cent above August and 12 per cent above September, 1938, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported, but the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, headed by Hector B. McKinnon, kept close watch on prices and supplies, with the result that there was, only a slight price increase and practically no shortage.

Much of the purchasing was in foodstuffs such as sugar and canned goods and other household supplies and the price board had anticipated the move, preventing excessive price jumps. The buying wave, board experts expect, will continue "for a month or two."

The buying movement resulted in heavier advertising by merchants and manufacturers and increased traffic in transportation, so several industries have profited, it was pointed out.

Hon. T. A. Crerar Shown Secrets Of Air Defence

London, Nov. 4 — (CP-Cable)—Hon. T. A. Crerar, head of the Canadian delegation here for empire talks, today saw the closely guarded secrets of Britain's air defence when he visited headquarters of the Royal Air Force fighter command "Somewhere in England."

He was taken by Air Chief Marshal Sir Hugh Dowding, Air Officer Commanding, into the operations room from which the defence system is controlled.

Also in the party were Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan, the representative of India at the talks, Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner in the United Kingdom, Colonel Deneys Reitz, South African Minister of Native Affairs and Air Commodore L. S. Breadner, Air Adviser to Mr. Crerar.

The visitors saw the central control which is in a room like a broadcasting studio. A huge map of Britain, on which defence measures are plotted, is on tables occupying practically all the floor space. Around tables sit R.A.F. telephone operators, headphones clamped on their heads. They were shown the system by which fighting planes are ordered to take off from an airfield when reports of raiders are received. Pilots are kept informed by radio of the speed and number of the raiders. The visitors saw arrows marked to show the strength of raiders, which are moved about the map by a croupier's rake to indicate the progress of the raid.

Oslo Group of Powers to Meet on Monday

Copenhagen, Nov. 4 — (CP-Havas) — The Oslo group of neutral powers today was called to meet in conference here next Monday.

The Oslo powers are Finland, Norway, Denmark, Sweden, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg.

Some observers believed that the conference of the nations' legal experts had been called to consider repercussions of the Soviet demands on Finland.

An announcement of the meeting, however, said only that technical problems involving neutrality would be considered.

PAY OF SOLDIERS IN FRENCH ARMY TO BE INCREASED

Poilus to Receive 75 Centimes a Day and Higher Grades 40% of Present Rate

ALLIES CONFER

Paris, Nov. 4 (AP)—At least a dozen German scouting planes penetrated deep into French territory today through heavy French anti-aircraft fire.

Military dispatches from the front said the squadron flew high to avoid bursting shells and manoeuvred over Forbach, Colmar and Mulmouse, then headed west toward the Bourgogne region around Dijow.

No attacks on French cities were reported.

French fliers at the same time were reported to have made reconnaissance flights over the German Rhineland without mishap.

France appropriated 810,000,000 francs (about $16,500,000) to raise the pay of her soldiers.

In addition to a daily 10-franc "combat bonus" about 23 cents) for men at the front, the cabinet decreed that the pay of poilus be increased from 50 to 75 centimes (from about one to 1½ cents) and that of higher grades be raised by 40 per cent.

Great Britain and France meanwhile conferred on a joint plan for purchases of war materials in the United States market opened by removal of the American arms embargo.

Following the arrival Thursday of Winston Churchill, First Lord of the British Admiralty, authorized sources disclosed that the French and British governments were studying such questions as payment, shipment and distribution between them of arms which may be imported from the United States with the lifting of the American embargo.

Warplanes such as the Curtiss Hawk, which the French regard as an efficient fighting ship, were understood to be the American product in which the allies were most interested.

An official announcement, meanwhile, disclosed that Winston Churchill, Great Britain's First Lord of the Admiralty, had conferred yesterday with French naval officials regarding the war at sea.

Germans in Balkan States Uneasy Over Hitler's Resettlement Plans

By HOWARD KENNEDY

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Budapest, Nov. 4 (AP)—Two million Germans of Hungary and the Balkans are watching with uneasiness Adolf Hitler's resettlement in the new Reich of Germans abroad—thus far applied only to the Baltic region.

Rumania has nearly 800,000 Germans; Yugoslavia, 700,000; Hungary, more than 500,000, mostly farmfolk who have migrated eastward in groups in the last 200 to 300 years.

Many of them have boasted proudly of their Germanism and demanded German schools and the right to retain the German language and customs, among other concessions. When Hitler decided to move Germans from the Baltic States to the Polish Corridor, the Germans in southeastern Europe began to softpedal their Germanism.

They became more alarmed later when reports were published that Hitler contemplated moving them also to western Poland to solidify Germany's trip on that region.

Despite their Germanism, the overwhelming majority of these Germans do not relish the idea of leaving their prosperous farms in the rich Danubian region for the bleak plains of Poland.

Those in Rumania are mostly Saxons. In Hungary and Yugoslavia, they are principally Swabians. They have retained their language and customs, even their native costumes, but have become attached to their new lands.

By painstaking labor through many generations, they made their land superior to that of their Hungarian, Yugoslav and Rumanian neighbors.

Since the possibility of German repatriation has confronted them, a number of German families in Hungary, who for generations held out against being Hungarianised, have had their names Magyarized.

Schooner Bluenose Goes on Auction Block

Lunenburg, N.S., Nov. 4 (CP)—The schooner Bluenose, queen of the North Atlantic fishing fleet and international fishermen's racing champion, will go on the auction block, Captain Angus Walters announced last night. Walters said she would be sold at public auction for debt.

A Canadian firm is suing her operating company for $7,000, the balance due on the engines she uses for auxiliary power, Walters said. If she is not purchased at auction, her ownership will revert to the plaintiffs, the Canadian Fairbanks Morse, Limited.

The craft is owed by the Bluenose Schooner Company of Lunenburg. She has been taken on barnstorming tours around the Maritime Provinces since she came home from Gloucester last year with the International Fishermen's racing cup.

FINNS' PREMIER SPEAKS TO NATION

Desire for Neutrality "Must Not Serve as Springboard for Soviet Demands"

Helsinfors, Nov. 4 — (CP-Havas) —Finland's desire to remain neutral "must not serve as a springboard for Soviet demands," Prime Minister A. K. Cajander told the nation in a broadcast today.

"We cannot renounce the liberty of our country, which is a neutral country," he said.

Cession of a base around Hangoe Island, asked by Moscow, would constitute a danger to Finnish security, the Premier asserted. Such a base is not necessary for the protection of Leningrad, he declared.

The Premier stressed the Finnish people's determination to defend their liberty and neutrality at all costs. "We still hope for a peaceful solution," he said, "but if need be the Finnish people, more united than ever, are firmly decided to stand against every eventuality."

WRECKAGE OF PLANE FOUND

Edinburgh, Nov. 4 (CP)—The wreckage of a German airplane was found today in the Firts of Forth It was believed to be that of a plane recently shot down during a fight with British fliers. The helmet of a German flier was washed ashore on the east Lothian coast.

PATTULLO WARNS MRS. D. STEEVES IN B. C. HOUSE

Repetition of Criticism of British Policies Will Bring Action of Ottawa Says Premier

SAYS WAR FUTILE

Victoria, Nov. 4 (CP)—Mrs. Dorothy Steeves, Co-operative Commonwealth Federation member of the British Columbia Legislature for North Vancouver, was warned by Premier T. D. Pattullo yesterday against repetition of her criticism during the Throne Speech debate of British policies and government.

"If such words are again uttered I shall have to advise Ottawa for action under the Canada War Measures Act," Mr. Pattullo said.

"What a farce it is to accuse Germany of breaking solemn promises when Great Britain, France and all governments broke as many as Germany," Mrs. Steeves said in the Legislature yesterday.

"Enemies of peace are not all in Germany or Russia. They are right here. They are those who refuse to relinquish vested interests. That word empire is connected with a history of horror and slaughter. I hope to see it disappear from our vocabulary."

NEW YORK PIERS JAMMED WITH WAR MATERIALS

Authorities Planning to Avoid Congestion Such as Occurred in Last War

"SWAP" TRADE ROUTES

By ROGER GREENE

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

New York, Nov. 4 (AP)— Giant trucks rumbling along the New York waterfront in an endless stream signalled the lifting of the embargo on the shipment of war materials to Europe today as President Roosevelt prepared to sign the new neutrality law.

Simultaneously, with pier sheds already bulging, maritime experts began to plan against a recurrence of the nightmare of congestion which choked this port in the early years of the last war.

British shipping officials acknowledged that they already have "a good deal more freight than ships", but it was said in other quarters that the Admiralty probably would step up the tempo of the convoy system to safeguard the transportation of allied war orders. Estimates have valued probably orders as high as $1,000,000,000 within a few weeks.

Special Scrutiny in Naturalization of German Nationals

Ottawa, Nov. 4 (CP)—Naturalization certificates are to be granted to German Nationals only after special scrutiny of each case by the Secretary of State it was announced today.

Since the war naturalization applications have increased from a normal monthly figure of 700 to 800 to more than 2,000 in September and October.

Most applicants are enemy aliens residing in Canada who are in effect refugees and not in sympathy with the government of the German Reich. These persons have expressed a desire to assist the Canadian cause in the war.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

The adoption of Nazi methods by Russia since the recent alliance of the two professed ideological enemies has been noted in several occasions. Another instance occurred yesterday when the Moscow paper "Pravda," official organ of the ruling Communist party threw a monkey wrench into the supposedly peaceful negotiations between Russia and Finland.

The paper crackled with the type of language used by the inspired and muzzled Nazi press on the eve of the German invasion of Poland. "We will throw to the devils all games of political gamblers and tread our own way despite everything," declared Pravda.

NAZIS PROTEST NORWAY'S ACTION IN INTERNING CREW

Charge D'Affaires Claims Commander of German Crew "Victim of His Humanitarianism"

CARGO STILL ABOARD

Germany Has No Intention of Trying to Capture U.S. Freighter Second Time

Berlin, Nov. 4—(AP)— The German Charge D'Affaires at Oslo protested today to the Norwegian Government its internment of the German prize crew from the American freighter City of Flint and release of the vessel to the American crew.

Authorized sources said the protest was "oral and based on the whole procedure of Norwegian authorities in connection with the City of Flint's entry at Haugesund," where the internment and release orders were carried out early today.

These circles said Germany would demand release of the prize crew of 18 men and that there might also be a claim for damages on the theory that contraband on the City of Flint would have fallen into German hands if the ship had reached a German port.

ENLISTMENT OF YOUTHS UNDER 21 IS DISCUSSED

Dr. Burke of Pensions Dep't. Refers to Records of Disease in Last War

REHABILITATION

Ottawa, Nov. 4 (CP)—Army enlistment of youths under 21 for service in the field may be "bad national economy" because of their physical immaturity, according to Dr. F. S. Burke, Chief of the Medical Investigation Division of the Department of Pensions and National Health.

The "excessive" death rate among young soldiers in the last war, especially from tuberculosis, and their difficulty in rehabilitating themselves to civil life, are his chief arguments.

Governor to Carry on Administration

Bombay, Nov. 4 (CP)—Sir Roger Lumley, Governor of Bombay, accepted the resignation of the provincial ministry today and, unable to form an opposition ministry, prepared to conduct the administration himself.

Provincial ministries dominated by the Congress Party are joining in protest against Great Britain's refusal to consider further constitutional reforms until after the war.

Leaves Haugesund With German Crew Interned in Norway

SEIZED OCTOBER 9

Captured by German Pocket Battleship, Deutschland, and Taken to Murmansk, Russia, Before Proceeding to Germany

Oslo, Nov. 4 (AP)—A German protest against liberation of the American freighter City of Flint and internment of her German prize crew was delivered today to the Foreign Office but well informed sources expressed the opinion it would be rejected.

The Norwegian government's decision in freeing the vessel was based on Chapter 13, Article 2 of the Hague convention rules, which says a prize can be taken into a neutral port only because she is unseaworthy or because of weather, or lack of fuel or provisions.

Rules Outlined

The rules provide that the prize ship must leave again as soon as these conditions no longer exist. If it does not, the neutral nation "shall use all the means in its power" to free the ship, along with officers and crew, and to intern the prize crew.

The next Article, No. 22, says the neutral government shall free the prize ship if conditions justifying her presence in the neutral harbor do not exist.

Bergen, Norway, Nov. 4 (AP) — The freighter City of Flint arrived here today, freed from her German captors by the decision of the Norwegian government to give the ship back to its American crew.

The vessel came here from Haugesund, 75 miles down the Norwegian coast, leaving behind the prize crew, interned by Norway in the sudden climax to the 4,963-ton ship's adventure as the war prize of a German sea raider.

TEXTILE WORKERS GET PAY BOOST

50,000 New England Workers Receive Seven Per Cent Wage Increase

Boston, Nov. 4—(AP) — More than 50,000 New England textile workers, mostly in cotton and rayon mills, will receive fatter pay envelopes next week because of seven per cent. wage increases which become effective Monday. Unofficial estimates placed the total hike at about $1,000,000 a year.

The boosts will apply to 9,100 workers in Maine, 5,000 in New Hampshire, 7,800 in Rhode Island, 14,000 in Fall River, Mass., 16,000 in New Bedford, Mass., and 800 in Northbridge, Mass.

Quintuplets 'Put on Show' For Bette Davis, Screen Star

Callander, Ont., Nov. 4—(CP)—Bette Davis, twice winner of the Motion Picture Arts Academy Award for acting, today watched the Dionne quintuplets at play and said she'd never want them in the same film with her—they'd steal the show.

"Wonderful," breathed Miss Davis, wearing dark red ski pants, mocassins and a tan sweater for her view of the Quints dressed in beige woolies, turned-down scarlet parkas and green berets.

The movie star watched from the nursery galleries while the five sisters tore around the square concrete sidewalk of their play yard on tricycles, singing the French lyric to "South of the Border,"

As she was leaving, Miss Davis

As she was leavingk, Miss Davis said she wouldn't want them in any picture of hers. They'd be the stars of any picture they played in, she explained.

About 1,000 persons gathered outside the nursery for the sextuple attraction of the Quints and Miss Davis. She gave her autograph to many who asked. Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, physician to the Dionne sisters, who entertained Miss Davis last night, was at a meeting of the board of guardians in North Bay today. The actress did not meet the parents of the quints either.

Annette, Cecile, Emilie, Marie and Yvonne were full of energy this morning. They rode in a line on their tricycles, encored "South of the Border", with "Alouette" and "Heigh Ho." Afterward they went to work digging sand for castles.

"The most amazing sight of my vacation, and the most charming too," said Miss Davis. "It is really wonderful—five little girls, each a double for the others."

GOLDEN PHEASANTS SEEN IN NORTH

With their dull bronzed plumage marking them as birds of rare natural beauty, a number of golden pheasants have been seen in the wooded slopes of North Hastings, a northern municipality official stated today.

The birds raised and bred in the confines of the Algonquin National Park are thought to have escaped from their official environment, and flown south to the edge of the county where apparently they are gradually increasing in numbers.

Now is Time To Do Work On City Beaches

"We desire to finish the work on the beaches this autumn while the water is low," stated Mr. Reg. Moncrieff today. Where the water was as deep as the knees in the summer, one can now walk on the beach without getting feet wet. That is in the marsh section.

"We are asking for donations to finish this work. We have arranged for the county grader and for levelling and for the use of the city road roller but we need money also.

"We hope with the co-operation of those who will make donations to have the beach practically finished for one thousand feet, that is along the entire water front.

This is the time of year to do this work and we are confident that those who know the value of the beach will assist as much as they possibly can with donations."

Second Shipment Red Cross Articles Sent Out to Headquarters

Indicative of the splendid wartime efforts being put forth by the women of the city, the second shipment of completed articles left Belleville yesterday for Red Cross headquarters in Toronto. Consigned from the work headquarters of the local branch of the society, the shipment included 96 pairs pajamas, 84 pairs socks, 29 "pullovers," four and one-half dozen bandages and one pair of wristlets.

Shipments will be made at the beginning of every month, unless emergency calls are sent out when available articles will be dispatched immediately, an official of the local branch stated yesterday afternoon.

"At present there is an urgent need for pajamas, the official revealed, "although," she added, "I imagine our contribution of 96 pairs will alleviate the condition somewhat."

There is no actual shortage of material here, although at times, wool is difficult to obtain. However, no trouble has been experienced in securing the necessary supplies.

"Co-operation of the women's groups and associations of the city is splendid," the official said. "Everyone is turning in and doing a splendid job."

'Dime Beggars' Nuisance to Country Says Mayor Bone

"These 'dime beggars' are getting to be a public nuisance. Too frequently I have been stopped and asked for a dime; why in the last two days the same young man accosted me with the same yarn, 'how about a dime for a cup of coffee' and the country seems to be full of them," Mayor Bone stated in protest of this practice today.

"It should be the duty of the government to check on these young men and see why they are roaming the length and breadth of Canada. Such conditions should be eliminated before they get beyond control. Recently I read, where some 200 young men had been rejected by the Canadian army and are now a charity charge in Toronto. If these young men are willing to work some kind of employment should be provided by the government. If they won't work, however, establish concentration camps or anything to keep them from molesting private citizens on our streets," suggested His Worship when speaking on the question of so many transients whose presence are becoming increased at an alarming rate.

"If the police all over Canada would take one night a year and finger print all of these wanderers and make a complete check-up through Ottawa, perhaps it would assist in bringing to justice criminals who are a roving band and causing much petty crime in the country also," further added Mayor Bone as he contended that the governments were entirely responsible for these prevailing conditions.

"In a young country like Canada there should be plenty of employment for young men who are willing and eager to work," concluded His Worship.

Creation of First Unit Of Pan-Canadian Union Decided Upon in Montreal

(From Le Jour, Montreal)

Memorable events have just transpired in the Province of Quebec. The elements of division and of hatred have been scattered. Canadian Unity has triumphed. As a result, several of our leading compatriots, both English-speaking and French-speaking, have decided to consolidate last week's resounding victory in a powerful association to be known as the Pan-Canadian Union (L'Union Pancanadienne).

Our publication has had the honor of being chosen as the organ of this patriotic organization. No doubt an English-language publication will be added later on. We are only too glad to offer our services as a rallying-point for an association whose aim is to defend Canadian ideals against the ferments of dissolution.

During the recent election campaign, a number of secretaries expressed their determination to establish a new Nationalist Party in the province of Quebec, destined for the exclusive benefit of a handful of "blue-bloods." Its purpose was to have been the deepening of the chasm which separated Quebec from the rest of Confederation.

We dare the authors of that project to follow up their plan! We offer, in opposition to it, a Pan-Canadian Union which will unite Canadians in all provinces, regardless of differences of race, language, religion or politics.

In every city of the nation, in Montreal, Toronto, Ottawa, Quebec, Halifax, Winnipeg, Edmonton, Calgary, St. John, Charlottetown, Vancouver, Victoria and others, the Pan-Canadian Union will establish clubs, operating somewhat after the pattern of the Canadian and Kiwanis Clubs. But their objects will be more clearly defined. They will seek to maintain Canadian unity, goodwill among different ethnic groups, a truly Canadian spirit, progress in education, interprovincial visits, exchanges of scholars and professors, holiday colonies operating between provinces, bilingualism, and a host of other objectives proper to the reinforcement of the federal tie and to the improvement of living conditions among our compatriots.

Those who have at heart the power and greatness of a common country are requested to send us their names. Such a project cannot fail to appeal to millions of Canadians.

In subsequent issues we shall publish the regulations governing the operation of the League. They will be framed to facilitate joint action for the destruction of the centrifugal influences exerted by provincialist and antinational extremists.

It is a matter of pride for us to be able to announce that this saving movement was born in the Province of Quebec. For it is here that Separatist elements have been hardest at work in recent years. Fortunately the elections of October 25th dealt them a crushing blow.

We have had a narrow escape. A vast majority of the French-speaking Canadians saw it and understood. That is why they now feel the need of combining their interests with those of other Canadians if the sabotage of the nation by a minority of dangerous, reckless, stormy fanatics is to be definitely forestalled.

Shortsighted leaders have been telling the French-speaking Canadians that it was their providential mission to stand aside and isolate themselves within the Dominion. They had in view the creation of a sort of Laboratory State primarily dedicated to the preservation of relics from the Middle Ages. But Quebec's providential mission was found on the 25th of October to be something vastly different. Quebec rejects the theory that North America must be Balkanized by means of the exploitation of racial hatreds and virulent traditions imported from a Europe in full process of national disintegration.

Blind leaders of the blind had hoped to create battlefields here like those of the old continent, so that our peoples might die of ancient nationalisms, might massacre one another across artificial frontiers, might follow demented leaders who proclaim the so-called "everlasting rights" of "thoroughbreds."

The League we are founding will wage merciless war upon obsolete prejudices. It will work unswervingly, courageously and energetically for unity. We are determined that the laws of friendship shall triumph over the laws of hatred, in order that our country, as a North American nation, may be made ready to snatch up, in strong hands, the torch which Old Mars is trying to extinguish in Europe.—J.-Ch. H.—in Le Jour, Montreal.

Galaxy of British And French Stars To Entertain Troops

With the British Expeditionary Force in France, Nov. 4 — (CP-Reuters) — Noel Coward, Seymour Hicks, Jack Buchanan, Maurice Chevalier and Yvonne Printemps are among the galaxy of British and Frenh stars who will probably take part in entertainment for the British troops in France this month. The troops are not yet aware of the treat in store for them, and every effort is being made to keep the show a surprise.

The men of the B.E.F. have been working hard throughout a seven-day week since their arrival in France, and there has not been much chance for organized games. Six-a-side soccer games are being tentatively arranged by certain units. Footballs were brought out by some men.

Eleven journalists representing neutral countries are expected to arrive at general headquarters of the B.E.F. one day next week for a brief tour of the British zone. It is understood the party will consist of four Danes, two Hollanders, three Japanese, one Spaniard and one Pole.

CARELESS DRIVING CHARGE IS LAID

Action Taken Against Edward Richard After Accident in Which Waupoos Man Knocked from Bike and Killed

Picton, Nov. 4 (Special)—A charge of careless driving has been laid against Edward Richards of Waupoos, driver of the car which on Wednesday evening collided with a bicycle ridden by George Stevenson, 46. Stevenson was instantly killed. His funeral was held in Waupoos United Church on Friday and was largely attended. Interment was in Waupoos cemetery.

Mayor Nesbitt McKibbon told of his experiences in England and Scotland during the first week of the present war, at a concert in Cherry Valley hall Friday night. The Mayor stated he had missed sailing on the Athenia only when his accommodation was cancelled. On the trip back to Canada lights on his ship were kept hidden and it was not permissible to smoke on deck at night. Many of the passengers slept during the day and stayed up at night, believing they would have a better chance of escaping if the ship was attacked. A British destroyer, part of their envoy out from England, destroyed a submarine which many passengers saw. He was enthusiastic over the beauties of the British Isles.

Rev. O. R. Flindall was chairman of an excellent old time program. A Cherry Valley group gave a ten minute skit of music and humour. Other items were vocal solos by Mrs. Cecil Lobb, Mrs. Gordon Bell, Rev. O. R. Flindall; reading, Mrs. B. Brooks; vocal duets, Burton and Leonora Pickering, Picton; piano duet, Mrs. E. Berne, Nov. 4 (CP-Havas)—The military correspondent of the Basel Nationalzeitung reported today that efforts are being made by German engineers to lower the level of the Rhine, apparently to prepare the way for an offensive on the upper reaches of the river. The correspondent said that laborers are working feverishly between Mulheim and Waldshut in an attempt to change the course of small rivers which empty into the upper Rhine.

Carmel Couple Honored by Community

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Sullivan was the scene of a delightful gathering on Thursday evening, October 26th., when about one hundred friends and neighbours of Carmel community assembled to pay tribute to Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan in honor of their recent marriage.

Miss Margaret Hicks read an address and the presentation was made of an occasional chair, end table, fern stand and cushion.

Corbyville, Ont.,
October 26, 1939.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Sullivan,

Dear Clayton and Ena,—

It is with great pleasure that we have gathered here tonight to welcome another bride to our community and to wish you both a happy and prosperous life among us, and to congratulate you on this the beginning of your united voyage on the sea of married life. We put forward the hope it will be a long, happy and glorious one packed with those things which make for a fulness of life.

To Ena, we extend the glad hand of welcome, and hope that you may spend many happy years together. While a number of us are not personally acquainted with you as yet, we trust that as time marches on we will be better acquainted and that our friendship will increase.

Clayton, you are well known to all of us as a good fellow, willing to help whenever needed. We are glad you are making your home among us. As you start on another phase of life with its opportunities for doing good, it is well to recall that "Life is a mirror for King or Slave.
'Tis just what you do or say
Give to the world the best you have
And the best will come back to you."

As a slight token of our esteem and good wishes, we ask you to accept these gifts and hope they may serve to remind you of your friends.

Signed on behalf of Carmel Community—Percy Reynolds, Joe Brintnell, Harold Howes, M. Hicks.

Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan graciously thanked their friends for the gifts and for the sentiments expressed in the address.

EMBARGO REPEAL HAILED

Repeal of the arms embargo under the United States neutrality law satisfies the viewpoint of most Americans that the "cash and carry" plan is a safeguard in keeping the United States out of war.

As soon as the bill is signed by the president, belligerents will be able to buy munitions, guns and planes in the United States and huge overseas orders from Britain and France are expected to total over a billion dollars in a few days. The "cash and carry" principle has been adopted with the object of preserving U. S. neutrality and saving U. S. ships from interference on the ocean had they to carry war materials This means that the buyers must take title to their purchases in the United States and take them across the sea.

News from Britain and France is that the Allied Powers hail the passage of the bill as a guarantee of a steady flow of munitions which will greatly increase the effectiveness of the British and French forces. British newspapers have been openly hailing the repeal as an Allied victory and the greatest piece of news in a long time. France regards the vote of the American legislators as of great material and moral importance in the war with Germany.

French comment praised the fairness of the American Congress and speaks of the repeal as consecrating the justice of the Allied cause.

In Britain Supply Minister Burgin of Britain acclaimed the bill as transforming the United States into "an arsenal of unlimited resources" for Britain. Britain will buy machine tools, raw materials, gun steel and ultimately ammunition he said.

Under the embargo Britain and France and Canada and the rest of the British Dominions have been unable to purchase munitions in the United States, while neutral nations could make purchases, if they desired. The repeal makes possible to the allies armaments which were ordered before the war The embargo became effective last May. Millions upon millions of dollars worth of planes and munitions now will be delivered. New orders will pour in according to word from the Old Country and from France. These countries ask but the privilege of buying in the United States and taking delivery there and carrying their purchases home.

The material effect of the change by the passage of the repeal will be shown in the rapid strengthening of the air forces of the Allies and of the fleet and armies with munitions. Germany whose merchant marine has been driven from the sea will henceforth be at a disadvantage.

There is a moral importance in the measure for it can lend a great strength to the spirit of the Allied cause and to the attitude other nations assume towards the Allies. It can fairly be said at the same time that the measure indicates U. S. sympathy with the democratic efforts of France and Britain.

It will be a blow to Germany with her lack of shipping on the seas, and her small ability to purchase considering the strain she has been laboring under for years building up armaments from which has resulted the very war which is now raging and which has upset world conditions.

THE PRIMAL PURPOSE

Defeat the German Government, that is the first aim of Britain, declared Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax speaking of British war aims. "The first purpose we must have is the defeat of those, who by their repeated violation of European order and threats to freedom, obliged us to take up arms."

That is the major issue—Crush Hitlerism.

Other aims include some solution of the armaments problem, the foreign secretary said. Another is the restoration of the confidence which Germany destroyed.

Actually the definition of war aims is not only the question of the British Government but of the Allies and of the Governments of the Dominions. In time the war aims will emerge in greater definition and detail—the terms which would be held to be "fulfilment of the purposes for which we took up arms."

Lord Halifax made it apparent that Britain would not desist from her task until she was convinced "we have secured conditions which so far as is humanly possible may protect the world against repetition of this tragedy."

Naturally it is yet impossible to say in complete detail what final terms may be. As the Foreign Secretary puts it, "I don't think it is possible to be precise as to when and how you may judge that it is to be achieved."

But the aim of defeating the power of the Nazis is foremost.

TRAIL AT NAZIS' HEELS

The "German Freedom Station" which is broadcasting in German messages to the people of Germany has just broadcast a pledge in the name of Hitler's victims in Germany to carry on the fight to the finish of Hitlerism and Nazism and for the liberation of the Reich. An apt occasion was chosen, a religious day, All Saints' Day, for the memorial tribute to all those who have suffered under the Nazi rule. "We shall not rest until they are avenged."

The avenger soon or later catches up with the culprit be he an individual or the head of a state. It is the spirit of freedom which unites all forces against the oppressor and taskmaster.

There is something greater with a whip waiting for the Nazis. It is when their support is broken that the avenger will tap Hitler and his associates on the shoulder and summon them to the tribunal of justice and international law. The judgment of that court will be inexorable.

KIPLING'S WORDS

It is a strange coincidence that the verse which was written years ago by Rudyard Kipling for the war memorial at Sudbury and arrived too late to be cut on the stone is to be chiselled now on two memorial cairns being erected by the Sudbury and Copper Cliff branches of the Canadian Legion, in a day when another war is in progress. They were written for the days of 1914-1918 and will memorialize the dead of the Great War but will also be used as a memorial if any men from Sudbury should die in the present war for there is space left on the rough faces of each cairn for another plaque.

It was fitting that Kipling should be the poet chosen to write these lines—

> "We, giving all, gained all.
> Neither lament nor praise.
> Only, in all things recall,
> It is fear, not death, that slays."

Kipling was one of the men who foresaw the present conflict with Germany. Everyone remembers his words of about four years ago when he spoke of the future and warned about the signs in Europe of rearmament.

Kipling was a loyal farseeing citizen of the Empire, who knew the price of liberty and the cost of its preservation.

Kipling in verse and story will always be remembered and such a quatrain as he wrote for the Sudbury memorials will be treasured. The words were written in the poet's and writer's old age, and they show all the condensation of thought and passion in twenty-two words.

RATIONING

While Britain is to begin rationing of butter and bacon in the middle of December, it may not be fully applied then, according to official news. The British rations will concern only butter and bacon. Now bacon is one of the staples of the breakfast in the British Isles and four ounces per person a week will be allowed. Butter too has been set for four ounces per person a week.

But the German has a much stricter rationing. He gets as much butter but he is also rationed on meat (sixteen ounces) which is not rationed in Britain, he gets 8 ounces of fats and six pounds of bread which are not rationed in England and besides the German's bacon is included in his meat, butter and fats. There will be no rationing of sugar in England. In Germany the sugar is rationed at half a pound per person per week.

The Britisher's meat will probably never be rationed. Food Minister Morrison says that half of the consumption must be imported and that adequate supplies should continue. "Supplies in sight for the future are ample to meet all reasonable requirements both for the services and the civilian population", he notes.

The Minister has made one appeal which will be closely followed. There is to be no waste of food. Britishers will not need much admonition in this particular.

From Lower Deck to Admiral Rank is Hard Rugged Climb

By JACK BRAYLEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Portsmouth, England, Nov. 4 (CP)—Working on the theory every sailor has an admiral's cocked-hat in his kit-bag, the Admiralty is selecting lower deck men for commissions and thus have revived the ancient and honorable status of "upper-yard men".

In the days of Nelson the "upper-yard men" were the select band who handled the difficult job of tending the canvas on the highest spars. This called for special talent and lots of pluck. Sailors in this rank were a privileged company.

Nowadays the "upper-yard men" are the specially bright sailors who seem good officer prospects. They are hand-picked and sent to a depot where they begin the long climb to the admiral's deck. Just now, 47 of them, chosen from the whole fleet, are taking their course here. This course lasts nine months.

Here is how the selection is made: First the sailor has to obtain a recommendation from his commanding officer. Then when he is any age from 19 to 23 he goes before a board of senior officers who pass him on to the school at Portsmouth where he learns not only seamanship and technical knowledge, but is taught to lead and command.

Have Second Chance.

After they have passed a stiff examination, candidates face a final board of an admiral and two captains who go through his records and talk to him. Successful candidates are recommended to the Admiralty for a commission.

Those who do not immediately make the grade become warrant officers with yet another chance of becoming officers in two years.

The plan has been in operation three years. Seventeen passed in the first year and last year the number was increased to 24. The rate of failure is two in ten.

A typical day at the school will find some poring over abstruse books on navigation in their schoolrooms, while others, out on the barrack square, are drilling newly-joined men from the Royal Naval Reserve.

The naval correspondent of the Manchester Guardian recalls that pormotion to commissioned rank, on which Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, recently made a statement in the House of Commons, has always been one of Mr. Churchill's pet schemes for the navy. Twenty-seven years ago he introduced the original "mate" scheme, under which the way was open for the "boy, first class' to become an admiral.

It worked fairly well, says The Guardian correspondent, and there are today on active service three men who have reached the rank of captain—the anteroom, as it were, to admiral's rank—from the lower deck.

Ottawa, Nov. 4 (CP)—The Ottawa Trades and Labor Association last night passed a resolution deploring the action of 75 United Church ministers in issuing a manifesto against Canadian participation in the war. The motion, deploring the manifesto as "untimely" will be sent to the Ontario Attorney-General's Department.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Why the Body Needs Much Water

It is generally agreed that the majority of us do not drink enough water or enough of the foods containing large quantities of water such as leafy vegetables which are over 90 per cent water.

That we need a lot of water to flush out the kidneys and make the wastes in the bowel more liquid is true, but this is not the only need of water by the body. Not only do the kidneys and the intestine need water but every tissue, every tiny cell, must have a good supply. As mentioned before, every tiny body cell is like a tiny fish; it needs water in order to do its daily work, that is to take nourishing substances from, and give waste substances to, the blood.

I have spoken before of the heavyweight wrestler who lost 7 to 10 pound of weight in an hour's bout, who always made sure of getting this weight back for the following night (within 24 hours) by drinking water and eating foods containing large amounts of water.

After a surgical operation where considerable blood has been lost, or where the individual has had a number of vomiting spells or a persistent diarrhoea in which much water has been lost from the body, physicians advise the drinking of large amounts of water and the injecting of fluids—salt solution—into the veins of that the blood will be fluid enough to flow more freely and gather up and remove wastes from the tissues. As these tissues have been without enough water to do their work properly, the building up and tearing down processes of the body are being carried on at too slow a rate to maintain health.

Water is needed to keep the blood pressure up to normal, because the more blood or fluid that is in the vessels, the more pressure must be given by the muscular walls of the vessels to push the blood onward. This pressure sends the blood to the farthest parts of the body to nourish these parts and remove their wastes.

The only healthy individuals who do not need to drink much water or eat foods containing much water are those who are overweight. Nature likes to store fat in them, and fat holds water like a sponge. As these overweights thus have more water in their tissues than they need, they can get along with very small quantities of water or other liquids. The water stored in their fat can thus be used for the body's needs and that much weight is thus lost.

Algoma Weather Prophet Has a Word of Cheer

Bert Overland, whose predictions in regard to last Winter's and last Spring's weather turned out to be correct, has been giving some consideration to the prospects for the coming Winter.

Bert bases his prophecies on the action of the bush animals and the birds of Algoma as he sees them. Last Fall, for instance, his observation was the beaver and the squirrels were laying up unusually large stores of food. So he ventured the suggestion that the Winter would be severe, with lots of snow, and that Spring would be late. He turned out to be right.

This Fall, however, his observation leads him to believe that neither the beaver nor the squirrels are putting by such large stores as they did a year ago. So his view is that there will not be so much snow during the coming Winter and that Spring will arrive much earlier in 1940 than it did in 1939.

He adds another prophecy and that is that it will be a Winter characterized by high winds.

And what is his reason for that?

Well, says Bert, he has noticed that the ravens have built their nests 20 to 40 feet lower down than ordinarily and he takes that as a sign that they are anxious to avoid the tree tops and the hill tops during winds which they are sure will blow.

Our special research department intends to keep close check on developments—at such times as it can leave the Allied generals alone to conduct military matters.—Sault St. Marie Star.

Storing Vegetables For Winter Use

The essential points in the successful storage of vegetables are favorable temperature, good ventilation and sound well-matured crop. The proper storage temperature varies somewhat for the different vegetables, but generally speaking it should be low enough to prevent growth of the vegetables and also the fungi and bacteria which may cause decay. Root crops and cabbage keep best between 34 degrees and 40 degrees and will withstand a slight amount of dampness. Pumpkin, squash and onions should be stored in a dry place and will keep well at temperatures up to 45 degrees.

Free circulation of air is essential to carry off the accumulated moisture given off by the stored vegetables. Ventilators should be left open as long as possible during early winter. Only sound, well matured vegetables should be expected to keep well in storage.

The use of fine sand will aid materially in the successful storage of such roots as beets, carrots and parsnips. If the storage cellar is inclined to be damp, dry sand should be used, but if the storage room is dry, very slightly dampened sand should be used.

If only a few cabbages are to be stored they can be suspended by the roots. If the quantity is large the cabbages can be piled, preferably on slatted shelves. Some of the outer leaves should be left on to prevent the heads from touching. Turnips (Swedes) can be piled in bulk like potatoes, or may be stored in soil. Onions should be thoroughly dried before being stored in a dry place. Pumpkins, squash and vegetable marrow should have the stems left on and require a dry location.—Dominion Department of Agriculture.

THE RUNAWAY

by

Kathleen Norris

But it only mattered to Becky that she was with Gavin again, that he needed her, that he needed her, that she could help him. After a while she fell into a light sleep.

She was awekened by his hoarse cawing call 'Becky!' He was awake and in temporary possession of his sense. Drugged with sleep, cold, bewildered, frightened, she stumbled about the routine again. Ice, and a tablet in water, and the pillow shaken....

"Becky?" he asked in a puzzled whisper. For some reason she could not define, she felt the tears press into her eyes. "What time is it?" the thick lips managed to say.

She looked at her wrist. "Quarter to twelve ." Her hand went down to his pajamas collar; it was saturated, and she saw now that the thick hair on his forehead was matted with water. She ran from the room, met the landlady coming downstairs.

"I thought I heard you talkin'," Daisy Kimpaw said. "It's broken has it? I'll see if Heimie's up."

That was the beginning. A few days followed in which Becky lived in a nightmare of fatigue, anxiety, smells, strange duties, exhausting efforts. Then the crisis came, after the fever was gone, and Gavin sank sank with unutterable weakness into what looked like death.

That afternoon, a bleak November afternoon at about five o'clock, he and Rebecca were married at his bedside. He had whispered that he would be happier that way, and, like a woman of stone moving through a dream, she had made what sudden arrangements she could, had gotten a gentle old clergyman's co-operation, had secured a special license.

So now they were married, and during that evening she sat watching him, expecting that every weak breath would be the forerunner of last breathing. He would go easily, the doctor said, not the usual pneumonia death, and when he died she must telephone this number and the boys would come for him at once. "But looky," kind old Greer had added, "he isn't dead yet, and don't forget it. He's got plenty of fight in him."

"Shall I go on with the milk?"

"Oh, sure, every hour, if he'll take it."

And as the hours went by and the milk went down, and the thin sunken, shaved face took on, she thought, a more peaceful look, the breathing grew just a shade stronger. When Mrs. Kinpay came in they consulted in whispers.

"He don't look any weaker."

"I think he's stronger."

Suddenly there was a third voice in the room, a hoarse weak voice with a shred of broken laughter in it. "Sure he's stronger!" How about abeesteak?"

She went, trying not to laugh, trying not to cry, to the bedside and knelt down, and laid her face against his. Gavin had shut his eyes, the sweat that even the little effort to speak had cost him glistening on his forehead. His hand groped weakly for hers.

"Who's this?" he breathed. "My wife?" And they cried together.

After that he had to be patient, to be quiet and obedient. She could talk to him, but not of plans or worries, not of anything exciting. If he tried to question her or thank her the tears came too fast and, laughing at them angrily, he had to stop.

So they talked of indifferent matters, and Heimie came in and shaved him every other day, and Becky heated milk and malted milk and milk with coffee in it, and soup that was half milk. She went out to market, read him newspapers, played games of dominoes with him, took her hour off for lunch and supper. There were scores of nice little places in the neighborhood where she could eat hamburgers or sausages, Italian cafes where there were minestrone and gnocchi, clean little dairies that served famous waffles and bowls of hot cereal.

On the eighth day after her arrival, which seemed the eightieth day at least, they quite suddenly went to a private hospital out on the Panhandle, facing the long strip of Golden Gate Park that led to Stanyan street. The hospital was managed by a warmhearted, noisy, flamboyant woman named Laura Tevers. Laura came flying into the Gavin's dismal sickroom at Mrs. Kinpaw's on the eighth day, and within an hour the feeble Gavin, Rebecca and their bags and boxes were on their way to Laura's house.

It was a large, handsome, wooden house, rather like Laura herself, with swelling bays and a white trim on clean gray paint. It was full, all but one room, but that one room happened to be the best of all, the first-storey room with a bath behind it and a diet kitchen beyond the bath. All were nicely furnished, enormous in size and spotlessly clean. As for pay, "Oh, for heaven's sake," Laura said, "Let that wait!"

She had only chanced to hear that day of Gavin's wretched plight. For heaven's sake why hadn't he come straight to her? She wasn't supposed to take any contagious cases, but she would have taken him. And married, for heaven's sake! Well, his girl must have a sweet impression of married life!

If only physically, the escape from the squalor, the musty odors, the scent of incense, the filthy curtains, the incessant radio and the soiled blankets of Mrs. Kinpaw's establishment was an unspeakable relief to Becky. It was wonderful to spread out in the old-fashioned spaciousness of Laura's house.

Anice stout nurse brought up a tray of "soft foods" for Gavin at half-past five; other trays were moving through the wide halls. Gavin went off to sleep, exhausted and clean and content, and Becky sat in a comfortable big chair at her bay window and looked out at the fresh green of the park and felt herself breathe freely for the first time since her arrival in the city.

But there were other than physical aspects in life, as she was painfully beginning to discover, and many of them presented themselves to her in this first hour of real rest and reflection, and filled her with misgivings.

In the first place, Gavin. She was puzzled and distressed about Gavin.

INSTALMENT 8

Gavin never should have been in a loathesome den like the Kinpaw place at all. Rooming with another man in a gloomy back parlor, unattended in what might so easily have been his last illness! What was he like, this husband of hers? He had said nothing about money. She had paid thirty-three dollars to Mrs. Kinpaw; she had bought soups and drugs, paid for her own meals, for blankets and hot-water bottles and sheets. Her previous savings had gone down below four hundred dollars now. Dr. Greer, dismissing Gavin today, had lingered in the hall to say suggestively, "Now the bill, Mrs. Flood. Do you want to pay that now or later?" and she had unhesitatingly paid it. Forty dollars flat. That was perhaps to be expected, but Gavin's languid, "Dismissed, eh? Did you pay him?" his quiet acceptance of the fact that she had, these things disturbed her.

Laura had disturbed her. Laura was forty-five, pretty in a dyed, flashy sort of way, her eyelashes dripping black oil and her breath, even at five o'clock in the afternoon, scented with liquor. And while Laura's house was imposing and clean, her talk was odd for the superintendent of a hospital. Laura talked races and roulette, and of a lawsuit between a man and his wife in which she was involved, and she urged a cocktail upon Rebecca before dinner, saying that she had been through a lot and it would buck her up.

Well, there was no crime in cocktails or lawsuits or roulette or races, and the great thing was that Gavin was safely housed and happy. Also at dinner Becky felt reassured somewhat by the presence of a few of such of the patients as could move about. A nice gentle old man who had once managed the Lockerwells' track, and whose talk was wistfully of old track triumphs and old winners; a Swiss gentleman, almost blind, waiting for an operation for cataract; a nervous young woman who instantly told Rebecca that it was a "joke" her being there. She was going home as soon as she heard from her guardian. She had been there, Rebecca learned later, four years, and there were bars on her windows and a lock on her door.

"She'll yell tonight," said the nurse, Mrs. Battock, as she coldcreamed her face in Rebecca's bathroom and enjoyed a confidential chat before going to bed. She reported that Mrs. Tevers was asleep. "If you want to call it sleep," said Emma Battock significantly. "She's lying right across her bed with her clothes on. She'll get up, around eleven, and go downtown and make a night of it."

Rebecca, cold-creaming her own face, turned horrified eyes from the mirror.

"Does she....?" She left the sentence unfinished.

"Sure she does," the nurse said. said. "Couldn't you smell it? She's a smart woman, Mrs. Tevers is. She could make an awful lot of money out of this place, because she's got three big doctors pulling for her—you know what I mean? They've known her for years, and they like her. But she won't be up until ten o'clock tomorrow. Then she'll do everything. I tell you she's smart. She can cook invalid food so that they like it better than regular food, and she babies them all—brings them back puzzles and marshmallows and the favors she gets at night clubs. But if that girl isn't in d.t.s. before she's much older I miss my guess. I'm fond of her," the nurse said, now putting her short hair into crimpers. "But I tell you I'm pretty sick of it. I'm a widow with one of the loveliest girls you ever saw; she's eleven. Jacky, we call her. I'm going to quit here and do something where I can have Jacky with me. I'm sick of never knowing how she's going to be, from one day to the other. I haven't had any money for two months. She hasn't paid the cook for seven and Rollie told Laura right out she was going to sue her."

As she listened to all this Rebecca's heart sank—sank. It took her some days to ask the question she had wanted to ask immediately.

"Mrs. Battock, do you know what Mr. Tevers charges for our room?"

The answer stunned her. "Forty" said Emma Battock readily. "But she may shave it a little for him. She thinks the world and all of him. But then there'd be your meals extra; that's one-fifty a day. Call it forty a week."

"Forty a week." Rebecca gulped. Forty a week! With Gavin still sublimely indifferent to all practical details, never questioning anything! On the contrary he sent out for flowers, asked Becky to bring home a quart of champagne to celebrate his recovery. "We'll ask Laura up to have some," he said.

"I wonder what we'll do when my money is spent, I wonder what we'll do?" Becky repeated in her soul, over and over again.

Rebecca had not become used to having herself addressed as "Mrs. Flood." Even to Gavin, lazy and languid in convalescence, the name sounded unfamiliar.

"So we were married, eh?"

"You remember it, Gavin?"

"Sure. I remember something. Old feller with a beard—"

"The minister, yes. They thought you were dying; in fact Doctor Greer said you were. And you thought so. You whispered to me that you'd die happier if we were married."

"Don't remember that. That was the day I was going down into a well, and coming up again, and resting awhile, and then going down, down, down into blackness again. But each time I'd make that little jerk that started me up. But I remember you crying and saying, 'We're married now, Gavin. We're together now forever!'"

It hurt her to hear him piece together in his careless way the memories which were so sacred to her. It made her feel that she had been hysterical and hasty in deciding upon this dramatic marriage that was no marriage. He was looking on at the scene like an outsider; her money was slipping away during these days when he was so blandly unconscious of money's existence at all.

At the end of the week she paid Laura forty-seven dollars, Laura writing a businesslike receipt, and suggesting that Rebecca make a little present to Rollie, the colored cook, and "get a little something" for Emma, Rebecca seized this opportunity to introduce the subject of money obliquely to Gavin.

"Give her two dollars," said Gavin, and apparently thought no more of it. Rebecca gave Rollie two dollars and bought an embroidered collar for Mrs. Battock to give Jacky.

Laura saw to it that Gavin had a generous supply of supplementary delicacies and, he grew stronger hourly. Rebecca heard him laugh again.

Suddenly there came one more change to add itself to the many that had stunned her ever since her arrival in the city. On the morning that found them beginning their third week at Laura's house Rebecca, who slept on a couch near the bay windows, awakened at eight o'clock to see Gavin smiling at her over his breakfast tray. He had been getting up and getting dressed for a day or two now, sitting for hours in the winter sunshine of the window. But this morning, even though he was still established against heaped pillows in bed, there was a vitality, an energy, a naturalness about him that she had not seen since the long-ago days in Salletts.

"Hello, wife!" said Gavin, "What a sleep you've had! Nothing waked you up. I've had a bath and a shave, and the only reason I didn't dress was that you've hid my clothes! Come over here and see me."

She came over, tousled and red-cheeked as a child, in her woolly striped pajamas.

"Gosh, you're pretty, Beck!" he said. And something that had been lacking in these dreary weeks came suddenly back into her life, sang in her soul and ran warm in her veins. The touch of his hand as he laid it over hers was electrifying. They laughed into each other's eyes. "You've had a swell party, haven't you?" he asked. Rebecca, looking at him to laugh, found her eyes brimming instead and turned away her head.

"Oh well," she said thickly .

"Well, how about house-hunting today?" he asked briskly. "We've got to live somewhere. There's a new hotel on Geary street where a friend of mine had a swell little place—kitchen and everything! You pay by the week; I think it's twenty-two fifty or something like that a week. You get dressed and go down and have your coffee, and I'll be ready by that time, and we'll get a taxi. And say, listen—say, listen," Gavin diverged, catching at her hand, drawing her back to a sitting position on the bed, "have you been paying for all this? What'd you want to do that for? How much is it? Where'd you get it?"

The blood came back into her heart. The winter day sang with the joy of reassurance and confidence restored. It wasn't the money that had mattered as it must always matter when it was a question of everything going out and nothing coming in. But Becky's delight went deeper. It was because she had her man back again, vital and affectionate and willing to assume responsibility, because he was beginning to understand at last, at last, what she had done for him, because life was coming around into its right grooves. She was young and in love, and married in name to the man she loved, and to be his at last as he was hers!

"Look here," Gavin said. "I've been trying to say this for days, but damn it, every time I started I got crying! It was enough for you to make beds and heat milk and sleep on that thing Daisy Kinpaw called a couch. You didn't have to dig down into your bank roll as well. I've got it. I thought in a hazy kind of way, that Phipps had looked out for all that— that you were drawing on my money. Now Laura tells me you've paid up on the nail—why, my lord, nobody every pays up here, not for weeks and weeks! You crazy little nut, you!"

"Who's Phipps?" she asked on a shaken laugh.

"Phipps is the fellow I was having dinner with when all of a sudden the damn thing—the flu — hit me," Gavin said. I'd been feeling cold and hot and achy all afternoon, but all of a sudden I flopped over on the table. Well, Phipps—mind you, I'd only met him that day to talk business! — took me to his place, the Kinpaw place. She runs a lot of chorus girls and near-actresses, that sort of thing, but she's his pal's aunt, and she took him in. That's why I had the couch; I thought I'd only be there overnight and go off all right in the morning, but I was in for it. I don't remember anything else much, except fighting them on the hospital thing."

Pearls in Your Smile

By HELEN FOLLETT

BEAUTIFUL, White, highly-polished teeth are an important detail of good looks. Sometimes sound teeth are hereditary, like abundant tresses and clear complexions. Just why cavities form the dental profession has not been able to determine. It may be that an excess of sweet and starchy foods, subject to putrefactive changes wrought by the presence of bacteria in the mouth, is a factor. That is why the teeth should be brushed after each meal and at bedtime.

Tartar can cause trouble. It forms hard, scaly masses around the bases of the teeth, pushes up under the gums, making tiny wounds that are subject to infection. Even though brushing is done faithfully, these barnacles may form. Twice a year a visit to the dentist is advised. He will use his murderous little knives and pickaxes to dig away the foreign substance.

Diet may have something to do with sound teeth; certainly hard food is better than soft, because it gives the teeth work to do, stirs up circulation in the gums. Raw vegetables and bread crusts should be eaten each day. Extremes of heat and cold will disturb teeth that are naturally fragile.

When brushing the pearly biters, be careful not to push the gums away from them. Use a small brush with grouped bristles; move it in small circles.

Though commercial blushes are not so much the mode anymore, they make a pale woman look cheerful, her face more vivid. We can't abolish the rouge pad altogether, although if there is any natural coloring, it is senseless to resort to the rosy pigment.

emphasize her attractive smile.

Place the coloring matter high, starting under the inner corner of the eye. Sweep outward, lifting the line at the temple and include the eyelid. Then, watching the effect carefully in the mirror, fill in the space below. Rosiness around the eyes makes the soul bulbs luminous.

When rouge is placed low, it is likely to give one a dragged-out look. Also, it gives greater width to the jaws, which no woman in her right mind want. The oval contour is the pretty one.

Help for the Boy Who is Not Liked

By Garry C. Myers, Ph.D.

As I read the following letter I was depressed, and felt sorry for the child and for his mother. There are so many little sufferers like this child. Their suffering could have been prevented, even now can be reduced. The longer the problem grows, of course, the harder its solution. But it is never too late.

"Dear Dr. Myers—I just feel I have to write and ask your advice. I have a little boy, eight years old. He just came home and said, 'Mother, I could just die.' I asked him why. 'Well, no one likes me. Everywhere I go the boys will walk away from me.' And it is true. They will come over, get his toys and take them to their house and play with them, but not him. Or, if they are playing a game and he goes over, it breaks up immediately.

Same at School

"At school it is the same. He is a very bright child, his teachers say. Older people like him but children do not, and this is funny, for before he could walk good the little boys would get him in a corner and pound him.

"Now, of course, that part seems to be over, but I hate for him to grow up with the idea that no one likes him.

"I have five children. The oldest boy was like this until he grew up; then he seemed to have plenty of friends. The other three didn't seem to have this trouble. They are all grown up but this one and it seems a lonely life for a child. Please advise if something can be done."

It was not easy to advise this mother by mail. I should like to talk to her and ask her what she says when he tells her of his woes; how she acts toward the children who abuse her boy; whether she makes other children welcome in her home.

The chances are that she has over-protected him, commanded him not to play with certain other children of the neighborhood, and tried to change the other children rather than to encourage her boy to get into the rough and tumble and defend himself.

I suggested that she find someone to give this boy boxing lessons so he might feel more secure when attacked, and to hire an older child to teach him some of the play skills, such as catching and throwing a ball.

How Do You "Say it With Flowers"?

The flowers you give and the flower you wear reflect your spirit as clearly and revealingly as your mirror reflects your face. If you are a sensitive, harmonious person, one who has the gracious power of seeing deep into the heart of things, you will inevitably express this vision in your contact with flowers. On the other hand, there is the person who orders flowers because they are so much a dozen, not because they will carry an especially personal and especially graceful message.

"A blossom is an introduction", sang that understanding lover of gardens, Emily Dickinson, beloved American poet. When you say it with flowers, how do you introduce yourself? What taste do you show? Have you the art of making the flowers that you send the speaking symbols of the emotion you wish to interpret? When you visualize the receiver opening the box of flowers and saying "How like her! or "How like him!" can you be sure of the tone of voice with which this is said?

Every step in the pageant of life is associated with the beauty and infinite variety of flowers. When the baby comes, we felicitate the mother with flowers, and welcome the baby with tiny posies. When the small daughter steps out into the world on her first day of school, we often put into her little hand a charming bouquet with which she is to make her bow to Teacher. First parties are made festive with delicate flowers. The milestones of graduation, from grammar school, high school, finishing school and college, are greeted with youthful flowers. Precious flower-memories dot the years. And then that climax of all flower-sentiments—the white-blossomed bridal bouquet that the bridegroom sends to his bride.

And so the pageant progresses. . . Easter with its flowers symbolic of new life, Christmas with its gaily-colored flowers and plants, Mother's Day, Father's Day, anniversaries, accomplishments that call for congratulations, the shadowed days of friends in sickness and in sorrow, on to the solemn messengers of memorial friendship.

Given this broad and diversified opportunity to show with flowers every relationship, every shade of feeling, between giver and receiver, it would seem a generous way of it woulld seem a generous way of showing our appreciation to the Kind Power who gave us this gift by making ourselves artists in using it.

"Immediate Family"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I am to be married and I am writing to ask you if a dinner to include my immediate family (following the ceremony) should include my married sister and her family, also my sister's fiance and my brother's fiancee.

Another Reader

The dinner that you are planning to give after your wedding should, most definitely, include your married sister and her husband. Since they are members of your immediate family it would be unkind not to include them in the family dinner party.

And, since your sister's fiance and your brother's fiancee are to all intents, practically members of your immediate family, they too should be included in your invitation. Even if you have to cut corners of your budget, you should, in some way, make it possible to extend these invitations. Then everybody will be happy!

It is not necessary for a hostess to introduce a departing guest to an arriving guest.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

She's Too Sure of This Young Man

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Not to hand a bouquet to myself I've been self-supporting since the age of 9, have no bad habits and a fair job. Also have a good car. Well, the girl and I have been going together for a year and a half, when she decided to visit her family half way across the continent. And wrote back that she was engaged and the wedding date set. I sent her a wedding present and a letter full of good wishes.

In about three months, she came back unmarried and we took up our friendship where she had left it off. Then she wrote and told me she was going to marry a different fellow and for me not to write or come and see her any more.

Still she hasn't married this second man, and I believe they have been broken up too. She hasn't answered this question.

We've never argued about anything and have had wonderful times together. What do you think is the matter with this young lady?

Texas

There are some people who can't stand being treated too well. They thrive on snubs, quarrels, recriminations and general unpleasantnesses. If you should go back to this girl, and it looks a bit risky for you happiness, you take the reins in hand and do the driving. This changeable girl will probably appreciate you more.

She Can't Forget Him

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I read your column every day and have found many helpful solutions to some of my own problems. I'm in love with a boy who is very nice to me, but treats other girls better. I've tried to forget him because of this, but it seem impossible. Please tell me how to gain his love.

M. R.

"Blessings brighten as they take their flight," as a poet tells us. If the young man is nicer to other girls than to you, probably he's too sure of you. Perhaps you've spoiled him by allowing him to break dates with you, and things like that. Show a little independence of character. Men don't like to lose "adoring angels".

But when there are so many nice young men to be held, I often wonder why it is that girls want to hold on to men who give them only secondary consideration. In your place, my dear, I'd shuffle the cards and cut for a new deal.

Married But Still the Breadwinner

Dear Miss Fairfax

I'm writing to relieve my feelings, but they are beyond the power of pen and ink to relieve. I'm still in my twenties, and have been married three years. When I married I hoped to have a happy home and children, but am unable to give up my position, which I have held for fourteen years.

My husband has not been able to make a living for us though he seem to try and try hard. I am always in debt, as my salary is too small to cover expenses for two. I feel I'd just as soon be single as be married and have no children, though I'm fond of my husban. But I'm the maternal type.

Nettie

As you are not yet out of the twenties, perhaps your husband may still earn enough support you both and put something aside for the stork as well. After looking into many of these cases where a man seems incapable of maintaining a home for himself and his wife, I've come to the conclusion that they lack training in the job they set out to do.

Wouldn't it be well if such men took a little more training in night school. Bookkeepers who just got by could become experts. Secretaries could improve their shorthand. Not only the professions but the trades can be learned after the drudging hours by application.

A young man of my acquaintance who made next to nothing as an odd job man, learned the art of sign-painting, from a training class and from books borrowed from the Public Library. He now makes $150 a month and has to have an assistant. So many men lack push.

Q. When would you have a child begin to eat with the family?

A. About as soon as he could feed himself, if the rest of the family did not pay too much attention to him.

The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, November 5

SUNDAY'S horoscope is a most propitious one for affairs of the church, clerics and all mystical or spiritual pursuits or avocations. It is a favorable time for deep study of the obscure, occult or psychological aspects of human development. Social matters are interesting but subject to disruption or inharmony.

Those whose birthday it is face a year of splendid opportunity for gaining steady headway through application, industry and sound judgment. However, there may be sudden changes or upsets, perhaps in the social life, demanding perseverance and patience.

A child born on this day may be steady, studious and methodical despite some erratic, restive and impetuous moods.

For Monday, November 6

MONDAY'S astrological forecast bears testimonies of rather conflicting interests with the attention centered on the affectional, social or festive activities, to the neglect of business. This overnight might cause legal complications, trouble involving signatures or some other irregularity.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of lively social or romantic interest, with courtship, marriage or other convivial celebrations claiming paramount attention. But be wary of affixing the signature carelessly to documents or writings, as fraud and misunderstandings menace.

A child born on this day may be generous, congenial, popular and devoted to romantic or social life rather than business, in which it may be slack or lacking in dependability.

Presentations

On Monday evening, October 30, over one hundred friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Kincaid in honour of Mr. and Mrs. Sid Woodward, (nee Hazel Kincaid), who were recently married and presented them with a miscellaneous shower, including silver, pyrex, linen and chinaware. The crowd was called to order and Mrs. Arthur Bates, (nee Annie Carleton), a former school teacher and local girl, read the following address:

Moneymore, Ont., Oct. 30, 1939.
Dear Hazel and Sid:—

It is with great pleasure that we your relatives, friends and neighbors, have gathered here this evening to honour this great event of your marriage and to extend our best wishes on this happy occasion.

You Hazel, have been with us since childhood and we have always found you to be a good sport, and ready to assist in anyway whenever the occasion demanded it. At various intervals you have been absent from us but you have won our love and affection by your sterling qualities and cheerful disposition. We may be sure that your hearty laugh and cheery smile will bring happiness to you both as the years go by.

To you Sid, although a stranger to some of us, we extend our congratulations on your choice of a life partner and we welcome you to this gathering tonight. It is our earnest hope and sincere wish that God's richest blessings will fill your home as Edgar A. Guest says:

Side by side you'll reap life's pleasures
Side by side you'll shed life's tears
'Tis a long road you'll be faring
For I've travelled half the way.
But if love and faith sustain you
You will triumph, come what may.

We are sorry that you will not be living among us, but we know that you will have many friends in your new home. As a token of our esteem and friendship we ask you to accept these gifts and remember chiefly the hopes and wishes that lie behind them. We hope that you will use them in your everyday life and may they remind you of the pleasant relationships and old friends of Moneymore.

Signed on behalf of the community:

LEWIS CUMMINS
ALEX FRASER
NORMAN HORTON.

The bride and groom very graciously thanked their many friends for the lovely gifts and invited all to visit them in their new home. They all joined in in singing "For They are Jolly Good Fellows."

About sixty friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Woods, Sidney, in honor of their son Gordon and his wife recently. The evening was spent in music and singing, contests, and other amusement of which all took part and a very enjoyable time was spent after which the pastor Rev. Scott called the people to order and asked the bride and groom to be seated. Mr. Farley Vermilyea read the following address:

Dear Gordon and Alma,—

As one of the happiest events in your life has just occurred we, your neighbors and friends are gathered here this evening to express to you our very best wishes for a life's matrimonial sea, you undoubtedly will encounter a great many difficulties and to weather a few storms in life. But we trust that Jesus may be your Captain.

We are glad to welcome you, Alma, to our community, and are glad that you both are taking up your abode in our midst. We trust that you may find your place of usefulness in both church and community.

In wishing you a happy and successful voyage, we are not content in simply saying so, but we wish to express it in some tangible way.

We are therefore asking you to accept these gifts not for their intrinsic value but the good wishes which accompany them. As you partake of the necessities of life may these knives and forks be constant reminders of the high esteem in which you are held and with little alarm clock goes our sincere wishes that as it ticks away the hours that they may be filled with happiness and prosperity.

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbors, Hugh Gray, Everett Phillips, Edward Eaton, George Reid.

Gordon and Alma thanked their friends for their kindness and invited them all to visit them in their new home. For they are jolly good fellows was sung after which a very delightful lunch was served and all wended their way home about midnight.

HOLLOWAY ST. W.M.S.

On Wednesday afternoon, the home of Mrs. S. P. Hagerman, 117 Bridge Street West, was very cherry with yellow 'mums and other flowers for the regular monthly meeting of the W.M.S.

The meeting was opened with Hymn 443, followed by the reports of the various secretaries and general business. The devotional period was taken by Mrs. Walters. Mrs. Maybee led in prayer. A solo "O eyes that are Weary" by Mrs. Farnham was much appreciated. The Scripture reading was taken by Mrs. Oliphant.

Mrs. Cordes than introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. McClintock, who took as her topic "Jesus after His Baptism and Public Profession". She gave a very encouraging and enlightening talk making everyday duties seem worthwhile. She summed it all up in the following lines "Life is worth living aye with the whole of us, will of us, brain of us, senses and soul of us; aye with the whole of us, the heights of us, depths of us; life is the test of us". A social half hour followed.

Purchase of Milk and its Products An Investment for Good Health

A few years ago a great deal of stress was placed on the richness of the milk. Today we have different ideas. We have begun to realize that the real value of milk lies not above the cream line, but below it. After all, cream is only fat, and we can get this from many foods. But the calcium and the proteins and other components in milk aren't picked up so easily by the body in other diets.

One of the common errors in diet today is an insufficiency of calcium. If we used more milk, we wouldn't have this trouble. Calcium is the material used by the body to manufacture bones and teeth and to repair them as the tissues break down. Growing children, therefore, need more milk than adults, every adult should have at least a pint a day to keep teeth and bones in good repair.

It has been estimated that a child of nine years need a pint a day to provide two-thirds of the calcium requirements of his body. From then on the amount he needs goes up steadily until at the age of 16 he should be getting a quart. Then as the growth decreases, the need for calcium decreases, until, at the age of about 24, the minimum amount is set at a third of a quart—about two-thirds of a pint. Remember, this only supplies two-thirds of the body's need for calcium. The rest must be picked up elsewhere. Just to be safe I always recommend a quart for children, a pint for adults.

One of the arguments in favor of the irradiated milk we were talking about yesterday is that the vitmin D thus supplied to the milk teams up with the calcium for the benefit of the body.

Science has discovered that very often when calcium is given a person, it isn't absorbed by the body at all. Further research showed that calcium can be absorbed by the human system only when it can combine with vitamin D. As I explained, milk in the natural state hasn't a great deal of vitamin D, but after being irradiated it contains enough so that the body can make full use of the calcium in the milk.

If you haven't irradiated milk at hand, cod-liver oil added to the diet will accomplish the same purpose. The vitamin combines with calcium in milk as well as other foods to strengthen bones and teeth.

The Dionne Quintuplets get cod-liver oil every days of their lives, winter and summer. Also, they drink irradiated milk, so we are always sure that they get plenty of the "sunshine" vitamin, as it is called.

Let me repeat: it isn't necessary to drink all your milk. A lot of it can be used in cooking; you can get it in butter and in cheeses.

I guess one of the largest expenditures we have in our nursery is for milk, cheese and butter. But we don't look on it as an expenditure. We think it is one of the best investments we could possibly make.

AT THE BELLE

"Thunder Afloat"

Surpassing in sea thrills even the magnificient schooner sequences of "Captains Courageous," hitherto considered "tops" of their kind, "Thunder Afloat," now on the Belle Theatre screen, as an epic story of naval courage, starring Wallace Beery in one of the most thoroughly satisfying characterizations he has ever enjoyed.

As the tugboat captain who joins the navy and wants to fight the war single-handed after an enemy submarine has sunk his craft, Beery is at his blustering best. The role is not all bravado, however. It permits him to prove himself the versatile veteran that he is, schooled in every art of the screen. Chester Morris, as Beery's bitter tugboat rival, is effectively convincing, while Virginia Grey, winning her most important opportunity to date as Beery's daughter, asks odds of no one in ability.

A most effective menace, because of the restraint in characterization of a part which might easily have been a typical melodramatic heavy, is Carl Esmond as the U-boat commander. Others who lent brilliance to individual featured bits are Regis Toomey as Beery's second in command, John Qualen as his mate, Clem Bevans as a veteran of Manila Bay, Douglas Dumbrille as the district commandant, Jonathan Hale as Admiral Girard, Charles Lane and Phillip Terry as naval officers.

The action thrills, filmed at sea of the Atlantic coast with the remnant of the subchaser fleet of World War days, and off the Coronade Islands on the West Coast with the United States submarine Sturgeon, often come near stealing the picture from the principals. Director George B. Seitz, however, has never allowed his physical action to run away with his story and has maintained a perfect balance in continuity.

Three Featurettes

Three excellent featurettes precede the feature attraction including a novel screen miniature, "Hollywood Hobbies," a very funny Walt Disney cartoon, "The Pointer," and the ever welcome Belle newsreel.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Barefoot Boy"

Jackie Moran, young star of Monogram's "Barefoot Boy", coming to the Capitol Theatre, has many claims to distinction, among them "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer" and "Mother Carey's Chickens", but his favorite achievement, according to young Mr. Doran, was that he was Deanna Durbin's first love interest.

Jackie was born in Matoon, Ill., but lived most of his early years in Chicago. One day Mary Pickford came to town for personal appearances, and when Jackie came backstage to get her autograph, the great star was so impressed by the child's intelligent questions about the theatre, that when he confided to her his ambition to be an actor, Miss Pickford advised his mother to take him to Hollywood.

When Jackie was eleven, in 1935, the Morans did come to Hollywood. Their second day at the coast they auditioned the boy for a part in "The King Sleeps", which was playing at the Vine Street Theatre. He played that show for two weeks, and then stepped into his first picture part in "And So They Were Married" with Melvyn Douglas, Mary Astor, and Edith Fellows.

After this he did "Valiant Is the Word for Carrie", followed by "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer", and got a big break opposite Deanna Durbin in "Mad About Music".

Now comes Monogram's "Barefoot Boy", which definitely establishes Jackie Moran as an outstanding juvenile star.

The picture tells the story of the rejuvenation of a spoiled city youth by a country boy, and of their adventures in solving the mystery of an old haunted house.

Prominent in the cast are Marcia Mae Jones, Ralph Morgan, Claire Windsor, Matty Fain, and Marilyn Knowlden.

Karl Brown directed for Monogram from the original screen play by John T. Neville.

The added feature attraction, "The Witness Vanishes", is another of the Crime Club series starring Edmund Lowe and Wendy Barrie.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Five Little Peppers and How They Grew"

It is impossible to see and tell each one individually that the two feature program now playing at the McCarthy Theatre is a swell show, but through the medium of this newspaper announcement regarding it we recommend that "Five Little Peppers And How They Grew" featuring Edith Fellows, from the novel written by Margaret Sidney, is one of the best pictures of the year and the co-feature "Outpost of the Mounties" is an action hit that is really tops. If you enjoy a good movie here's a show you must have on your "must see" list.

"True Confession" "Jones Family in Hollywood"

"True Confession" R.K.O. Radio's new dramatic production with Victor McLaglen, star of "Gunga Din" and "Captain Fury" in his finest role since making the Academy Award Winner "The Informer", will be presented next at the McCarthy Theatre. Others in the cast of "True Confession" include Joseph Calleia, Sally Eilers and Barry Fitzgerald. As a laugh-packed second feature, "The Jones Family in Hollywood" will also be presented, starring Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Ken Howell and June Carlson. Plus a Walt Disney technicolor cartoon.

Ship Wreckage, Fuel Oil Strew Florida Beach

Juviter, Fla., Nov. 4 (AP)—Fule oil and marine debris churned against the beach by high tide convinced residents of this fishing village yesterday that a ship went down offshore last night. Coast Guard and radia officials had no reports of a distress signal.

At 2 a.m., when the tide was just beginning to ebb, cottagers were awakened by a powerful odor of fuel oil. A strong wind blew in a film which covered buildings, trees anr brush. Daybreak disclosed thick oil for hundreds of yards offshore and six miles up and down the coastline.

Along the shore were a ship's door with newly-shined brass fittings freshly torn loose with nails still bright and unrusted, a heavy beam with steel braces still unrusted; dozens of direct current electric light bulbs, vibration proof, which, seamen said, are used in a ship's engine room; shaving brushes (with a swastika for a trade mark) and dozens of miscellaneous ship's appointments.

An airplane survey failed to locate any wreckage outside the shore reef.

Wrestling Referee, Cliff Faux Hit With Missile and Badly Cut While Trying to Part Wrestlers

Ruddy Epps Goes Berserk During Bout With Khoen and Fans Take Part

KHOEN WINS BOUT

Chuck Thorne, Local Mauler, Wins His First Pro Bout in This City

When a wrestler is injured nowadays, while plying his trade, it is seldom news, but when the referee is rendered practically hors de combat, that rates spot news position. And that's what happened during the main bout of last night's grappling show at the Hume Arena when Referee Cliff Faux was struck in the face with a stone and badly cut across the nose and beneath the right eye, when some irritated fan threw debris into the ring during the main bout, after Rudy Epps of Columbus, had been disqualified for roughness and Dave Khoen, the Jewish lad from Detroit, was awarded the first fall of the main bout of a three-bout card. After Referee Faux was given first aid the main-bouters returned to finish the full hour limit without further decisions and Khoen was declared the winner.

Local Lad Wins

Next in line to satisfy some six hundred patrons of the modern art of wrestling was the victory of Chuck Thorne, Belleville's recent gift to the arm and leglock trade, who won over Al Pearson of Hamilton in the preliminary bout after some twenty-five minutes of willing working. Thorne assumed the villainous attitude and roughed Pearson, although considerably outweighed and even went so far as to open a wound over Pearson's right eye and cause a free flow of blood. It was during this bout, however, that a feminine voice was heard distinctly to shout —"get a toehold there Chuck, I'll tell you how to work this rasslin' business." Thorne won with a cradle-hold, after Pearson had missed a head scissors, to gladden the hearts of the fans as the local boy made good.

Apply Many Holds

Getting back to the main bout, however, Epps and Khoen commenced matters as two keen and agile wrestlers and plied their trade most satisfactorily with repeated orthodox holds until Epps became irked after thirty minutes of good clean and fast wrestling to resort to roughness. On various occasions Epps kneed and punched Khoen in an unmerciful manner to bring the wrath of the fans upon his head. As the bout progressed, however, Khoen retaliated and the feelings of the fans were quite evident when finally after fifty-five minutes Referee Faux disqualified Epps for kneeing Khoen and the patrons swarmed the ring to throw whatever most handy at Epps. It was during this demonstration that Referee Faux was struck with a stone, inflicting a deep flesh wound across the nose and beneath this right eye. The irritated fans stormed the ring and finally order was only restored when Roy Doherty, Shannonville wrestler and boxer, exchanged blows with Epps before the angered Columbus gent was subdued. The two contestants returned to complete the full hour, only five minutes being left, which saw Khoen protect his one fall and after the bout challenge Joe Maich of Brantford, who wrestled Khoen to a draw one week previous.

Valdes Winner

In the semi-final bout Pedro Valdes, of Mexico, won easily over Young Griffins of Niagara Falls. Valdes took the first and third fall of best-two-in-three with rolling figure four leglocks, while Griffins won the middle fall with a reverse surf-board.

It was announced that four bouts would be presented on next week's card which would include Roy Doherty versus Jim Kruher, of Vancouver, in the opener.

Grosso Out of Lineup For Three Months With Broken Hand

Detroit, Nov. 4—(CP)—Manager Jack Adams announced today that Don Grosso, clever rookie forward, would be missing from Detroit Red Wings' lineup for the first three months of the National Hockey League schedule because of a broken hand.

Grosso missed the Wings' opening game against the Black Hawks in Chicago Thursday, remaining here for an X-ray.

Grosso, whom Adams plans to convert from wing to centre, will remain in Detroit and keep in condition. A native of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., he came here at the tail end of last season from Kirkland Lake, Ont., to make his professional debut.

BITTER RIVALRY BETWEEN BRUINS, LEAFS RENEWED

Teams Meet Tonight in Opening of N.H.L. Season in Toronto

SHORE IS ABSENT

Leafs Will Ice Strong, Fast and Young Team for Fans

By the Canadian Press

Another hockey season is on and another outbreak of the long, bitter National League rivalry between Boston's world champion Bruins and Toronto Maple Leafs, runners-up to the Bears last season, is in the making.

The Bruins and the Leafs take up at Toronto tonight where they left off in the Stanley Cup finals last spring. This time Toronto will throw a younger lineup against the high-powered champions, who will lack the great Eddie Shore in their first start of the new campaign.

By tomorrow night every club in the seven-team league but New York Americans will have played its first contest. Chicago Black Hawks, who scored 3-2 over Detroit in the schedule inaugural Thursday, play the Canadiens at Montreal tomorrow, while New York Rangers meet the Red Wings at Detroit. The Americans start against the Canadiens at Montreal Thursday.

Available for Home Games

Shore, considered by many the game's most outstanding defenceman of all time, has decided to devote most of the winter to handling his newly-acquired Springfield club in the International-American League. He will be available for the Bruins' home games after Dec. 15 and for the playoffs.

Jack Shewchuck has come up from Providence to fill Shore's shoes. Shewchuck is a rugged blocker who will keep the Boston defence rating at No. 1 in the league.

Toronto's first forward line of Syl Apps, Gordon Drillon and Bob Davidson looks better than ever and Sweeney Schriner has come in a trade with New York Americans to add scoring punch, the arrival of a highly promising young rushing defenceman, Wally Stanowski and a clever playmaking centre, Billy Taylor, gives the Leafs two of the best recruits of the year.

Canadiens Ready

The Black Hawks, who showed new zip against Detroit, will find an experienced opponent awaiting in Montreal. Doug Young and Marty Barry are Canadian acquisitions from Detroit, Charlie Sands and Ray Getfille from Boston and Earl Robinson from Chicago. A terrific disappointment last season, the Habitants are determined to get away from the wire with something better than the long losing streak that marked their 1938-39 opening.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Nov. 4—(AP)—New York Post says that when and if the major baseball leagues start looking for a successor to Judge K. M. Landis, the favorite will be Frank Shaughnessy . . . He's president of the International League.

It'll be Billy Con vs Ben Brown in Miami's Orange Bowl in February . . . There'll be no Ryder Cup Matches this year, but there'll be a United States Ryder Cup Team. George Jacobus, president of the P.G.A. is getting ready to name one as a complimentary gesture to the pro stand-outs.

For real doggy football reporting you've got to hand it to the Middle West . . . For instance, Prof. Tod Rockwell reports in the Detroit Free Press that Michigan's Harmon to Evashevski touchdown pass is "specifically designed to obfuscate the rival left-defensive half-back" . . . Well, that explains that.

Papers all over are blasting the N.Y. Boxing Commission for doing less than nothing about the Harry Thomas charges. R. G. Lynch writes in the Milwaukee Journal: "They're too ready with the whitewash brush . . . That attitude in the No. 1 boxing state is what's wrong with boxing".

Bryan Downey (the old middleweight): "I know Harry Thomas and if he had gone in there on the up and up with Schmeling and Galento, he'd have finished just the same way—on the down and down."

Manager Lester Patrick predicts his Rangers and Boston Bruins will fight it out again this season for the National League hockey championship—Americans and Toronto Maple Leafs will battle for third place with Detroit, Chicago and Canadiens in a three-cornered scramble for fifth, according to his figuring.

SAMMY ANGOTT BEATS ARIZMENDI

Louisville Italian One Step Closer to Lightweight Throne by Victory.

Chicago, Nov. 4—(P)— Sammy Angott, aggressive Louisville, Ky., Italian, moved another step closer to a lightweight title bout last with a decisive 10-round victory over the veteran Alberto (Baby) Arizmendi of Los Angeles.

Angott's next ring appearance will be Dec. 8 against Davey Day, Chicago welterweight, in a 12-rounder in Chicago Stadium. In their last meeting several weeks ago Angott won a split decision in 10 rounds.

The Mexican knocked Angott to his knees in the second round, but after that the Louisville boy began piling up points with a whirlwind barrage of rights and lefts. Angott bounced to his feet after the knockdown without taking a count and appeared no worse for the blow.

Already far ahead, Angott opened a gash under the Mexican's left eye in the eighth, giving him an even greater advantage over his tiring foe in the final rounds.

The victory was Angott's 17th in a row and left him as the top challenger for Lou Amber's lightweight title.

Bradley's Horse Starts Favorite in Pimlico Futurity

Baltimore, Nov. 4—(AP)—Pimlico's Futurity, with a purse expected to gross around $40,000, drew nine fast performers postward today, meaded by Col. E. R. Bradley's undefeated Bimelech.

The two-year-old son of Black Toney-La Troienne, with five straight wins, was aiming at a sixth which would leave him a heavily-backed winter-book favorite in the 1940 Kentucky Oerby.

Bimelech, victor in the Belmont Futurity, was facing a mile and a sixteenth distance for the first time, but the early odds held him a 3 to 5 favorite. Challedon, winner of Pimlico's "horse-of-the-year" test Wednesday, won the Futurity in 1938.

Opposing Bimelech, among others, were Mrs. Parker Corning's Straight Lead, who took the New England Futurity last week, and Manhasset Stable's Call to Colors, both well liked. Yancey Christmas' Rough Pass, winner of the Loch Raven purse here Wednesday, and the Spadling Lowe Jenkins 'Cap at Laurel, was another horse for Bimelech to watch.

Close behind Rough Pass in the early odds was Wheatley Stable's Merry Knight, winner of the Ardsley 'Cap at Empire.

The Trenton Collegiate griddsters remained very much in the running for the Bay of Quinte six-man C. O. S. S. A. pennant race when they came from behind to beat the Grant-Burns-led Belleville "collegians" 11-6 at Trenton yesterday. One of those well-known breaks of the game decided the issue. Trenton had just knotted the score at six-all and were attempting an end run when Referee Art Cole sounded his whistle for an offside. The Belleville kids relaxed and before they realized that on the defending team's offside plays the offenders may advance the ball if they so elect, the fleet-footed Johnson had galloped 55 yards putting the ball on Belleville's five yard line from where they subsequently scored as the result of a blocked kick. The game was cleanly played, but the Trenton squad carried too much avoirdupois along the line of scrimmage and naturally took advantage of their weight to wear the lighter local kids down. However, the Belleville squad tackled well and deserve some recognition even in defeat.

The group standing today reads:

	W.	L.	T.	P.
O.S.D.	4	0	1	9
Trenton C. I.	3	1	0	6
Belleville C. I.	2	2	1	5
xAlbert College	0	8	0	0

xWithdrew from group.

Young Walt Gerow, who was doubtlessly farmed out by the Detroit Red Wings to the London M.-O. loop entry, has caught on with the London squad and is patrolling the right boards on the club's second front line. The 'Hawks' carry three complete front lines. No word from Ken Murphy in the north country, however. Belleville will not lose a single hockey player through migrations this season with the possible exception of Bill Storms, the Redmen's one-man puckster, who says he will join Larry Geyer and play in the Wellington and District League this season. Otherwise Eddie Thomas' Redmen and Toots Holway's juniors are intact. Although Ed Thomas was not notified of the reorganization of the VanHorne Memorial, Eddie is taking no chances and today communicated with Charlie Hicks, the Queen's strong man of sports, regarding a berth in the loop for his scarlet-clad pucksters.

Do you remember when Jack McAuliffe, who was never defeated after he became world lightweight boxing champion in the days of bare-knuckle bouts, died in his 73rd year two years ago today? McAuliffe, who retired in 1892, but came back later to fight a six-round, no-decision bout with Kid Lavigne four years later, had been ill three years with a throat ailment.

Hugh Casey, young pitcher of the Brooklyn Dodgers, will work under a novel arrangement next year, it is reported. Larry MacPhail has promised to give him $5,000 next season according to the story, if the overweight hurler reports at spring training camp weighing 200 pounds. If he gets down to 190 pounds, his contract will call for $9,000.

Apparently the Trenton Lions Club is as far-seeing as they are energetic and resourceful. Sensing the customary sports rivalry that exists in war or peace between the various military units, the Trenton Lions Club has completed arrangements for an inter-unit boxing tournament between the leather-slingers of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and a team of boxers from the Royal Canadian Air Force base. The bouts will be held presumably in the Trenton Arena, later this month and should prove a banner sports attraction.

And comes time for the weekly football selections. Read these and let your conscience be your guide; it's Argos over Tigers and Ottawa to beat Montreal Royals in the Big Four; Western over Varsity and Queen's to beat McGill in a tough affair in the intercollegiate, if their luck holds out. In the senior O. R. F. U. it should be Montreal Westmounts over Peterboro' easily and Balmy Beach to beat Sarnia. Imperials in the Tunnel Town to make Scribe Red Wilson most unhappy.

There was really "sum fun" for everybody at last night's wrestling bouts, except Referee Cliff Faux, who narrowly escaped serious injury when he was struck in the face with a stone and might have lost the sight of an eye. Last night's bedlam during the main bout was the most serious we've seen in the eight years of professional wrestling in Belleville. There can be no condoning of throwing missiles at unprotected individuals such as the contestants and officials. Of course the missile that hit Referee Faux was undoubtedly meant to do physical damage to Rudy Epps, but it didn't and therein lies the folly of such practices. However, the main bout was productive of some fine orthodox wrestling until Epps reverted to rough measures and was disqualified and Dave Khoen given the only fall of the 60-minute bout. Upon winning Khoen promptly issued a challenge to Joe Maich, with whom he wrestled to a 60-minute draw the week previous. Otherwise the fans were quite pleased when Chuck Thorne, the local boy, won his bout and the right for a second showing in Belleville.

The National Hockey League curtain rises in the Maple Leaf Gardens tonight, while throughout Canada many ardent fans will have their ears glued to the radio eagerly awaiting that familiar—"he shoots, he scores". The world champion Boston Bruins pry off the professional puck lid versus the Maple Leafs and despite the fact the dynamic Eddie Shore will not play road games for the Bruins, we see no great opposition for Art Ross' powerful Bruins during 1939-40. Connie Smythe seems to have too many youngsters who may shine brightly during the early weeks of the campaign, but like the baseball May flowers will soon fade.

SPORT SPICE—Congratulations to Miss Jean Fairbairn, who rolled 368 at the Recreation Alleys last night. . . . Bill Calladine has been missing from the Baltimore Orioles' line-up for the past two exhibition games. . . . We understand there is to be an open meeting called next Tuesday to discuss the possibilities of fostering and sponsoring juvenile hockey in Belleville. . . . Hope to see a goodly turnout when the call is issued. . . . Rather pathetic — "Hooker" Herring, Princeton's line man, having to have his leg amputated.

Trenton Collegiate Grid Squad Strengthen Position in Loop By Defeating B.C.I. by 11-6

Winners Prove Expert at Six-Man Game at Trenton Friday

GAME HARD FOUGHT

Belleville Loses Contest on Close Off-Side Play in Closing Minutes

Trenton, Nov. 4 — (Special)— Coach McEwan's six-man Trenton Collegiate squad remained very much in the Bay of Quinte abbreviated grid group race here yesterday with an impressive 11 to 6 win over the Belleville Collegiate. The hometown win elevated the locals within striking distance of the group-leading O. S. D. sextette, while the visitors' loss eliminates them from further chances of so much as finishing in the pennant hunt.

Using their excess weight to an advantage the Trenton kids, who out-weighed the Belleville lads all along the line, employed a bruising power play along the line in the early stages, later taking to the air with a successful aerial attack, that netted them two quick touchdowns and last period victory.

Burtt Boots Point

Trenton opened the scoring as Vic Burtt punted forty yards over the Belleville line for a first period single point. In the second period Johnson took a Trenton forward to the Belleville eight yard line, where he was downed by Theobald. B.C.I. held strongly and gained possession and Tomaso booted out of danger with a 65-yard punt and Belleville blocked a Trenton kick, giving the visitors the ball on Trenton's three-yard-line as the half-time whistle sounded.

On the first play in the second half Thompson, Belleville's bruising halfback, plunged over for an unconverted touchdown putting the B.C.I. in the lead by a 5-1 score. Trenton then went the air with a strong attack of forward passes with Vic Burtt reeling off 20 yards and Weller 25 to bring the ball to Belleville's ten and Vic Burtt then crashed over for an unconverted touchdown giving the homesters a 6-5 advantage when the final period opened.

Score is Tied

On the second play of the quarter Tomaso punted 40 yards for a kick to the Trenton deadline and knotted the score at six-all. Both squads fumbled badly in the later stages and as Johnson took the ball on an extended run the referee's whistle sounded for an offside and before the Belleville sextette realized their lapse of playing had proved costly, Johnson had reeled off 50 yards. Belleville held on their own five, however, but the visitors' attempt to punt out of danger was blocked and Johnson galloped around right end and plunged over for a touchdown as darkness was falling fast and the final score saw Trenton 11, Belleville 6.

Kicking is Even

The Burtt brothers, Fred and Vic, carried much of the play for Trenton, while Johnson, Weller, Orser and McKibbon contributed much to the winners' efforts. Tony Accera, Gannon and Thompson looked by far much the best for Belleville, with Mike Tomaso running back kicks well. The day's honors in punting were quite evenly divided between Tomaso and Burtt.

Trenton attempted 11 forward passes and completed seven, while B.C.I. tried ten via the aerial route and only completed four. Trenton made eight first downs to Belleville's three successful attempts at moving the yard sticks.

The line-ups — Belleville Collegiate: Quarter, Bennett; halves, Theobald and Barnum; snap, Hutchinson; wings, Sills and Welch; subs, Tomaso, Gannon, Thompson, Accera, Burley, Crosley and Rouse.

Trenton C. I.: Quarter, Weller; halves, McGaugley and Weeks; snap, F. Burtt; wings, White and McKibbon; subs, Vic Burtt, Johnson Orser and Wilson.

Referee: Arthur L. Cole of Belleville.

This was the largest individual contribution yet made. The gift is conditional upon the mayor undertaking to have the money forwarded to the British treasury within three months.

Rumor Air Post Offered Hepburn, Premier is Silent

Ottawa, Nov. 3 (CP) — Rumors that the government proposes to set up an air ministry were revived today with a report from Toronto that Premier Hepburn of Ontario had been offered the portfolio.

There was no official comment here and in St. Thomas, Ont., Premier Hepburn declined to comment. He added that "no newspaper has the right to say anything like that".

(The Toronto Evening Telegram yesterday said: "Mr. Hepburn this afternoon admitted to the Evening Telegram that he might have the new post (the air ministry) if he desired it. He told this paper, however, that he was "lukewarm" on the question.")

No provision has been made in the statutes for either an air ministry or a ministry of information, both of which have been frequently rumored. But the government did take authority at the emergency session of parliament in September, to create a ministry of munitions and supply if it should be decided necessary.

So far the authority has not been used and the work such a department would ordinarily perform is in the hands of the War Supply Board under chairmanship of Wallace R. Campbell, head of the Ford Motor Company of Canada.

LEAVES

Free again to fly the United States flag, after a saga of seizure and wandering in the North Atlantic for almost a month under an alien crew, she sailed from Haugesund before dawn.

A Marked Ship.

American crewmen aboard steamship City of Flint told a woman representative of The Associated Press they feared the vessel now is "a marked ship" on the seas and expressed doubt concerning her next move.

Advised by the sailors that they were under orders to say nothing to the woman suggested: "It would be nice if your families got word quickly that you men are all right."

"Tell them we're all right," a spokesman for the crew answered.

Sailors, dangling over the side to repaint the stars and stripes on the hull, greeted the reporter with broad grins. To the query "how are you feeling now?" one replied:

"It's fine now, but I was scared stiff while the Germans were aboard."

Third Adventure.

Capture by the German pocket battleship Deutschland and her subsequent voyage to Murmansk, Russia, was the third wartime adventure for the vessel. Earlier in the conflict she rescued more than 200 survivors of the torpedoed British liner Athenia and took them to Halifax, N.S. Shortly before she was taken by the Deutschland, the City of Flint took aboard 38 surviving crewmen from the British freighter Stonegate and landed them at Tromso, Norway.

German possession of the City of Flint, which began Oct. 9 when a prize crew boarded her from the pocket battleship Deutschland, ended after British warships had sighted her on her way toward Germany.

Stayed Along Coast

Since leaving Murmansk, Russian port where the German crew had sailed her, the City of Flint had traced the coast of Norway within territorial waters to escape the British blockade. Her attempted dash for Germany ended as she approached a point where she would have had to cross the Baltic Sea to reach Germany, blockaded by a cordon of British Men O' War. There had been no indication, however, the British ships planned any attempt to seize the freighter.

The Admiralty's statement said: "The American City of Flint with a German prize crew, was allowed to use Norwegian territorial waters from Tromso southward. The ship, accompanied by a Norwegian warship Olav Tryggvason and one torpedo boat, arrived at Haugesund Friday evening and anchored off Haugesund without permission.

No Reason for Calling

"As there was no valid reason for calling at the Norwegian port, authorities decided the ship should be given freedom and the German prize crew interned."

Norwegian naval officials said also a warning shot had been fired across the freighter's bow when she failed to heed a signal from a Norwegian warship to slow down.

There were reports the vessel was put into Haugesund to land an American seaman who had become ill since leaving Murmansk.

It had not been confirmed officially that a sick man was aboard the City of Flint, however, and the impression prevailed among shipping men here that the "sick" American may have been a ruse to provide cause for the Germans to anchor at Haugesund.

(The United States State Department issued a statement saying the commander of the German prize crew had requested permission to enter Haugesund harbor to deliver an ailing American sailor.

("The Norwegian Admiral promptly sent a doctor aboard the vessel to determine the facts," the statement continued. "After investigation, the doctor reported that the seaman was not sufficiently ill to justify granting permission for the vessel to anchor. Nevertheless, the vessel did anchor, and the Norwegian authorities then took the action outlined, in accordance with international law.")

Proceeding to Glasgow

Glasgow, Nov. 4—(AP)— The American freighter City of Flint was expected in shipping circles here to proceed to Glasgow, possibly under British convoy, after leaving Scandinavian territorial waters.

It was estimated it would take her at least four days to reach Glasgow, originally scheduled as a port of call for the City of Flint.

The United States Lines in London said it had not received a reply from the City of Flint to a message saying it assmed she would resume her trip to Britain.

ENLISTMENT

The high death rate Dr. Burke attributes chiefly to deficiencies in army diet which, he suggests, not only failed to meet the special nutritional requirements of youths up to 25 years of age but tended to permit loss of normal resistance to infection in men of all ages. Lax medical examinations at enlistment were also a factor.

Records of 15,576 Cases.

Dr. Burke's conclusions are based on a detailed analysis of the records of 15,576 pensions cases and appear in the current issue of the Canadian Medical Association Journal, including much of his statistical data.

To avoid just such results as Dr. Burke pictures among some of the pensioners of the last war, the Canadian Council on Nutrition is now drawing up a balanced army diet which it may propose to the National Defence Department.

Of the 15,576 pension deaths examined, 23 per cent or 3,607 were due to tuberculosis and averaged two years in hospital. "We know that many suffering from an incipient chronic disease, as well as others with well established pathology, such as aneurism, were enlisted, to become pensioners at a later date," Dr. Burke says.

Higher Death Rate From Disease

"It is probable that too much stress has been laid on enlisting the youth for service in the field," he comments further, noting that in the last war Canada enlisted 93,391 youths under 20 years of age.

"Those enlisting at the minimum age suffered a high death rate from disease, chiefly tuberculosis, and the average age of the tuberculosis pensioner is two years less than the average age for the whole pension group. This is a most significant finding. It is known that those of minor years were the hardest to rehabilitate upon their return to civil life."

For Production of War Materials

Dr. Burke accordingly recommends that the younger men be mobilized for production of war materials and supplies, so they may lead the life of a civilian in many respects, release more mature men for service and, incidentally, learn regular habits and a trade.

"The disease death rate indicates that the after-effects of war service had less adverse influence on seasoned men of 30 and over than on those 24 years and younger," he says.

Japan is Eager To Improve Relations With United States

Tokyo, Nov. 4 (AP)—Japan, impelled by the need of raw materials with which to develop new markets created by the war, was represented by economic experts today as eager to better relations with the United States.

Giving impetus to this belief was a 90-minute conference yesterday between United States Ambassador Joseph Grew, and Foreign Minister Kichisaburo Nomura, at which both were said to have explored the field of Japanese-American relations with "entire frankness".

Economists said it was "highly doubtful' that Japan's vast export program could be accomplished without ready access to American supplies.

To carry out her program, they said, Japan must obtain large quantities of raw materials—notably oil, cotton, scrap iron, scrap steel and machine tools.

Details of the discussion between Grew and the Japanese foreign minister were not disclosed.

FOUR BODIES WASHED ASHORE

German Sailors Not in Water Very Long, State of Bodies Shows

London, Nov. 4—(CP)—Bodies of four German sailors were washed up today near Hythe and at other points along the coast of Kent. An identification disk was found on each of the bodies, which did not seem to have been in the water very long. Residents familiar with tides and currents did not believe it possible the bodies came from the submarine which was found last week on Goodwin Sands, in the Strait of Dover. The bodies each had submarine escape apparatus attached.

While Finnish envoys shuttle to and fro between Helsingfors and Moscow endeavoring to find a peaceful solution of Russo-Finnish questions, Finland is quietly preparing to resist any threat to her independence. Her army, though small, is efficient, very high in morale and ready to go the limit for their country. Here you see Finnish troops en route to frontier stations at the start of the crisis.

All during the westward crossing of the Atlantic by the British steamship Scythia, her lifeboats hung over the side of the vessel, ready for use at an instant's notice. Here the British seamen cranl the winches to bring the boats back to their usual position in their cradles, after the ship docked in New York.

Classified Reunion

By ISABEL W. GREAR

Carol was lost somewhere in the city and she did not want to be found. She had let Phil understand that definitely five months before.

For hours now he had been telephoning.

He had asked first at the radio stations if they employed a pianist, Carol Myers.

Sorry—they had no such pianist. He had called the hotels from the Acme to the Waverly.

No Carol. He sighed heavily.

Carol had so blithely told him, "I'm going to get on one of the radio stations." Then somewhat miserably, "I know it's breaking your heart, and it's breaking mine, too. But my music comes first. I was just born that way."

And so she had left Irondale, and Phil, and the little house they had planned to buy on Elm street.

She had gone, and she had written to no one,

One day Phil had passed the little house on Elm street—slowly. Then he had hastily driven to his room, packed a bag, and taken the next train to the city. The city was large, but he would find her—he must find her.

Now, drearily, he watched the drizzling rain.

Was Carol out then — broke, tramping from place to place searching for work?

She had probably scanned every "Help Wanted" column for weeks.

He slumped in his chair again.

She was too proud.

If only—he stared intently at a rose in the wall paper.

Why could he not place an advertisement in the paper—word it to fit her experience? She would read it, answer . . .

He rummaged hastily in his pocket for pencil and paper.

Now, what should he say?

He knew so little about music, but remembered some of the phrases she used. Let's see . . . ACCOMPANIST. GOOD SIGHT reader. One who never gets lost no matter how much the singer skips. One who knows classical music from Bach to Gershwin. approval.

He mustn't use his own name, and, of course, couldn't use his hotel room.

Perhaps he should rent a small office somewhere for a day, if possible, or for a week. Perhaps he should have an office girl, too ....

Two days later, before eight in the morning, Phil was at his desk in his private office, the early edition of the paper before him.

"I'll need you for just this morning," he explained to Nancy, the young sister of one of the hotel telephone operators.

"I expect some applicants in answer to an advertisement—probably about three or four. It's for highly specialized work. I guess you'll have to send each one in to me."

He sighed; he wanted only Carol.

At eight thirty they began swarming, pianists of all ages and sizes and nationalities until the outer office sounded like a noon hour in a school yard. The first one he nervously questioned.

"You're a pianist?"

"You bet I am. I've played for tab shows for ten years."

"H'm—h'm. Can you play arpeggios?"

"I play anything."

"Grump," he cleared his throat. "I'm very sorry, Miss—er—er. I'm afraid you won't do. Here—" she really looked hungry. "Er—here is money for your car fare. Thank you for coming."

She accepted the money, amazed, and then, because of her rejection, flounced resentfully from the room.

Pianists, pianists, pianists. Good heavens, there couldn't be so many! He ceased questioning them.

Scarcely glancing at them he would say:

"Sorry. You won't do. Here's your car fare."

He ran out of change and sent Nancy with his bills quickly out for more. The mutterings outside swelled into louder protests.

"Sorry. You won't do.

One serious-eyed woman refused to be dismissed.

"Why won't you give me a chance to play for you?"

"I'm sorry," he said brusquely. "But you won't do. I don't believe you could—accompany me sympathetically."

Carol had once used that phrase.

"Here's your car fare. Good morning."

"Just a minute, buddy." She flashed a badge. "We've had reports on you. You're evidently not after a musician. The one ahead of me is one of the best in the city. I asked her to apply."

"Why, I—I—" Phil's face became very white. "I—it's this way," he stammered, "I—I wanted a girl—"

"Uh-huh. Well, come along."

"But you don't understand," he cried. "It's a certain girl—"

"Coming peacefully?"

She opened the door and Phil saw two burly policemen advancing.

And there was that mob of excited, pabbering pianists.

"Better run along, girls," the policewoman told them. "It was a false alarm."

"The judge is hard on your kind," one of the policemen growled at him.

Jail! They'd put him in jail. Five years—ten years, perhaps, and Carol would starve . . .

"Carol—Carol—" he cried wildly. She must be there. She must.

"Shut up!" he was ordered.

And then, miraculously, there was Carol beside him.

"Carol!" His voice was panic-stricken.

"All I wanted was to find you. You see," he turned to the policewoman, "Carol wouldn't marry me because she wanted to be a radio pianist. And she didn't write to me and I couldn't find her. So I advertised for a musician. I hoped she'd answer—I've done no harm. I was giving all the girls their car fare back."

"H'm. How about it?" the woman asked Carol.

"It's true. I didn't write him because the studios weren't interested in me—and I was proud."

Her trembling hand caught Phil's.

"Carol no pianist has a chance," he hastened to say. "Why, there are thousands and thousands—" He shuddered.

CLASSIFIED REUNIN GAL 2 ....

The policewoman looked down into Carol's tear-wet eyes.

"Blessings on you," she muttered. "But don't try any more crazy advertisements," she added gruffly as she nudged the policemen on out of the office.

"Carol," Phil begged brokenly. "You'll go home with me?"

She nodded, and then burst into tears and buried her head on his shoulder as he drew her close to him.

"Carol, I—I'm sorry it turned out this way for you. You—you haven't been broke and—and hungry, have you?"

"I am working," she sobbed. "I've been playing with a girls' orchestra at a night club. But I've wished and wished I had stayed in Irondale with you. I've dreamed of that little house—I thought you wouldn't want me after I left you once. Phil," she quavered. "My roommate showed me that advertisement. She thought it was crazy—unusual. It—it sounded like you. I wasn't the first one here because I stayed to pack my bags—and I brought them with me."

"Carol," Phil suddenly gasped, "have you car fare for us? I—I seem to be the one who's broke."

Burglars Blow Safe, Reward Only $6

Woodstock, Ont., Nov. 4—(CP)—Burglars blew the safe of the Borden Milk Plant at Hickson, during the night but obtained only about $6.00.

Four business places in Tavistock also were entered. In two nothing was reported missing, but Pfeiffers Groceteria, entered by smashing a pane of glass, a small sum of money and some candies were taken. At the service station thieves took cigarettes, a set of tools, two quarts of oil, a tire and small radio. They overlooked $21.

Six-Sided Brooder House Designed

When they first began building hog brooders in Western Canada all brooders were of the square or rectangular type. This type of brooder was difficult to ventilate and as a result moisture condensed in the corners.

The difficulty was overcome when a six sided brooder house was designed. Besides improving the ventilation it also makes it possible to accommodate six sows and allow each litter to equally share the brooder.

Some good lots of hogs marketed out of the Belleville district during the week of November 3rd are as follows:

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, Nov. 4— (CP)—Stocks closed the week with a mildly soft tone and volume eased off to about 225,000 shares. Lake Shore under selling pressure from the opening, led the Mining Group and the moderate retreat and scattered selling in the industrials was absorbed at price concessions. All indices excepting the Base Metals, were down narrowly at the close.

Pressure on Lake Shore resulted from the company's announcement that operations at the mine would be curtailed because of the problem of guarding against rock blasts. Mining will be decreased from 2,500 tons to 2,000 tons daily at once.

The stock was offered in quantity throughout the first hour and the price dropped to 29 3-4, the lowest price recorded since 1932 when the price fell back to 24.95. The day's loss was about 3 1-4.

Recessions of 3 to 5 cents were boarded by other golds, including Wright-Hargreaves, Macassa, Hard Rock, Kerr-Addison, Preston, Powell Rouyn and MacLeod-Cockshutt and Lamaque and Little Long Lac were down to 10 cents.

Some of the Base Metals were inclined to tighten up. Noranda and Hudson Bay improved fractions and gains were chalked up by Waite-Amulet and Pend Oreille and Falconbridge added 25 cents.

Hog Quotations

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Nov. 4 (AP)—Aviation stocks led their backers a fast chase through the market's gamut of changes today, smashing peak records and then selling off in a burst of profit-taking.

Large blocks of securities, changing hands rapidly, pushed the short session's total transactions to about 1,300,000 shares.

Lower were Douglas Aircraft, Martin, Sperry, Goodyear, U.S. Steel, Chrysler, Bethlehem, Westinghouse, General Electric, and practically all the rails.

On the advancing side were Curtiss Wright, Continental Motors, Aviation Corp., American Can, Johns Manville, Bush Terminal and New York Shipbuilding.

Fractions higher among Canadian shares were C.P.R., Hiram Walker and International Nickel. Lake Shore, however, dropped more than a point. Dominion 4s showed little variation in the bond market.

Buffalo for Ontario

Ottawa, Canada:—At the request of the Ontario Government, a car load of twenty buffalo has been shipped to Burwash, Ontario, by the National Parks Bureau of the Department of Mines and Resources.

The nucleus herd now being transferred to Ontario comes from Elk Island National Park in Alberta. Buffalo are not native to the Province of Ontario, and so their introduction to the Burwash area is an experiment in the acclimatization of this species of big game. Some years ago elk from Western Canada were transferred to Ontario game preserves, and the success which attended this venture has no doubt led the province to endeavor to add the buffalo to its list of big game animals.

Once faced with possible extinction, large herds of buffalo and elk now roam in parks and reserves in Western Canada. Canada's success in preserving them is a noteworthy example of the value of timely conservation.

Didn't Read Petition, Find They've Promised To 'Decapitate Selves'

Alma, Mich., Nov.—(CP)—Students at Alma College here learned today to their embarrassment that they had signed a petition promising to "decapitate themselves with great joy." The petition was circulated at the staff of the college paper in an effort to determine how many people read petitions they signed. The staff members told the students it was a petition for a holiday to mark a popular professor's birthday.

SHARP INCREASE IN EGG PRICES ON CITY MARKET

A-Selects Quoted at 45 Cents an Increase of 5 Cents Over Last Week

CHICKENS PLENTIFUL

The crisp cool air, tangy with frost, of a typical Canadian Autumn morning, provided a natural setting for one of the heaviest offerings of farm, garden and dairy produce seen on the city market since the latter days of the harvest season. Offerings in all phases were heavier than usual while vendors filled both inside and outside marts to near capacity.

Price levels, however, were generally firm, with the exception of egg quotations which shot sharply upwards to 45 cents the dozen for "A" selects, an increase of approximately five cents per dozen over quotations of a week ago. Mediums were offered at forty-two cents with a few pullets selling at thirty-eight cents the dozen. Farmers' butter prices remained unchanged at thirty-cents the pound in both "double" and "single" rolls.

Heavier Chicken Offering

Chicken offerings were heavier than usual, with good weighty birds of six months selling at from $1.25 upwards. Yearlings were quoted at from one dollar each with fowl moving slowly at from sixty-five cents each. Ducks were plentiful today with some good quality birds going at from one dollar each. Dressed pigeons proved popular in some quarters, selling at two for twenty-five cents.

Providing the only dash of color in the somewhat drab appearance of the market at this time of the year, were the displays of fall and winter apples. Splendid quality MacIntosh Reds, Northern Spies, Tolman Sweets, Snows, Greenings and other popular varieties, attractively arranged and packed in hampers, were offered at one dollar per bushel. Buying was fairly brisk in this particular line of produce, while "grounders" also moved briskly at seventy-five cents the bushel. A few hickory nuts were available at fifteen cents the quart.

Potatoes Unchanged

Potato quotations remained practically unchanged with bushels selling at ninety cents and one dollar each. Bag lots of seventy-five pounds moved slowly at $1.25 and $1.30 according to quality. Late squash of both the table and the larger varieties were plentiful as was pumpkin. Both vegetables could be secured at prices ranging from five cents upwards. Carrots at 50c; onions at $1.25; turnips and beets at 60 cents the bushel rounded out the staple vegetable offerings. Celery, ground-tomatoes and a few radishes sold well at steady prices.

Good Variety of Fish

There was plenty of fish, for lovers of this food to choose from. Fresh lake trout and whitefish headed the variable display with the former selling at twenty-five cents the pound, and whitefish for five cents less. Mudcats were offered at fifteen cents the pound; pike at ten cents, fresh lake herring at four and five fish for twenty-five cents, and a few pickerel at eighteen cents the pound. Mullets could be had at three and four for twenty-five cents.

Weekly Livestock

Toronto, Nov. 3 CP)—The lamb and sheep divisions, each up 25 cents showed only price gain on the Toronto livestock market this week. Cattle prices lost 25-50 cents cwt. on a dull market, calves were steady and hogs ended 10-15 cents lower. About 1,000 head of cattle were unsold at the finish.

Good ewe and wether lambs closed at $9.50-$9.75 with a small lot changing hands at $10. A few bucks and heavies made $8.50-$8.75 with culls at $7 cwt. Sheep ranged from $2.50-$5.50 according to quality.

The cattle run included 1,500 from the west. Excepting canners, cutters and bulls, slaughter cattle were slow and lower. Weighty steers dropped 25-50 cents at $6-$7.25 with most sales from $6.85 downward. Butcher steers and heifers finished 25-35 cents lower at $5-$6.75 with tops at $7. Fed calves were weak at the close at $7.25-$8.50 with a few choice at $9. Butcher cows lost 50 cents to $4-$4.75 and canners sold steady at $3.25-$3.75. Butcher bulls were steady at $5-$5.50 and bologna bulls were $4.50-$5.

Store cattle opened active and steady at $5.50-$7 for stockers with stock calves up to $7.75. The close was 25 cents lower at $5-$6.75 for stockers with many unsold. Milkers and springers traded at $80-$90 for tested tops.

Choice veal calves closed at $10-$11 with heavies at $6-$7.75. Grass calves made $5-$5.50. The calf run included 900 from the west.

Hogs opened 10-15 cents lower at $8.50-$8.65 off-trucks for bacons and at $11.50-$11.65 dressed. The close was weak on live sales at $8.50 while dressedweights were stronger at a general $11.65 cwt.

U. S. Importing More Canadian Cheese

Toronto, Nov. 4—The preliminary report, showing cheese stocks in the nine principal cities of Canada reduced 7.5 million pounds during October and 5,000,000 pounds from a year ago, as of Nov. 1, provided the Toronto cheese market with a favorable background Friday.

This factor, coupled with the fact of improved country boards firmed prices both in wholesale and retail channels. Buying was more active in early dealings, but trading practically disappeared in the afternoon. The wholesale market closed at 15 1-8c to 15 1-4c per pound for current makes of new, large paraffined. New large advanced to 16 1-4c in the retail section.

United States of late has been a comparatively active buyer of Canadian cheese. The 10 per cent premium of the United States dollar over the Canadian unit of exchange has made it profitable for shipments to cross the border. Markets south of the line were reported as being from 1 to 2 cents above Canadian prices most of the season. Since the first of last month it was reported that exports of Canadian cheese to the United States have exceeded those of the entire 1938 season. For the current year to date shipments were said to be 3,000,000 pounds heavier than in the corresponding period of last year.

Shipments to the United Kingdom have also been in substantial volume. During the week ended Oct. 28 Canada shipped overseas nearly 50,000 boxes, or in the neighborhood of 4.2 million pounds.

Butter and eggs showed little price change here yesterday. Trading on the butter market continued light, but offerings were not heavy.

Buyers were turning their attention more to lower grades on the egg market in view of the recent sharp advances in top grades. Fresh receipts were not showing any increase over immediate requirements.

PATTULLO WARNS

British Not Singled Out Claim.

After cries of "shame" interrupted her, Mrs. Steeves said: "I am not speaking of the British empire alone but of all empires. They are built for the benefit of a handful of industrialists."

"People now realize the utter futility of war and refuse to be stampeded," she said. "They are coldly and dispassionately analyzing facts and are finding many things to discredit governments all over the world.

"The people were betrayed in the last war by their governments and we must know the aims of the present war right now.

"Great Britain was the first to betray the League of Nations in 1931 when Japan invaded Manchoukuo and Sir John Simon (then British foreign secretary) refused to apply economic sanctions.

"Past history must make us take heed. War aims are the most important things. We want a positive peace."

Asks Tax On Profits.

The federal government should tax war profits more heavily, Mrs. Steeves said. Unemployables should be put on a different basis, health insurance put into effect and federal housing loans encouraged.

"Houses, food and clothing are far more important than war munitions. No one knows what the purpose of war is, but it is folly to think we can destroy Hitler and permit other Hitlers in this country."

Mrs. Steeves said the Premier, during a campaign speech at Kimberly, B. C., had warned C. C. F. speakers against any treasonable utterances. She followed Harold Winch, C. C. F. House Leader in the debate.

Mr. Pattullo admitted having done so and added that a man at Duncan (Vancouver Island) had been sentenced to three months for uttering words not as treasonable as were heard from C. C. F. speakers.

"At the outset of the war," he said, "this Government offered the Ottawa authorities full co-operation in the Federal Government's war aims. I am sorry at the Honorable lady Member's attitude and appeal that no other Member of this House give similar utterances. It is fortunate she is living in a country where tolerance is enjoyed. I doubt if she would be allowed such latitude in her native Holland. If such words are again uttered I shall have to advise Ottawa.

"We must prosecute this war to ultimate victory."

Striking Indictment

H. G. Perry (Lib. Prince George) rose and said:

"We have heard a striking indictment of Great Britain and British policy and of Canada's participation in the war. The Honorable lady Members eye has been fixed on a condemnation of Britain and British policy. Freedom under political democracy was proved by both C. C. F. speeches in the House today.

"It is important to make positions of political parties in this House clear on the question of war. If this Government or Members of this House give expression to criticism of the method of fighting war, those words are of great importance either to strengthen or weaken democracies near the zone of hostilities.

"We are gratified at the stand taken by the Conservative Party in the Province in offering fullest co-operation to the Government. We have waited for the C. C. F. to announce their policies and must accept the speeches heard today as their policies.

Calls Women Cynical

"Underlying the Honorable lady's speech seemed a vein of condemnation for us being at war. She is cynical about our political democracy which maintained peace on the seven seas and built our Empire. What motive lies behind? It is a grave mistake to class Britain as a nation breaking as many promises as Hitler.

"Socialists in Britain at the time of the Munich Pact criticized Prime Minister Chamberlain for not going to war. Socialists here take the opposite stand.

"The C. C. F. didn't oppose war because it was immoral. They opposed war because it was what they termed a capitalistic war. This war is to ensure that Hitler's policies shall go no further.

"I do not want to hear any party opposing the Government for supporting Canada's war aims."

Daily War Survey

"We will ensure the security of the U.S.S.R. without regard to anything, breaking all and every obstacle on the way to our goal."

Poland a Witness

The Nazis used such language and Poland is a desolate and bloody witness of what is meant by "breaking all and every obstacle on the way to our goal."

It means the Finns are negotiating in front of loaded guns. Whether they will throw up their hands or fight remains to be seen. If they fight they may or may not get help from Norway and Sweden who may be already set down as the next victims of Communist expansion.

The close economic relationship between Russia and Germany suggests Russia may be after bigger game in Finland than a naval base and a strip of coastline near Leningrad. In Northern Finland is a big new nickel mine, recently developed by a subsidiary of the International Nickel Company of Canada.

FIRE DESTROYS

Twenty Lines of Hose.

Twenty lines of hose poured thousands of tons of water into the building starting shortly after the fire was discovered about 4 a.m. At daylight the fire still was burning and the interior was gutted, although the four walls were standing.

Collapse of the west wall was feared and Fire Chief Kenneth Cassel ordered his men to leave the roof of an adjoining house as their position became dangerous.

Elaborate regalia, records and equipment used by twelve lodges that used the upper floors of the commodious, five-storey brick temple were destroyed.

Wentworth County Junior Farmers Association held a ball in the main auditorium last night. One of the Eastern Star Lodges staged an entertainment in a basement auditorium. Jehovah's Witnesses had chartered the building for a weekend meeting and were to have moved in this morning.

Awakened By Smoke.

The caretaker's wife was wakened by the smoke. She roused her husband. Grey opened the door of the apartment and stepped into the hall. He was forced back by the smoke and shut the door.

The Greys opened the front windows of their bedroom and shouted for help. Factory workers passing in the street thought at first that the shouts came from celebrants. They shouted back. Then they understood what the shouting was about and turned in a fire alarm.

The shafts of flame blazing above the building were visible to residents across Hamilton Bay. At 6 a.m. a great ball of fire burst through the roof and rolled skyward.

Firemen arrived, ran a ladder up to the window of the Grey apartment and assisted the couple down.

Turret Water Guns Used

For the first time, turret water guns were put into operation in Hamilton. Water pressure was maintained at maximum and two of the turret guns, one at the front and one at the rear, were used. Turret guns are hose with huge nozzles, raised to a height on tripods.

Among the lodges whose equipment was lost in the fire are: Unity, Crescent, Miners, Excelsior, Victoria and Hamilton of the I. O. O. F., Canton of Hamilton, I. O. O. F., Golden Star and Justitia Lodges of the Rebeccas; Mispah, Hamilton and ambitious chapters of the Order of the Eastern Star; the Travellers' Association and the Hindoo Koosh Grotto.

NAZIS PROTEST

The Commander of the German prize crew which took the freighter into the Norwegian port of Haugesund was a "victim of his humanitarianism", in the opinion of foreign office circles.

The German view was that the prize crew commander merely had heeded a plea of President Roosevelt to Great Britain and Germany to take good care of the City of Flint's American crew.

When one American fell ill, they said, he entered Haugesund so the American might be given proper medical care. The German crew was interned when it dropped anchor in that port.

German authorities said they could not predict at present just how the matter would be straightened out with Norway, but suggested the Norwegians probably would be charged with unfairness. They said the cargo, including what Germany considers contraband, still was aboard.

Pretty Stormy Place

Asked whether the German Navy might try to seize the City of Flint a second time after she left Norwegian territorial waters, an authorized commentator answered, "Well, it's pretty stormy up there right now."

News that Norway had freed the City of Flint and interned her Nazi prize crew was a surprise to Germany. Foreign observers expected her to contest the action as a breach of international law.

These observers based their belief on previous German utterances interpreting the status of war prizes. They recalled the officially-expressed German view that ships seized as prizes are not war vessels and hence may operate in territorial waters.

Loan Oversubscribed is Claim

German newspapers continued, meanwhile, to praise the Reich's "financial ability and strength," which they said was indicated yesterday by the asserted over-subscription of a Federal railways loan of 500,000,000 marks $180,000,-000).

Press reports claimed the loan had been over-subscribed within a few hours and interpreted this as "a new sign of confidence in the stability of Germany's economic system."

Authoritative quarters, commenting on the Reich's financial situation, said the Government intends to finance the war from tax revenues without resorting to war loans.

Fuehrer Hitler's plan for transplanting German Nationals from the Baltic countries to conquered Polish provinces was reported progressing rapidly. A German delegation was understood to have arrived in Tallinn to discuss details with Estonian authorities.

NEW YORK PIERS

One official estimated the new neutrality law, forbidding American ships to enter belligerent waters, would take about 100 United States vessels out of the North Atlantic trade.

A last-minute ship "swapping" arrangement, however, was expected to prevent collapse of the United States' merchant marine through enforced idleness during the duration of the war.

U. S. To Take Over S. American Trade Routes

The agreement calls for British lines to withdraw their vessels from South America trade, thus mobilizing its maximum tonnage for the transportation of war materials, and turn the business over to American shipping companies.

The first effect of the neutrality measure on America's transAtlantic shipping was the cancellation of the sailing of three United States Lines vessels that had been scheduled to leave before last midnight for English and French ports.

They were the President Roosevelt and the American Farmer, carrying only cargo, and the Washington, which listed cargo and 275 passenger bookings.

Most of the Liner Washington's passengers transferred to the Holland American Liner Statendam and the Cunard ship Scythia.

Filled to Roofs

Ironclad secrecy marked the influx into New York of war paraphernalia, including foodstuffs, surgical instruments, hospital supplies, tents, saddles, tools, explosives, bombers and fighting plane, which now have a green light for export on a "cash-and-carry" basis.

Pier sheds patrolled by heavy details of police opened their steel doors when trucks approached, and quickly closed again. A fleeting glance inside disclosed massive crates, barrels and cartons piled high to the rafters.

A dozen policemen, with night sticks swinging, protected Britain's Queen Mary and France's Normandie and Ile de France, lying in adjoining berths, as speculation grew whether any of the three vessels would venture forth some night to run the gauntlet of German U-boats and German raiders on the North Atlantic.

London, Nov. 4—(CP)— Britain began planning a comprehensive reshuffle of her wartime merchant marine today to meet heavy shipping demands expected on repeal of the United States Arms Embargo.

Authoritative shipping circles said these steps were envisaged:—

Schedules on all Britain's overseas trade routes will be revised to free tonnage for transatlantic use. In doing this the shipping ministry will budget for vital supplies coming to the United Kingdom from the Empire.

Some ships undoubtedly will be taken off South American routes but it was pointed out that Latin American countries were among Britain's biggest suppliers of meat and other essential foodstuffs.

Stronger naval escort units probably will be needed to guard shipments from North American ports to Europe.

Aviation experts said most airplanes purchased in the United States probably would be transported to Europe by ships but there was no reason why some of the larger craft could not fly across the Atlantic.

Prize ships seized by Britain under the contraband control may be pressed into service after the prize courts decide whether they may be retained for British use.

Britain also will seek to charter many available neutral ships.

In addition Britain has many merchant ships under construction. Numbers of these are expected to be on the seas.

YANKEE FIELDER

This is Jake's first hunting visit to Ontario but in 1928 before his marriage he related he had gone to New Brunswick with a hunting party. This is my first visit to Marmora and judging by the welcome I have had here through my association with Mr. Pearse I can practically say I'll be coming back again. Owing to an injury Jake did not play ball at the commencement of the season but got in twenty-eight games. Though his team's season was most successful the attendance at games was slightly affected by the World's Fair. A native of Dayton, O., he admits his favorite pastime to be golf which takes him south for the winter months. The party are guests at the Royal Hotel over the week-end.

BELLIGERENTS

The President used two pens in signing the historic document. He gave one to Chairman Pittman (Dem.-Nevada) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the other to Chairman Bloom (Dem-New York) of the of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, who steered the legislation to passage at a special session which ended last night.

There was much laughter in the president's office during the ceremony, the president's laugh especially being heard in the lobby of the executive offices.

Mr. Roosevelt's decision to sign the document—the revised American neutrality bill—followed almost immediately its swift passage by both Houses of Congress yesterday.

With removal of the embargo, which cut off American arm supplies from the Allies almost immediately after the outbreak of war, Great Britain and France are expected to begin moving across the Atlantic some 300 airplanes completed for them during the embargo period.

Billion in Orders Forecast

American government officials saw as one result of repeal the promise of $1,000,000,000 worth of war orders, mainly by the Allied powers whose mastery of the Atlantic sealanes makes them the only belligerents able to purchase munitions in America.

Nearly $80,000,000 worth of arms export licences to Great Britain and France, granted before the embargo was proclaimed, will be reissued by the State Department on the application of the American arms manufacturers holding the orders.

In the eyes of Leslie Burgin, British Supply Minister, the repeal presents the Allies "with an arsenal of unlimited resources, should they be required to place orders," dispatches from London said.

With removal of the embargo and the substitution of a "cash and carry" arms sales policy, stringent restrictions on American shipping provided by the legislation are expected to be proclaimed at once by the President.

These will prevent American merchant vessels from carrying on trade with belligerent or entering waters designated within the war danger zone.

Canada in Special Position

Trade with Canada, however, was placed in a special position by the bill and will not be drastically affected. Coastwise shipping of ordinary cargoes to and from the Maritime Provinces will be allowed as usual and on the Pacific coast similarly no restrictions are imposed.

All trade with Canada, including arms, may be carried on as usual either by water, rail or air. Cash is required for government arms orders from Canada as well as the other belligerents.

When Congress gave its final approval to the repeal legislation yesterday, it ended a 44-day special session called by Mr. Roosevelt to repeal the four-year-old embargo law, which he said had worked to the disadvantage of the powers unable to obtain munitions near home because of geographical circumstances.

To Avoid Incidents

The stringent regulations of American shipping were designed to avoid "incidents" and possible subsequent involvement of the United States in war by keeping ships and passengers out of danger zones.

The Senate adopted the final draft of the bill 55 to 24; the House of Representatives shortly afterward by 243 to 172. Then Senate and the House then voted to adjourn.

The President's farewell messages—which were read to the Senate and House—expressed congratulations and good wishes and the hope that "world events" would not make necessary another extraordinary meeting of Congress before the regular session begins January 3.

State Secretary Cordell Hull and his advisers completed, meantime, the series of Presidential proclamations and executive orders putting into effect the new legislation.

Limits of Danger Area

Most difficult task of the State Secretary was the delimitation of the danger area from which American ships will be barred. It was learned reliably that an effort was made to define the danger zone narrowly rather than expansively, since it was felt that it was impossible to relieve American ships of all risk.

Ship lines expected to be affected immediately were the United States Lines, American Scantic Line, South Atlantic Mail Line, Dixie United Kingdom Line, Southern States Line, and Black Diamond Line.

Some shipping authorities said they expected that the Lines, although certain to be hard hit, might be able to revise their ports of call to some extent.

Unofficial estimates were that between 50 and 100 ships might have to be withdrawn from the North Atlantic traffic.

Hunting Parties Prepare to Leave For Annual Sport

Invading forces of the deer-hunting army of the south made ready today for the annual invasion of the wooded slopes of the north country.

By nightfall, curling blue smoke spiralling high into the blue of a typical Autumn sky, from chimneys of far-fung hunting lodges will denote the arrival of the advance guard of the southern nimrods.

The season officially opens on Monday, November 6th, but by the time officialdom pries open the door, large numbers of hunters will be straining at the figurative leash, on the many runways that meander the northern woods in an intricate pattern.

Throughout the day a number of parties of local hunters put the final touches on preparations for the season's shoot. A number of them will leave for the north tonight, and by Monday will be ready to track down the elusive bucks, that according to reports from that part of the country, have been seen in plentiful numbers during the past few weeks.

Hunting conditions according to Reeve Joseph Davis of Mayo Township, in the city on business the other day, are ideal. "There has been but little snowfall thus far" he said. "The woods appear to be in good "hunting" condition, and if the numbers of deer seen in our district recently is any criterion, there should be no shortage of game."

'Teams' of the Maginot Line Made Up of Trained Technicians And Completely Devoted to Work

London, Nov. 4 (CP)—Harold Nicolson, well-known writer who toured the Maginot Line as a member of the British Parliamentary group just returned from a visit to France, today gave high praise to the French defence arrangements.

"The 'teams' of the Maginot Line are made up of admirably trained technicians who know their trade and are completely devoted to it," he said.

"The officers are first-class experts whose ability is above all praise. Their relations with their men are those of employers with chosen collaborators.

"There is no better way to indicate the feeling aroused by the sight of precise, silent, confident collaboration than to say that it reminded me of the exactness and intelligent sureness of work in hospitals.

"Our visit impressed us the more in that it gave us an immensely strengthened confidence in the future. It is by men such as those whom we have seen at work in the Maginot Line that victory will be prepared.

"Their slogan is the most legitimate of slogans, for, in fact, 'they shall not pass'.

Spirit of Collaboration.

"This certainty is further strengthened when one has noted the complete and frank spirit of collaboration which this time, from the very beginning of the war, animates the French and British general staffs.

"As for the French politicians with whom we had occasion to talk, we did not discover between them and us the shaow of a difference of views. German propaganda is losing much time and labor in trying to separate our two countries.

"The trip we have just paid to France, which made it possible to make most useful contacts, will be followed regularly by similar visits, since the two Franco-English parliamentary groups in Paris and London, which have just been fused into a single unit, have decided that henceforth every six weeks French and British missions will alternately visit each other's country."

The War This Week

By DON GILBERT
Canadian Press Cable Editor

Soviet Russia's threats against Finland, voiced in the official Moscow newspaper Pravda on Friday, brought the ninth week of the war to a close on a note of alarm in Helsingfors and the other Scandinavian capitals, and deepened the "Russian enigma" for the rest of the world.

Pravda's boast that "we shall obtain our goal, crushing all in our way," might have been designed to frighten the Finns into submission, but there was no sign of weakness in Helsingfors.

This and the week's other contributions to the war of words, together with an intensification of diplomatic activity in Southeastern Europe, overshadowed actual warfare on the western front, where rain, mist and cold made operations difficult.

Allies Strike Telling Blow

A telling blow for the Allies was struck in Washington when the House of Representatives endorsed the bill previously passed by the Senate repealing the United States embargo on the export of arms. Only formalities remain before the measure goes to President Roosevelt for signature and the great industrial resources of the United States are opened to those nations which rule the seas—the British Empire and France.

Repeal of the embargo will enable the Allies to purchase aircraft, munitions and other finished implements of war in quantities limited only by their financial resources. This market will be closed to Germany as she is unable to pierce the Allied blockade. Washington estimates were that the Allies would place $1,000,000 in orders within the next few weeks.

Little Comfort for Berlin

Whatever the week's developments in Moscow and elsewhere might mean for the Allied powers, there was little comfort for Berlin.

All signs pointed to a weakening of the Rome-Berlin axis. These included Premier Mussolini's reorganization of his Fascist Government, the Italian pact with Greece, reported negotiations between Italy and Turkey.

Cold water seemed to have been thrown on any German hope for a sort of Berlin-Moscow axis by the failure of the Russian Premier, Vyacheslaff Molotoff, in his speech Tuesday to indicate anything in the way of substantial help would be given the Reich by Russia. Indeed advices from Berlin by way of the Netherlands suggested Soviet aid would be limited to exchanges of raw materials for German finished goods on a strict lot-for-lot basis.

While Allied agains during the week were not spectacular, there was no important reverse. British losses at sea were small. German aircraft approaching the British Isles were beaten back. In France, British planes and guns brought down at least two German machines.

Glancing Back

Glancing back twenty-five years:—A hard blow to the Allies was struck when Turkey on November 1, 1914, with its large and brave army, entered the war on the side of the Central Powers. Six months later it was against the Turks that General Sir Ian Hamilton led the ill-fated Gallipoli campaign.

At sea a British naval squadron was defeated off the Chilean coast, although a little later the British navy more than made up for this by defeating the Germans in the battle off the Falkland Islands.

After three months of war British casualties on the western front totalled 59,790 dead, wounded or taken prisoner.

Student Taught Flying is Easy, Makes it Safer

By GUY E. RHOADES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, —(CP)—There is a new technique in training student pilots for the Royal Air Force and it has cut down casualties almost to the vanishing point.

Squadron Leader P. Broad, who commands an advance squadron outlines it like this:

First the recruit learns to fly a light airplane, the sort that hundreds of Canadian have learned to fly at clubs during the last 10 years. Then he goes to a school combining intermediate and advanced instruction. The machines he must handle there are much heavier, faster and more powerful than anything he has flown before, and they land at a much higher speed and have many more instruments to worry him.

The instructor sends the pupil out on the field and lets him play around for a day with a grounded plane, answering his questions and convincing him that the new job is not much different from the one he learned in. He stresses that flying it will be easy.

Next day the pupil gets a few short dual-control hops in the fast machine, with an instructor sitting by him in case he makes a bad mistake.

All On His Own

The instructor reiterates that it is easy and tells the student to take off. He does not take off for him, even once, or touch the controls unless his charge is about to crash. Usually half an hour of that sort of thing is enough to convince the student he can take the machine up by himself with complete confidence.

Once he has done that half-hour or so and his first solo on the new machine, he is ready to start with the other complications of his training, keeping course for his photographer or bomber or gunner and sticking to his formation.

Squadron Leader Broad says: "The reason there used to be so many casualties among young pilots was that flying was supposed to be difficult and dangerous. We teach them now that it's nothing of the sort. Once they can fly we don't give them any more help than we have to. We just stand by at first for a crash. It may sound a bit brutal, but it works."

Squadron Leader Broad has been at his present station more than a year and hasn't had a casualty yet. He had some in other stations, and says: "They go in batches. I don't know why."

PROMINENT N. Y. CITY CHURCHMAN TO SPEAK IN CITY

Rev. Dr. L. F. Foster Special Speaker at 66th Anniversary of Victoria Ave. Baptist Church

JOHN DEACON TO SING

The members of the Victoria Avenue Baptist church and congregation will celebrate their sixty-sixth anniversary on Sunday and the guest speaker for the day will be the Rev. Leland Foster Wood, M.A., Ph.D., of New York City. The minister of the church will conduct the services. Mr. John W. Deacon, minister of music, will sing at both services.

Leland Foster Wood is a native of New York State. He received his education at the University of Rochester, the Colgate-Rochester Divinity School, and the Graduate School of the University of Chicago. After graduating from Divinity School, Doctor Wood went to the Belgian Congo under the American Baptist Foreign Missionary Society. After a term in missionary work, he was called to the Colgate-Rochester Divinity School where for ten years he was Professor of Christian Sociology and the Rural Church. Being a specialist on the subject of marriage, he was called to his present post, which is chairman of the committee on Marriage and the Home in the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. Doctor Wood has written much on the Home and Marriage question and is an authority on the subject.

The minister of Victoria Avenue Church was a student under Professor Wood at the Divinity School in Rochester. He holds his former teacher in high regard.

Doctor Wood has been in Ontario under the auspices of the Ontario Religious Education Council. He has recently conducted conferences on his subject at Woodstock and Kingston.

The engaging story of Edna Ferber's career is told in her autobiography "A Peculiar Treasure". She begins with childhood days in Kalamazoo, Michigan and Ottumwa, Iowa, tells of her apprenticeship in journalism at the age of seventeen, followed by years of fame and fortune as a novelist. The life of the author of "Show Boat". "So Big" "Cimarron" is filled with vitality and colour. Her sanity, humour and love of freedom will speak with particular force at this time. For her book is above all the story of a Jewish family in America, starting with the incredible pre-war years and following through the aftermath to the crossroads of today. This book is a powerful defense of democracy of freedom and tolerance, interwoven with a spirit at once human and amusing.

The personal philosophies of a group of outstanding men and women of the time have been collected by Clifton Fadiman in the volume "I believe". The intimate credos of eminent novelists, explorers, philosophers, economists, humourists, and scientists reveal a cross-section of intellectual opinion. Here are orthodox believers, agnostics and aethists-optimists and pessimists. The ironies of Hendrik Van loon, Lin Yutang and George Santayana, the scientific humanist creed of Julian Huxley, the humane and Christian words of Jacques Maritain and the prophetic views of Thomas Mann combine to make a book of interest to any reader absorbed in the problems of our day.

In "With Malice Toward Some", the faults and foibles of the English were exposed to the laughter of American manner in his book "I lost my English accent". No casual visitor who after a few weeks as lecturer on American platforms, rushes home to proclaim himself an authority, but a resident of America for six years as correspondent for the London Daily Express. He explorers New York from Harlem to Park Avenue, meets the President, visits Chicago and pierces the mask of cafe society. The royal tour as it appeared to a newspaperman aboard the pilot train will offer many amusing chuckles for the reader.

"Apes, men and morons" by Dr. Earnest Albert Hooton of Harvard is a book written after a lifetime of analysing man. The author in lucid style wrote first of man's evolution physically and mentally, then of his relation to physical and social environments—the question of race, and lastly of the unpleasant problem of the degenerative trends of human evolution. He inquires into the causes for these unfortunate tendencies and discusses ways of correcting them. Dr. Hooton's lectures have always led to widespread comment on the front pages of the New York Times and Herald Tribune and readers will find his book equally stimulating.

CANADA'S OUTPUT LEAD, ZINC, SOLD TO BRITAIN

Arrangements for Duration Says Ministry of Supply In Making Announcement

Ministry of Supply Would Not Amplify Statement and Gives No Details of Arrangements

ATTACKS DISCUSSED

Bombers Not in Convoy Too Vulnerable to Fast Attack Planes for Profitable Mass Bombing

London, Nov 6 — (CP-Cable)—The British Government has arranged to purchase Canada's entire output of lead and zinc for the duration of the war after all Canadian domestic demands are met

The Ministry of Supply, in making the announcement today, gave no details and would not amplify its brief statement.

Toronto, Nov. 6 CP) — Canada produces about $15,000,000 worth of lead and about $12,000,000 of zinc annually, a total of $27,000,000. The bulk of it is mined in British Columbia with Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company the chief producer.

Announcement was made last week that the British government had contracted to take Canada's output of copper over the domestic requirements. Canada produces about $60,000,000 in copper annually. The price was not given officially but financial circles hear the price to be paid for the copper is about 10.18 [illegible] pound net at the Canadian [illegible]. This is practically the price ruling when the war broke out.

London, Nov. 6—(CP) — British military experts predicted today that large scale, long-range bombing attacks in the second Great War would await development of "distance" fighting convoys.

These sources contended that Germany's few "exploratory" raids on Great Britain's naval bases has proved that bombers not in convoy were too vulnerable to fast attack planes for profitable mass bombing forays.

The average modern fighting plane—that of any nation—it was said, might have a range of 650 miles without refuelling. It is about 300 miles from the British Isles to Germany. This is too far, it was said, for a safe margin for manoeuvring of invading fighting planes.

BURGOMASTER OF BRUSSELS DIES

Adolfe Max, 70, Has Held Post Since 1909 and Was Imprisoned by Germans

Brussels, Nov. 6—(AP)—Adolfe Max, 70, Burgomaster of Brussels, who was imprisoned by Germany during the first Great War and who had held office continuously ever since, died today.

Max had been Burgomaster of Brussels since 1909. He won world fame for his resistance to the German invaders in August, 1914. Refusing even to shake hands with the German commander, Max continuously protested infringment of Belgian civil rights and slept in his office rather than surrender his authority.

In September the Germans arrested him and kept him in a German prison until the war was over. Max managed now and then to smuggle out messages to his city and with Cardinal Mercier was one of the leaders credited with keeping alive Belgian nationalism during the German occupation.

Rejoicing greeted his return in 1918 to Brussels.

It was apparent that Norwegian officials, anxious over the possibility that Germany might make an issue over the case, would like to see the ship outside Norwegian waters bound for anywhere.

BRITISH, FRENCH NAVIES IN CLOSE CO-OPERATION

Winston Churchill Pays Four-Day Visit to France and Issues Statement

FRENCH NAVY STRONG

London, Nov. 6—(CP)— Close and increasing co-operation of the British and French Navies and the strength of the French Fleet was stressed in an official statement issued here Sunday at the conclusion of a four-day visit to Paris of the First Lord of the Admiralty, Winston Churchill.

The statement said, in part:—

"The visit of Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, to Paris, and his conversation with Cesar Campinchi, French Minister of Marine, and Admiral Jean Darlah, Commander of the French Naval Forces, emphasizes the close co-operation of the French and British Navies in the fight against Germany.

"The French Navy today is a strong and highly efficient force. It is stronger in every arm than the German Navy and its composition is peculiarly well suited to combat German methods of sea warfare, since French realism never lost sight of the fact that Germany would one day return to the attack on the western democracies.

U. S. May Authorize Economic Pressure Against Japan in 1940

Washington, Nov. 6 (AP)—A prediction that the United States Congress in 1940 might follow up the administration's neutrality program, now in full operation, by authorizing economic pressure against Japan was made today by legislative leaders.

Chairman Key Pittman (Dem-Nevada) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said that unless relations with Tokyo improve before the Japanese-United States Commercial Treaty expires Jan. 26, Congress undoubtedly would enact his resolution empowering the President to embargo "any or all" exports to Japan.

"It is entirely fair that Japan should be warned of the ides of January," said Pittman. "Her entire attitude in China has been in total disregard of the rights of the United States and other countries."

Pittman was in the small group of Congressmen Saturday who saw Presiden Roosevelt sign the Neutrality Bill repealing the arms embargo and setting up a "cash and carry" system of trade with warring nations. The legislation does not apply to the undeclared Sino-Japanese conflict, however, because President Roosevelt never has found formally that a state of war exists in the Orient.

Combat Area Designated.

After signing the neutrality measure, the President exercised the discretionary powers it gave him to designate most European waters as a combat area which United States ships and travellers could not enter. He also ordered that belligerent submarines keep away from United States ports, except in cases of emergency.

By signing the bill, Mr. Roosevelt cleared the way for a flood of arms orders from belligerents, especially Great Britain and France. Estimates of initial purchases from those two powers have run between $500,000,000 and $1,000,000,000.

All the goods will have to be transported in foreign ships, for the President defined as the combat area a broad zone extending north from Spain around Great Britain and Ireland to the Norwegian coast south of Bergen.

The proclamation thus forbids American shipping to neutral ports in Sweden, Denmark, the Netherlands and Belgium, in addition to the belligerent countries themselves.

"All neutral ports in the Mediterranean and Black Sea are open; likewise all ports, belligerent or neutral, in the Pacific and Indian Oceans and dependent waters and all ports in Africa south of the latitude of the Canaries," the President said.

Why The Weather?

Lightning and airships! Contrary to popular belief both airplanes and dirigibles are not liable to take fire upon being hit by lightning if the ship has an all metal frame. Many experiments have been made with airplanes and with heavier-than-air ships filled with highly inflammable hydrogen gas by passing electric charges through them. It seems that the charges pass through the metal parts and out again without in the least injuring passengers or ship. The metal frame should be welded or at least well riveted. Additional safety is obtained by connecting all metal parts with heavy copper wire, thus affording a safe and easy path for the electric charge. The entering flash may be localized by using pointed metal rods suitably placed.

Signal Failure in Attempt to Stop British and Neutral Ships Reaching British Ports

SHIPYARDS BUSY

British Losses in Merchant Ships to Date 55, and French 7 Vessels

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Nov. 6—(CP Cable) — Britain has lost 55 merchant ships aggregating 238,793 tons since the outbreak of war, the Admiralty announced today. That represents 1 1-2 per cent of Britain's total merchant fleet.

French losses have been seven ships of 47,933 tons aggregate, while neutral nations have lost 34 ships of 93,823 tons.

Despite these losses naval authorities insist Germany's U-boat camapign has been unsuccessful since the first few days of the war, when submarines caught unprotect... vessels on the sea lanes.

An Admiral said today that "Germany's determination to stop British ships and neutral ships trading into British ports has failed signally."

He went on to say that while British ships still sailed the Seven Seas, Germany's merchantmen were confined to the Baltic and territorial waters, which could be reached from the Baltic.

The first two weeks of the war saw the biggest losses to U-boats. In the first week Britain lost 15 ships of 64,000 tons, the second week 16 ships of 67,000 tons. Since then the weekly totals have dropped steadily. In the last week three ships of 18,000 tons aggregate, have been torpedoed.

At the outbreak of the war Britain had 18,500,000 tons of merchant shipping, so losses through submarines and mines have not greatly damaged her, let alone crippled her. Ship-building yards all along the coast are working 24 hours a day to make up the losses.

Rumania Expels Correspondent

Budapest, Nov. 6—(AP) — Ferdinand O. M. John, who was United States correspondent in Bucharest, arrived here today after being expelled from Rumania.

Rumanians said their government took action against him because of "official displeasure" over his dispatches. Jahn said no official reason was given for his expulsion.

Jahn, Austrian-born, now is a German citizen.

The United Press said Jahn reported the Rumanian Gobernment Press director told him informally that the government was disleased with his account of Crown Prince Michael's 18th birthday celebration Oct. 25.

That dispatch, it said, contained a reference to Michael's "mild romance last summer with a commoner."

Asks Instructions be Issued to All Officials to Destroy Patronage Lists

Ottawa, Nov. 6 (CP)—Claiming that Prime Minister Mackenzie King's pledges to banish patronage during the war are not being carried out, Conservative Leader Manion declared today that unless patronage is stopped he will bring it before parliament at the next session.

In a prepared statement Dr. Manion followed up charges he made last week that patronage continues to operate in the granting of contracts and appointments to positions.

Fire Destroys Plainfield Orange Hall on Sunday

One of County's Oldest Landmarks and Scene of Many Political Battles Prey to Flames During the Morning

PARTIALLY INSURED

Battleground of many a historic Hastings County political fray, and one of the old landmarks of that part of the district, the Plainfield Orange Hall, property of Lodge No. 179 L.O.L., was totally destroyed by fire shortly after eight o'clock yesterday morning. Approximately two hundred chairs, tables and other furnishings were also prey to the flames that swept rapidly through the frame structure in spite of the efforts of a large number of residents to save the contents.

Although the building was insured, it will not cover the loss incurred, officials of the lodge stated this morning.

Fires had been lighted in two large box stoves that supply heat for the building, early yesterday morning, preparatory to Sunday School and church services to be held there while interior decorations are being made to Plainfield United Church.

SWEDEN WOULD KEEP BALTIC OPEN

Germany Announces Intention to Mine Baltic Within 3 Miles Swedish Coast

Stockholm, Sweden, Nov. 6—(AP)—Sweden was said today to be seeking through negotiations in Berlin to keep the Baltic open for navigation.

Germany's announced intention to extend her mine fields to within three miles of the Swedish coast in Oro Sound virtually would close the sea to large vessels since ships with more than 11-foot draft must stay outside that zone to escape danger of grounding.

Until now Germany has respected Sweden's insistence on a four-mile limit.

(In Denmark, meanwhile, windows were said to have been smashed by the explosion of German mines in a field of 30 which broke loose and were swept ashore by a high wind.)

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

One of the significant developments on the diplomatic front in the past week was the exchange of letters of friendship between Italy and Greece. Relations between these two states have been far from friendly over a period of years and Italy's seizure of Albania last Easter was regarded by Greece as a threat. It brought Italian forces across the Adriatic Sea and right up to the western Greek frontier.

Greece is one of the Balkan states which enjoys a guarantee from Great Britain and France and is allied with Turkey which in turn has a treaty of mutual assistance with the Western Powers. Thus the arrangement between Italy and Greece, apart from soothing over old disputes brings Germany's now silent Axis partner a step closer to the western democracies.

United States, Norway and Finland Mentioned by British Press

HITLER FOILED

London, Nov. 6 (CP)—The press today expressed satisfaction at the recent policies of neutral governments, particularly the United States, Norway and Finland.

"As long as neutral countries allow themselves to be intimidated by the Nazis," the News Chronicle said editorially, "the allied battle against German aggression is bound to be hampered.

"Norway has now set a splendid example of courage and independence to the neutral world. Finland, too, is providing an impressive spectacle of firmness in the face of threats.

Thousands of Fox Hunters Stake a Claim for Tent Home

Cut-And Shoot, Tex., Nov. 6 (AP)—Thousands of fox hunters, eager for a zestful chase and a few days' camaraderie, bore down upon this little community today to stake a claim for a tent home.

A picturesque city emerged deep in the pine country of southeast Texas as each hunter picked out a favored spot, grabbed a tent from a trailer, seized hammer and stake and set to work.

Down 12 miles of dusty road from Conroe, bustling oil town, the caravan of cars and trailers—loaded with food, equipment, horses and hounds—had come for the field trials of the Texas Fox and Wolf Hunters Association.

It wasn't long before the general camp site—a mile square—was alive and kicking, but the pioneer aspect appeared only in the tents.

For this was a modern canvas village.

Pipes had been laid to furnish running water; a rolling power house supplied electricity; ice boxes and cooks were almost as numerous as baying hounds, and a camp restaurant was ready to dish out hamburgers and soft drinks.

Rope corrals and wire kennels dotted the clearing, and negro cooks, many brought from home miles away, sang over barbecue and steaming coffee.

Cluster of hunters formed about campfires and handshakes started again the ripening of friendships; companionship to many is almost as important as the trials themselves.

The affair—one of the biggest of its kind in the country—formally begins tonight with the bench show. The first cast in the field will come at daybreak tomorrow. Beside the native game, hunters will have a chance to chase 25 fox released especially to insure good hunting.

Germany Attempts To Close European Supply Sources

French Economic Experts Express Skepticism of Scheme as Nations Involved Lack Tin and Oil Products

Germans Driven from Unidentified Island in Rhine River by Fire from Heavy Mortars—Skirmishes Quite General

Paris, Nov. 6 (AP)—French economic experts said today Germany is attempting to close European supply sources to Great Britain and France in hope of offsetting the Allied blockade and the United States' repeal of the arms embargo.

They expressed skepticism, however whether Germany could organize such a "continental blockade."

Germany would corner the economic aid of the neutral nations of Europe if she succeeded, they declared, since the plan envisages a bloc including Soviet Russia, the Netherlands, Italy and the Scandinavian and Balkan nations, all pledged to trade exclusively among one another.

But even if the entire group joined, the experts said, it was doubtful whether the plan could prove fully successful since those nations lacked sufficient amounts of such prime materials as cotton, tin and oil products.

CONVICTS TIME PRISON BREAK WITH BALL GAME

Break is Foiled but Guard Killed and Woman Visitor Hit by Pellet

ALL RECAPTURED

Jackson, Mich., Nov. 6 (AP)—A melodramatic prison break, foiled only after a guard was killed and a woman visitor wounded by a stray shot, prompted a state investigation today at Southern Michigan Penitentiary.

In fifty minutes packed with all the elements of a movie thriller, six convicts gained access to the prison roof Sunday and in the action that followed a guard was shot dead, a prison yard football game was hurriedly called off, and all six felons were captured.

Presumably timing their plot to coincide with the football game, the six overpowered two guards and a prison officer in a manoeuvre to flee over the walls.

By the time five had clambered down a crude ladder of rope and pipe, the alarm was sounded and the prison exercise lot, where 3,000 convicts watched the game, was cleared.

Three of the fleeing felons—Sam Sawaya, 26, and George Bodie, 28, robbers, and Malcolm Stokes, rapist—dashed into a guard's car. Chief Guard Inspector Fred Boucher, 54, tried to halt them, and was killed by a shotgun blast.

Struck In Face With Pellet.

A second shot went wild, and Mrs. Dorothy Roberts, visitor at the prison, was struck in the face by a pellet. She was only slightly hurt.

Prison officials said the shotgun was that taken from Russell Day, roof tower guard whom the six overpowered after gaining the roof by tricking him into believing his relief guard was on hand.

The three, in the car belonging to Day, sped off, leaving their fellow conspirators behind. A chase of a mile and a half ended with their surrender after a revolver shot tore open a tire on the fugitives' machine.

Meanwhile, guards captured Paul Lawman, 33, and John L. Sullivan, 35, both serving robbery terms, near the prison wall, and Leo Thifault, 24, also a robber, fell captive as he hid behind a cupola on the room.

Warden Harry Jackson suspended Guard Day, "pending investigation".

DRIFTING MINES REACH SHORE

Scouting Planes Count 150 Mines in Oro Sound Today

Copenhagen, Nov. 6 — (AP) — Drifting mines torn loose from German fields during recent high winds reached the outskirts of Copenhagen today.

Several rolled ashore on the Island of Amager, which forms the Southern district of Copenhagen. Two exploded when they struck rocks near Vemmetofte, twenty miles south. No damage was reported.

Crews on land, sea and the air battled against the advance of mines. Scouting planes circling over the coast and in the Oro Sound, between Denmark and Sweden, counted 150 mines.

A derelict barrage balloon also drifted across Danish waters, dragging its cable and wrecking several telephone lines on northern Jutland.

THEFT OF CAR RUGS PREVALENT IN CITY

The looting of parked automobiles in Belleville continued over the week end when a motor rug and a kit bag full of tools was removed from an automobile, owned by Morley Smith of this city and parked in a city parking lot on Saturday evening. There has been a centred raid by auto thieves directed towards the stealing of motor rugs, left in parked cars in this city of a recent date. Today Chief Kidd issued a warning when he advised all motorists to securely lock their motor cars during periods of parking; whether it be at home or in the downtown areas. Mrs. Matthews, Chatham Street, also reported the theft of an Afghan rug from the verandah of the home. Mrs. Matthews saw a man hastening across the East Belleville playgrounds with the rug beneath his arm yesterday.

VALUABLE COW'S LEG FRACTURED

A valuable cow, the property of Thomas Leslie, fourth concession of Thurlow, had to be destroyed yesterday after being struck by a motor car, driven by Horace Yateman of Windsor. Mr. Yateman, who had been visiting relatives in Thurlow Township, was driving westerly along the concession road, when the cow, which was being driven from pasture by Mr. Leslie, wandered into the path of Mr. Yateman's car. Sergeant H. C. Thompson, of the O.P.P., investigated. The animal had a fractured front leg as the result of the collision.

Pipe Guard Rail Saves Car From Plunge to Creek-Bed 8 Ft. Below

Picton, Ont., Nov. 6 (Special) — With the front half of their car suspended over the side of the Cherry Valley Bridge and prevented from crashing to the jagged rocks of the creek-bed eight feet below by a slim iron pipe-rail, Private Arthur Johnson, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, and the Misses Mary and Jean McKibbon, escaped serious injury on Sunday afternoon, after their automobile had been sideswiped by a "hit-and-run driver."

Johnson, county police stated, when attempting to pass the unidentified car on the bridge, had been forced to the side of the structure, crashing into the pipe rail and smashing headlights, running boards and fenders. The other motorist quickly sped from the scene of the accident.

The front of the Johnson car was forced over the side of the bridge, and balanced there, the bent pipe rail holding it in check and preventing a more serious accident. Occupants of the car escaped with a shaking-up. It was the first trip in an automobile for Miss Mary McKibbon, since her discharge from hospital, where she had been receiving treatment for severe injuries received in a previous motor accident.

THE SUDDEN precipitation of what may prove to be a "golden opportunity," an open-sesame to the long-dreamed-of land of heart's desire, is the augury based on this day's lunar and mutual aspects. There are signs of quite unforeseen and unpredistable events, which will occur with really devastating force. The outcome will be happy and profitable if clear judgment is observed and there is a justified outlay of funds. Extravagance and rash moves, as well as some underlying deceptions, might interfere with unusual openings for progress, adventure and romance. But radical change in either the physical outlook or the mental outlook is assured on this day.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of sudden and quite unexpected events which will have a direct bearing on the future and its fortunes. It is advised that due consideration be given alluring dangers or debatable intrigues. Lavishness in outlay of money might be a defeating factor to this grand surprise.

A child born on this day may have unusual talents, with originality and independence of thought and action. It may be adventurous and romantic, with intellectual leanings to the ocult, metaphysical or scientific experimentation.

Paisley Shawl Heirloom Used in Baptismal Service at St. Thomas'

A beautiful Paisley shawl, made in England over a century ago, took part in the baptismal service at St. Thomas' Church yesterday morning.

Originally the property of the late Mrs. E. Cook, mother of Mrs. Jack Clarke, James street, and Mrs. Ernest Martin, Church street, Belleville, the shawl has been handed down in the family and has been used in the baptism of every member of the family thus far.

On Sunday it covered the tiny form of Eleanor Jane Clark, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarke, when she was christened, with four other infants by the Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, Vicar of St. Thomas' Church.

The shawl is still beautifully preserved. A long "fringe" four inches in length borders its edges, while the handsome pattern in red and other colors form a colorful contrast against the ivory whiteness of the shawl proper.

Children's Band Of St. Michael's To Give Concert

A queen's appreciation is something to be treasured and in the hearts of seventeen Belleville boys and girls, who comprise the band of St. Michael's Academy, is the memory of a queen's smile and regal gesture of acknowledgement made from the back seat of a luxurious limousine.

The occasion was the visit of their Majesties to the city of Kingston on Sunday, May 21., 1939. Upper Canada's ancient capital was thronged with joyous multitudes, a deep throbbing sound of excited, jubilant humanity made itself heard like the muted bass notes of some great organ breaking into prelude later to crash into tumultuous sound as of great breakers crashing on a rocky beach as human voices spasmodically, enthusiastically cheered the temporal heads of a mighty empire of free peoples.

In front of the historic cathedral of the Immaculate Conception were princes and knights of the Holy Catholic Church making signs of spiritual blessing on the British Empire's temporal rulers—and holding a place of honour before these prelates in a position that could not go unnoticed by their Majesties was the brilliantly garbed little band from the academy of St. Michael's. Each young heart was swelling with rapture as each made their instrument burst forth into paeans of welcome. They payed "Annie Laurie" and "My Highland Laddie." The good Scottish heart of the Queen was stirred and in the manner which has endeared her to the hearts of countless millions on this side of the Atlantic, she made acknowledgement with her hand and smiled so sweetly that that smile is enshrined as a personal message in the hearts of each lad and lassie to whom it was given.

The weeks passed. A letter was received bearing the armorial bearings of Windsor and written by Katharine Seymour, Lady-in-Waiting, on behalf of the Queen.

These were the contents:

"Her Majesty remarked the excellence of your band after her visit to Kingston. I hope that the mention of Her Majesty's appreciation will give your band every encouragement.

Yours sincerely,
Katharine Seymour,
Lady-in-Waiting."

Needless to say this encouragement has served to make each youngster strive for perfection in the mastery of his or her instrument. Under the coaching of Sister Mary Mercedes they have steadily progressed in musical mastery and the public wil lhave a chance to hear for themselves just what degree of proficiency they have attained since they last played before the King and Queen.

A band concert is to be held in the Academy on Friday of this week, November 10th. The youngsters will be assisted on the programme by that very fine tenor, John Deacon, and by that very excellent baritone, Harold Barrett.

Everybody is welcome. You will thrill to the sensitivity and skill with which the children interpret the various band numbers. The quality of voice of the vocal artists is well known. Mr. Deacon has a mastery and range, that has earned him the plaudits of the musical world in both Canada and the United States both on the concert stage and over the radio. The same can be said of Mr. Barrett although the latter has not travelled so far afield.

We recommend this programme. We feel that you will miss something worth while if you do not attend this band concert on Friday, November 10th.

TWO BREAK-INS OCCUR IN CITY

Stolen Truck and Cash Register Recovered Soon After Robberies

Robbers broke and entered two Belleville places of business and stole small amounts of cash last night, using a stolen truck in which to escape with a cash register taken at Blue's Store, situated at the corner of Chatham and Bridge Sts. The stolen truck and cash register were later recovered, police revealed today.

Entrance to the Uptown Tire store, near No. 2 fire hall, was made by means of climbing over the door transom. Here the cash register was opened and $2.00 in small change taken.

Shortly after 1.30 am. today Ivan Scott, 184 Victoria Ave., was awakened by the sound of shattered glass. Mr. Scott arose from his bed and upon looking out of the window of his home, saw two men carry "a box" from the direction of Gordon Blue's East Bridge St. store and place it in a truck. Later the truck speeded away with the two men. Mr. Scott immediately notified the police and at the same time Adrian Cruji, Bleecker Ave. and proprietor of the Belle Cleaners, informed police his company truck had been stolen from the top of Queen St.

Constables Taylor and Thompson investigated the breakin at Mr. Blue's store and found robbers had broken a front store window and gaining entrance had stolen the store cash register, which doubtless was "the box" which Mr. Scott saw being placed in the truck. Subsequent searches at that time brought no light upon the matter. Some time later, however, Mr. Cruji's truck was found abandoned on the East Belleville playgrounds.

Shortly after 6.00 a.m. today Sergeant Arthur Harman and P. C. Evans found the stolen cash register which had been opened, rifled and tossed into the ditch at the north end of Herchimer Ave. Only some small change in silver money had been left in the cash register, Mr. Blue told police. The cash register had been damaged, while the robbers were opening it. Police are convinced that the same parties are responsible for both break-ins, at Blue's and the Uptown Tire shop.

Study Club Plans For Active Season

The executive of the Belleville Lecture and Study Club met at the home of Miss Templeton on Friday evening with an almost complete attendance. The plans for the year were discussed and it was unanimously decided to offer as formerly a course of lectures in current history and modern political and economic problems. The secretary was instructed to contact the Extension Department of Queen's University to secure the services of Professor W. McIntosh, head of the Department of Political Economy to give a lecture on "How Canada Can Finance the War" and of Professor Gerald Graham who returned recently from a visit to Germany and the Balkans States. Both these lecturers are well and favourably known locally. Under the leadership of Mr. P. C. McLaurin, who is president and Dr. E. Locke, vice-president, the club is looking forward to a year of interesting study of the swiftly changing and puzzling modern scene.

Police Blotter

Picton police reported the theft of a 1928 model Chevrolet motor car over the week end. The vehicle was equipped with Ontario licence plates number 362 B 2.

Constables Arnott and Thomson hastened to the Globe Cafe, Front Street, shortly after midnight on Saturday where disturbances were reported. Upon the arrival of the authorities Charles Jamieson, West Moira Street, was found to have been struck during altercations with an unknown assailant. Jamieson was struck in the face during the melee.

Mrs. Wm. Worrell, 120 Station Street, informed police that some person had broken a window in her home, reached through the broken space and stole a mantel model radio.

While patrolling his beat early today P.C. Ellis found a side window leading into the Odorless Cleaners had been broken. Subsequent investigations in company with Mr. Wickett, the proprietor, revealed no entrance had been made however.

Several drunks ran afoul of the law on Saturday night and were arrested on charges of breaches of the L.C.A. in today's police court.

POLICE COURT

Cpl. Hugh Fullarton, of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, today pleaded guilty of taking a motor car without the owner's consent as he was arraigned before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C. for the third time on the same charge.

"This soldier had been drinking and I understand he meant no harm, but there was a slight accident resulting from his driving," revealed Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C

"I will suspend sentence for three months upon the payment of any repair costs necessary as the result of this man's actions," continued His Worship as he cancelled the soldier's driving privileges for three months also. The costs amounted to $30.00 in all.

Several inebriates, who had imbibed freely but not well over the week-end, appeared and were assessed ten and costs after tendering pleas of guilty.

Pictures of Royal Tour Attract Large Crowd

That the visit of Their Majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth to Canada last May, still holds a warm spot in the hearts of residents of this city was evidenced last night at Bridge Street United Church when a capacity crowd filled the auditorium and balcony to take part in the patriotic service and view the motion pictures of the Royal visit.

The pictures were given through the courtesy of the Toronto Daily Star and the Stewart-Warner-Alemite Corporation of Canada. They encompassed the visit from the time the Royal couple landed in Quebec, their historic trip across Canada; their gracious reception by the President of the United States and his people, and many other highlights of a tour that held the interest of the entire world.

While the films were shown in black and white instead of the popular technicolor, they brought out with clarity the many picturesque scenes visited by the Royal couple. The gracious charm of Queen Elizabeth and the manly mien and smiling personality of King George were clearly depicted as they greeted their Canadian people.

The proceeds of a collection went to the local hranch of the Red Cross.

BRITISH, FRENCH

Seven Capital Ships

"At the outbreak of the war France had seven capital ships in commission. Of these, two are fast battle cruisers of 26,000 tons, armed with 13-inch guns. They are well suited for dealing with Germany's pocket battleships, and were in fact built as 'replies' to those ships.

"The co-operation of the French and British Navies has been close since the very beginning of the war. To some extent the co-operation of the two navies was facilitated by the experience gained by units of both fleets in their activities undertaken to prevent any spread of the Spanish War.

Work in Close Liaison

French and British ships have been working in close liaison in establishment and maintenance of patrols and provision of convoy escorts as well as in prosecution of the offensive against German U-boats.

"The French Navy has also been playing an important part in the interruption of German maritime trade and the capturing of German merchant vessels on the high Seas. In this connection the capture by a French submarine of the German merchant ship Chemnitz and the escorting of that ship into a French harbor has made submarine history."

White Swan Feeds With Wild Duck Flocks Of West Lake, P. E. Co.

Its long neck arching gracefully as it feeds with its adopted families, a beautiful white swan has made its appearance in the wild duck marshes of West Lake, hunters reported over the week-end.

Apparently a self-appointed guardian over the lare flocks of ducks that daily swoop down to feed in the marshy areas of the lake, the swan refuses to be frightened away by the gunfire of hunters.

And thus far, it is reported, the bird has been immune to the shell fire of the nimrods. Large numbers of the curious have made the journey with hunters to get a glimpse of the large bird, the origin of which thus far is a mystery.

All Canadian Bacon Requisitioned by Gov't

Ottawa, Nov. 6—(CP)—All Canadian bacon arriving in the United Kingdom since the first week of September has been requisitioned by the British Ministry of Food, the Dominion Agriculture Department said last night.

The net return on this bacon, however, has been lower than the pre-war returns, despite a higher price, owing to increases in cost of ocean freight, marine insurance and exchange.

The Department said that the various prices quoted by the British Ministry of Food are selling prices to the trade for bacon released by the Ministry for sale to the civilian population in the United Kingdom and this may bear no definite relationship to the actual price being paid for Canadian bacon.

SIDNEY JUNIOR FARMERS HEAR EDITORS OF FARM PAPER

G. D. McCullough and Sixteen Others Presented With Prizes in Home Improvement Contest

PICTURES SHOWN

Foxboro, Nov. 6 (Special)—Featuring Miss Ethel Chapman, Ladies Editor of the "Farmer" magazine, as the guest speaker for the occasion and also introducing many other prominent speakers for short talks, the Sidney Junior Farmers wrote an appropriate and successful "finis" to their first attempt at sponsoring the "Farmer's" popular province - wide "Farm Home Improvement" contest, when, on Friday evening, Nov. 3rd at Wallbridge, they brought the summer's keenly contested "clean up, paint up" campaign to a close with the formal presentation of prizes to the victorious district contestants.

With Mr. Grant Longwell, popular young president of the Junior Farmers' Club, excelling himself in capacity of chairman and song leader, the evening's program [illegible] under way with everyone rising and singing "O Canada." Following this, such old time favourites as "Down by the Old Mill Stream", and "Roamin' in the Gloamin'", were sung with such enthusiasm as to prove a thoroughly aroused audience. In his chairman's address, Mr. Longwell assured his audience that the purpose for which the meeting was called needed no introduction and after thanking the judges, Mr. J. O. Herity, Mr. Hunter of the Swift Canadian Company and Mr. Hefkey, Manager of the Royal Bank, for their invaluable assistance in bringing the contest to a successful conclusion, called upon Mrs. Casey Ketcheson, Pres. Women's Institute. to introduce the guest speaker of the evening.

Adult Education

With that calm composure and ease of manner which speaks of long experience as a public speaker, and with an unfailing touch of Irish humour that holds her audience, Miss Chapman proved her complete understanding of major problems facing rural residents in various parts of Canada. "The problem of Adult Education" loomed to her as one of the utmost importance", stated Miss Chapman as she listed the various ways in which this scheme could be carried out. "The usual procedure, however, is the establishment of "study groups" where any number of persons from six to seven to twenty get together once a week for the discussion of problems existant among country residents." She told of a visit to Nova Scotia during the past summer and of how she had been struck with the advances that the Co-operative movement had made in that part of Canada. She told how soil surveys, and the application of the necessary fertilizer, had increased production of their farm lands and how "credit unions" had been started and also how many other Co-operative industrial enterprises had begun as the direct result of the inspiration given by this movement.

In continuing her talk on "adult education", Miss Chapman said that this could take the form of cultural education where each "study group", devoted their time to music and from time to time staged musical festivals for the entertainment of the community, or possibly other groups would be interested in dramatics, and if so, they could stage dramatic festivals. "Whatever the topic or study chosen for each week's discussion, there are up-to-the-minute pamphlets to be had for the very nominal charge of ten cents per copy" stated Miss Chapman, "while if any were interested in foreign affairs, she advised the purchase of Norah Wand's "Reading of the Stars", which illustrated very clearly the difference between Democracy and other forms of government."

Neighbourliness Stressed

Miss Chapman stressed neighbourliness as one of the essential requisites of community life and gave as an illustration what had happened in a little Nova Scotia hamlet where a Belgian family had taken up residence. It was left to the president of the Women's Institute to welcome the new arrivals but she had been very busy and had not yet been able to fulfill her duties, when one day she saw the Belgian woman going down the road toward the village. She ran to the door and beckoned for her to come in but the woman did not understand and walked on, so the resourceful Institute president rushed to the kitchen and grabbed up the teapot. "It doesn't matter if you don't understand the other's language", laughingly commented Miss Chapman, "when one woman beckons to another with a tea pot, she immediately understands." "After the present war we are going to have an immigration problem to contend with and such little courtesies as these will go a long way to make life more pleasant for the new arrivals."

"The staging of 'Folk Dances' is the easiest way to get people together", said Miss Chapman, "and this is the system used by the Leadership Schools in the Eastern Provinces of Nova Scotia. Forty-five minutes study on such topics as current events, handicrafts, etc, followed by a lecture from some outside speaker and closing with a sing song. For success with such "study groups", it is essential, however, that the right kind of leaders are secured but, fortunately, in almost every community there are plenty of potential leaders quite capable of stepping into such a position, and holding the interest of the individual groups." "Seeing your neighbours every week," assured Miss Chapman in closing, "is one of the surest ways of restoring community life."

J. O. Herity Heard

Mr. J. O. Herity was the next speaker and he warmly approved of Miss Chapman's address, stressing the value of "adult education", and the need for more neighbourliness in our community life. Previous to his being enlisted as a judge in this "Farm Home Improvement" contest, Mr. Herity laughingly confided that he had always considered the job as one of few responsibilities and with a large salary attached. but he had been sadly deceived. Since then he had discovered that there was a great deal of responsibility attached and so far he had not seen any salary. In explaining how the judging of the contest was accomplished, Mr. Herity stated, that it was not the initial excellence of the property which counted, but rather it was the improvements that were effected between the times of the first viewing and the final judging. "Undoubtedly it was "keeping up with the Joneses" that provided the incentive for many of the improvements," said Mr. Herity, "but, altogether, we were struck with the closeness of the competition which resulted in tied positions." In closing, Mr. Herity introduced Mr. Hodge, editor of the "Farmer", as the next speaker.

Mr. Hodge very modestly disclaimed any personal glory in the carrying out of the "Farm Home Improvement" contest, stating that he had merely instigated the movement, which has resulted in so much beautification of farm property. "Without such organizations as your Junior Farmers, this movement would not be possible," stated Mr. Hodge, "but with Agricultural Societies, Women's Institutes and Rotary Clubs taking the responsiblity for staging the contest in each locality, the interest had now mounted till this year there were 47 different municipalities represented, with the winner in each group being eligible for competition in the provincial contest. Your own winner, Mr. G. D. McCullough of Foxboro, placed seventeenth in this competition which, in a field of 47 contestants, is not so bad." In closing, Mr. Hodge stated that owing to the war it was at first thought advisable to discontinue the contests, but upon further consideration they had decided to continue as usual in 1940.

Films Shown

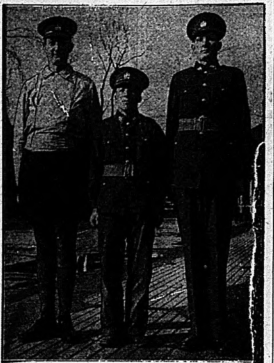
Great enthusiasm was shown by the audience as Mr. Hodge and District Agricultural Representative, Mr. L Pair of Stirling, projected on the screen, snapshots of the Sidney contest entrants' property. Through the use of before and after pictures, the screen clearly showed the transformation effected through the judicious planting of shrubbery and flowers, as well as the difference that a coat of paint can make. After the local pictures were shown, Mr. Hodge projected on the screen beautiful full color transparencies of all the winners in the provincial contest, including Mr. McCullough's residence which placed seventeenth.

Major Smith and Mr. MacDonald of the Wawanesa Fire Insurance Company spoke briefly, emphasizing the importance of fire prevention. Major Smith stated that they were vitally interested in the contest sponsored by the "Farmer" magazine and, as a means to help preserve the property of contest winners from possible loss by fire, had persuaded the "Farmer" ,to allow them to contribute money towards a "Reduction of Fire Hazard", contest. It afforded them great pleasure they said, to present to Mr. McCullough the third prize of forty dollars, which was due him because of the way he had reduced the fire hazard around his place to a minimum.

Township Council Thanked

Mr. Lynn Fair also spoke briefly, expressing thanks to Miss Chapman and Mr. Hodge for their interest in the local contest and their fine addresses. He also thanked the Township council for their grant of $25 towards the contest and also thanked the Women's Institute for their assistance.

Mr. Hodge then formally presented the "Farmer" prize of ten dollars cash to Mr. and Mrs. McCullough for placing seventeenth in the provincial contest. Sidney Township winners came in for their share of recognition when Mr. Fair presented the local prizes to the sixteen Sidney entrants.



ARMY'S TALLEST BROTHERS MAKE GOOD POLICE

When Douglas Smith of Belleville joined his brother in the ranks of the Hastings and Prince Edward regiment at Picton, officers decided they had the biggest pair of brothers in the Canadian army. Douglas (LEFT) is six feet, six inches tall, weighs 220 pounds, and hasn't a coat yet because it has to be specially tailored. J. R. Smith (RIGHT), is the same height, but weighs only 195. They dwarf Pte. Charles Ayres, who stands five feet, six. J. R. is already acting as a military policeman, while Douglas is slated for the same duty shortly.

HON. J.E. MICHAUD, MINISTER OF FISHERIES

Advertising and other promotional activities of the Department of Fisheries at Ottawa in the interests of this basic Canadian industry are being maintained without interruption notwithstanding war conditions. The Minister of Fisheries, Hon. J. E. Michaud, said at a recent conference in Moncton, N.B., that two important considerations are factors in this decision. It now becomes a matter of national importance that Canadian consumption of Canadian fish be increased over peace-time totals. The Department desires to assist in keeping the Dominion's trade and business normal. Early reports from central Canadian points, in particular, show sales of Canadian fish to have risen sharply since the outbreak of war in some cases as much as six times average volume.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Barefoot Boy"

Glorifying the American boy is the business of Monogram's "Barefoot Boy," now at the Capitol Theatre. A story of youth and its high code of honor, "Barefoot Boy" will recall many a nostalgic memory of the old swimming hole.

The picture concerns Billy Whittaker, a country boy, who has a gang and a girl and a flair for adventure. The kids spend their time in the happy, normal pursuits of childhood — fishing, swimming, hunting and investigating the neighborhood haunted house. Into their happy lives comes Kenneth Hale, spoiled city son of John Hale, just released from prison after serving a four-year sentence for bond stealing.

Billy's father put him on his honor to watch out for Kenneth, and show him the meaning of good sportsmanship. But Kenneth who has called his father a "jailbird" and refused to believe his protestations of innocence, refuses also to accept kindness and fair treatment from Billy and proceeds to steal his girl and prove himself a nuisance.

Finally Billy must prove his courage against Kenneth's challenge of cowardice, so the two of them, one midnight, enter the haunted house. When eerie noises issue from the ghostly rendezvous the rest of the gang decide to investigate, and the kids find that their "haunted" house is a gangsters' hideout.

A thrilling climax ensues as the gangsters discover the kids just when they have found the missing bands, and are about to clear John Hale.

The children's role demand intelligence and good acting sense, and these requirements are more than filled by Jackie Moran, playing the title role, Bradley Metcalfe, expert as the "bratty," Kenneth, Marcia Mae Jones, superb as the tomboy "Pige," who has a case on Billy, and Marilyn Knowlden, as Billy's sweetheart.

The "grown-ups" are interpreted by Ralph Morgan, as John Hale, Helen Mackellar, Claire Windsor, beautiful as ever, and Charles D. Brown, who creates a memorable moment in a short scene with his son, wherein he tells him the meaning of honor. He plays Billy's father.

"Barefoot Boy" was directed by Karl Brown from the original script of John T. Neville.

The picture took as its inspiration John Greenleaf Whittier's poem of the same name and on the same programme a crime club story "The Witness Vanishes" featuring Edmund Lowe and Wendy Barrie.

AT THE BELLE

"The Women"

Dramatically turning the spotlight on women, their lives and what they do with them, "The Women," starring Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford and Rosalind Russell and based on the smash Broadway stage play, begins next at the Belle Theatre.

The story, dedicated to the amusement of men and women alike, shows the fair sex in all of its moods and with all of its foibles. It finds her in swank beauty salons, in exclusive gown shops, in the privacy of boudoir and bath. It thrusts at her inclination to gossip and lauds her ingenuity.

Norma Shearer, appearing in the first modern society role she has done since "Riptide," is seen as Mary Haines, whose faith in her husband and love is given a terrific blow via the word-to-mouth campaign staged by Rosalind Russell as Sylvia Fowler, arch gossip. Joan Crawford portrays the "heavy," Crystal Allen, the initial characterization of this type in which she has appeared during her entire screen career.

The remainder of the one hundred women in the cast were drafted from top names of both stage and screen and include Mary Boland, Paulette Goddard, Phyllis Povah, Joan Fontaine, Virginia Weidler, Lucile Watson, Florence Nash, Muriel Hutchinson, Esther Dale, Ann Morriss, Ruth Hussey, Dennie Moore, Mary Cecil, Mary Beth Hughes, Virginia Grey, Marjorie Main, Cora Witherspoon and Hedda Hopper.

In the story of "The Women," Norma Shearer, happily married for eight years, finds it impossible to continue life with her husband after she discovers from idle beauty-shop gossip that he has become enamored of a perfume salesgirl, portrayed by Joan Crawford. Goaded on by Miss Russell as the gossiper, she finally goes to Reno to seek a divorce and the custody of her daughter, little Mary. Following the divorce, husband Stephen marries the "other woman," and broken-hearted Miss Shearer returns to New York. During the next year she discovers that all is not well in her husband's home and that his new wife is carrying on an affair with a cowboy radio crooner. Realizing that she should have fought in the first place, she decides to stage a late campaign to win him back again. Cleverly she tricks Joan Crawford into an admission of her infidelity and the fast-moving comedy-drama concludes on a happy note.

The picture combines the talents of two of Hollywood's outstanding men in the persons of Producer Hunt Stromberg and Director George Cukor. Stromberg numbers among his successes "Sweethearts," "Marie Antoinette" and "The Great Ziegfield," while Cukor has directed "Romeo and Juliet," "Camille" and "David Copperfield," among many other outstanding pictures.

"Thunder Afloat," Departs

Roaring, romantic adventure studded with thrills are revealed in "Thunder Afloat," featuring Wallace Beery, Virginia Grey and Chester Morris now being presented at the Belle with the Belle Newsreel, a funny Walt Disney, Mickey Mouse cartoon and "Hollywood Hobbies," with its intimate scenes of life in Hollywood.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Full Confession"

Victor McLaglen, Joseph Calleia, Sally Eilers and Barry Fitzgerald the featured players of the highly dramatic production, "Full Confession," now playing at the McCarthy Theatre, gives the best performances of their careers in a picture that reaches a new high in emotional entertainment.

In "Full Confession," Victor McLaglen assumes the same type of role which won him the Academy Award and wrote motion picture history in "The Informer."

In "Full Confession" he earns new laurels for his portrayal of a simple-minded, illiterate fellow whose dog-like devotion for Sally Eilers, a waitress, is apparently his only virtue. Joseph Calleia in the role of Father Loma, a kindly priest, gives a performance that captures the religious spirit so truly that never before has an actor been able to convince an audience so admirably, in such a difficult characterization, his portrayal is so perfect and so well handled that it should win for him in 1939 Academy Award. You will thrill to "Full Confession's" every amazing minute. It is a picture that is like a flaming page torn from the Book of Life. A masterpiece in screen entertainment. On the same program "The Jones Family in Hollywood," a full-length feature comedy that is loaded with hilarious fun and hearty laughs is the best to-date that this screen family have ever made. A Walt Disney "Donald Duck" technicolor cartoon completes the programme now at the McCarthy Theatre.

HITLER'S PLANS GO AWRY

It is to be remarked that Nazi No. 1 of Germany is not making many speeches. Had the events of the autumn gone as he intended, Poland would have been gobbled up but Russia would not have been invited into the feast on the remains of Poland, and the world would probably have had a Hitler lull until the next crisis would spring up, most probably in that tempestuous powder keg of the Balkans. He probably hoped to have Poland without a fight and he would be getting ready for another "peaceful conquest" during the winter or in the spring. But today he has Russia crowding him and making things none too easy for an ambitious Nazi leader and the self-exalted hero of Germany, while on the west front the land he has looked upon as his foe, namely France, despite his assurances of good will and the land he tried to keep out of a conflict, Britain, are armed against him, holding up his millions of men, blocking his seaports, sinking his U-boats, beating off with heavy losses his small attacking parties of bomb raiders and lowering his prestige in the world while all the time his supplies are diminishing, his food shrinking and German belts being tightened.

It was all because of ambition which defeats itself. Grab, browbeat and terrify the world which wanted peace, overrun innocent peoples, because they were in strategic positions next to Germany, and do it all with the clumsiest efforts which could not hide his hand. No nation was so gullible as to believe his crises originated anywhere but from the German Nazis. No one believed that German minorities were being maltreated in other lands. But Hitler talked of overflowing cups of misery of the poor Germans, all the while Nazi agitators were springing these ruses or crises, in Austria, Czechoslovakia, Memel, Danzig, and Poland. They had already started many crises which were to be developed in the future if his plain sailing had not run on a rock on September 3rd.

Today No. 1 Nazi would be making speeches, threatening the world and sounding the German drum, which he expected and hoped would never call his adopted fatherland to war, but for France and Britain.

The action of France and Britain closed his mouth. Now he has no time to prepare speeches for new crises. He vainly hopes to find a way to get rid of this nightmare of war he has pulled upon the German people, while burly Russia is like a very busy friend, looking after his own interests.

So while Hitler thinks it over and consults with his leaders, and the world waits, the season advances, and it marches toward winter.

Hitler now is but December, January and February away from the time when he could have sprung a spring crisis somewhere in the east, but his time is taken up with the abundance of the problems he has created in the past year and a half.

What will he do? Peace outlook has faded. Italy is looking after a neutral bloc in southern Europe. Turkey has declared herself and there in the west is that very substantial spectre, two great empires who form a good portion of the world, in arms, solid, undaunted, ready for whatever Nazi No. 1 may decide to do.

Hitler is so strange a type that he probably pities himself that the turn of events has treated him as it has given him a war because two peoples would not let him overrun democracy after democracy, small state after small state and finally having taken nation after nation into his camp and built up a bloated German Empire from the North Sea to the Mediterranean and from the Atlantic to the eastern confines of Europe and probably to the Indian Ocean and thence to the Pacific permit him ready quietly to make his last conquest of Europe, his present two enemies.

Justice has faced Hitler. Retribution is on his heels and he is the type that does not like to be haunted by delayed actions or plans that go awry. He is no Alexander, no Julius Caesar, no Napoleon, no conqueror of Empires as the coming months will show.

Hitler will never see in reality the empire of his wild, mad imaginings. His conquests will number but three weak states. All about him is the chorus of neutrals rejoicing in the solid wall which faces him in France and Britain. He hasn't a real friend in Europe.

Out of the clocklike technique he had developed in his mind for the expansion of Germany, his own folly has tricked him. His plans were not cleverly flexible. When he saw the trend in Poland and Britain and France he might have avoided disaster by backing down, but pride and bitterness would not allow that. A greater man would have given way but not the man who would risk all for selfish domination. The trickery he showed in his earlier plans was met by diplomacy and a spirit of justice which gave him warning. But the warning meant nothing. He saw a chance, it was Russia, and thinking of Italy as a "good friend cooling" he desperately grabbed for Russian co-operation. His mind was bent on action in Poland, and he took the chances. Something of the sentamentalism of the chancellor is seen in his words on September first when thinking only of himself, he spoke of putting on his uniform, never to take it off until victory or until death. It was at that time he said that if he fell Goering was to be his successor. In this one can read the character of the man who would be thinking of himself while speaking in the name of Germany.

THE WAR ON THE SEA

Less success than usual has been attained of late by the German U-boats, which are out in the ocean. It is evident that the close watch of the anti-submarine crews is making life too risky for the German under-sea craft. It is also apparent the foes of the U-boats are exacting a toll of these raiders which has a telling effect on the whole personnel of the German submarine service.

British ocean patrols are working with that precision which keeps the sea free and the under-sea raider that lurks for a lone ship has to devote precautions to itself.

Britain is in the meantime with the aid of the French fleet taking toll in contraband seeking to find a way into Germany. Over 560,000 tons have been diverted from its course which would have found its way into Germany but for the British blockade.

The strong arm of sea power is exerting its grip on the German economic situation. When it is counted what the Germans lose in diverted contraband, and how much less Germany's bare necessaries are, than her normal requirements, and also when it is considered what Germany is putting into engines of destruction which would even in that warlike state in peace days have gone into food, one can understand how the pinch must be making itself felt. With German expenditure in war of supplies which might normally be food, and with the effect of the blockade, and the small purchasing power of Germany which in favor with scarcely one nation, one can understand how anxious she would be to have food and war supplies flow in from Russia but Russia herself is not much more than self-supporting in even production of oil and perhaps not in the case of food.

WITH FINLAND

The charge made by the Soviet Press that Finland's foreign minister had directly threatened Russia is ridiculous to the world at large, were it not that it may portend events of a serious character. No one believes that Finland, a nation of a few millions and a small army, would threaten the vast millions of people of the Soviet Union and her large armies.

The Soviet organ, Pravda, says remarks of Foreign Minister Erkko could be appraised as nothing but an "appeal to war." What Erkko said was that Finland was agreeable to plans for improving the defences of Leningrad, but that any guardianship which a foreign power might receive over Finnish territory must be regarded as endangering Finnish neutrality.

Finland has been standing firm on her neutrality. It may be that Finland will fight if her rights are infringed. The situation has seemed to improve in the past two days.

How Germany and Russia look to one another from the standpoint of the Russo-Finnish controversy is a question. That Russia is trying to strengthen her defences, while Germany is in difficulty, although aiding economically the German Government and pledging such aid is generally accepted. That Germany and Russia can hardly see eye to eye in the developments is likely but the German need of cooperation by Russia is making Germany endure many things, which she probably hopes some day of upsetting if she by any means could end the war in the west.

The Scandinavian states, Norway, Sweden, and Denmark are all deeply interested as well as Finland. For the first time the entire Scandinavian peninsula's future is at stake. Of course that is natural in view of Hitler's expansionism, even if Russia were not taking a hand. But the war is Russia's opportunity and Germany's dreary hope.

Those four nations are small, but are independent in spirit and are making a united front. They however are as a unit small as compared with Russia. If trouble should develop, the whole circle would be doubtless completed about the Baltic as far as hostilities are concerned. Then Russia would be inevitably drawn into line with her armies alongside Germany's. Does Russia desire this? Many think she does not wish to take that step.

The Duke of Gloucester, chief liaison officer between the British Government and the army, knows soldier life for he has been trained in the army and he knows what Tommies want. He is also credited with bequoted the other day behind the lines at the ing the writer of a bit of verse which he western front:

"Life may be long; life may be short,
It all depends on Viscount Gort."

A pleasant event took place recently when several of the trustees of the Women's Christian Association waited upon Mrs. George Denmark and presented her with a certificate making her a life member of the Association. An address read by Mrs. J. J. B. A smash-up occurred at the G. T. R. station here about 1.30 o'clock this afternoon. A freight train was proceeding west when one of the cars jumped the track and as a result six cars were piled up on the station platform. No one was injured.

LIVELY LINES

Arthur L. Burke

In a land far away, lives a man so they say
Whose thirst for dominion is great,
The rules of his life are rooted in strife,
His heart is a cesspool of hate.

By fear he holds sway, his henchmen obey
His commands and bow to his power,
For belief there is room, that sealed is his doom,
The time-clock is striking the hour.

His goose-stepping horde, o'er the frontier has roared,
To vanquish, to plunder and burn,
When one little land is crushed by his hand,
Some other is ravished in turn.

He's murdered the Jew and banned the church too,
His religion is U-boats and guns,
He lives to deceive, no power can believe,
This cock-crowing lord of the Huns.

Greater war lords than he, have long ceased to be,
They visualized empires and might,
Some are still doing time near the scene of their crime,
While this one continues the fight.

But the old British Lion has left for the Rhine,
With his undaunted cubs at his side,
They'll fight till the last as they have in the past,
That peace in the world may abide.

This dictator too, will pass from our view,
On his headstone these lines grim and mute,
"Our Leader lies dead, but he was, be it said,
A good paperhanger to boot."

Relieving Mental and Physical Disturbances at the Menopause

As a woman approaches middle age and the menopause or "change of life" comes to mind, she has visions of some of her relatives with the distressing symptoms of hot flushes, sleeplessness, irritability, and excessive blood flow. Until the past few years, this condition was considered just "natural" something that must be faced and perhaps endured for a number of years.

Today physicians are equipped with a remedy that greatly lessens all the symptoms of the menopause and makes it possible for women to go about their home, social, or business life with a fair degree of comfort.

In an article on the treatment of the menopause, Dr. I. Henderson-Smathers, in Southern Medicine, reports results obtained in a group of women at the menopause receiving treatment by the use of extract of the ovary for periods ranging up to three and one-half years.

The most common symptoms occurring were hot flushes, irritability, exhaustion, emotional instability, backache, irritation of the genital parts, and sleeplessness.

After first giving treatment by injections of estrogen in oil three times a week, until improvement was noticed, the injections and amounts were decreased until but one injection each two weeks was given. Finally after two months of the injections, the estrogen was given by mouth in most cases.

"In the groups of patients under treatment for an average duration of 18 months, 20 out of 24 were completely relieved while under treatment and six remained free from symptoms six months to two years after treatment was stopped. Of those patients treated for a shorter time than 18 months, all obtained some relief."

When we think of how many women not only suffer from flushes, irritability, and exhaustion, but undergo such terrible mental disturbances that it is necessary for them to enter mental institutions, the use of this new treatment gives much for which to be thankful.

The idea behind the use of extract of ovary is that as it is the wasting away of the ovaries which is causing the symptoms, the giving of this extract of ovary prevents shock during the wasting process.

3 FUNDAMENTALS OF CHURCH, HOME SUBJECT OF TALK

Rev. Leland Foster Wood of New York Speaks at 66th Anniversary of Victoria Ave. Baptist Church

MUSICAL PROGRAM

"Seeking first the kingdom of God, whole-heartedness, and thinking first of others and not of self, are the three fundamental principles of Christianity in the church and the home," the Rev. Leland Foster Wood, M.A., Ph.D., of New York City told the morning congregation of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church in the first of a series of sermons commemorating the 66th anniversary of the church yesterday.

In simple eloquence devoid of bombast and flowery phraseology, the guest speaker brought out the many salient points of his address. "The church itself should be filled with Christian spirit and unselfish devotion to Christ. It should not speak in an attitude of rivalry and debate of other denominations. It should be in common spirit, brotherhood and Christianity with them so that the whole will be a glorious instrument in spreading the word of God on earth," he said.

"In the home, the church is the means to an end, it should develop that co-operation and fellowship so that the Christian spirit should dominate every family circle. Home is an atmosphere. It is not merely four walls."

Wholeheartedness.

"Wholeheartedness in the home, meant giving the best you have got," Dr. Wood said, "not merely asking for what we want. We must recognize it is our duty to give out whole love and devotion to every member of the family. Half-heartedness is a thing which Christians of today should preach against," he said. "In marriage, when the matter is sifted down, those who enter this state in a half-hearted manner do not get a half marriage, they only get a quarter.

"In the church everything will glow with life if its members are wholehearted. It is a source of vitality from which streams of saving influence will go out into the community," the speaker asserted.

Thinking of Others.

"It behooves each member of a family to be thoughtful and sensitive to the thoughts and needs of others," Dr. Wood told the congregation. "The real secret of family happiness is 'we-mindedness', not our-mindedness. One of the difficulties in homes today is the difficulty of some of the young people of this generation to understand the true standpoint of their parents towards them. And in reverse it is sometimes true that parents do not fully understand their offspring. A full complete understanding, especially in those young people just married, is necessary."

"No two people are utterly perfect," he said, "it is an established fact that both must make numerous adjustments to life if they are to avoid the wrong approach. Many of them have not learned the Christian point of view, and consequently any little rift that appears is blamed on the other. A complete equivalent of understanding is necessary or marriage may lead to serious consequences."

Some churches and homes were like the houses built in the Bible,—some on a rock and others on quicksand, the speaker pointed out. Many dwellings are humble but their spirit is superb, while others are pretentious structures built on the sands of irresponsibility. "The home is the foundation of the church, the community and the nation," he said.

Some churches have a vitality that is amazing. Like the little churches of the New Testament they have stood the test of storm and persecution, the winds of destruction and fury and have remained strong and true. They are meeting the challenge of life and spreading the word of God in the world.

Yet some, the speaker said, have every opportunity in their favor, but are not standing on a rock foundation. The word of Christ is not found here in the lack of group, association and even individual spiritual work. Churches like homes must be doers not bearers, Dr. Wood concluded.

The speaker addressed the congregation again Sunday night. A feature of the evening's service was the presence of a large group of boys from Kingston. Anthems by the choir and solos by John Deacon, were highlights of the musical parts of the anniversary services.

The Rev. Claude Troupe Olmstead, pastor of the church, appropriately introduced Dr. Wood.

$35,000,000,000 ASSETS OF ALLIES

Washington, Nov. 6 (AP)—Government circles predicted today that Britain and Frnace would use the gold portion of their estimated $35,000,000,000 assets in the United States for their first "cash and carry" purchases of American airplanes and ohter war supplies.

Initial Allied orders under the new neutrality law have been estimated by some officials as high as $1,000,000,000—all of which must be paid before the goods leave the country.

Use of their American securities and other assets was expected to be postponed in the hope of getting better prices and conserving as much as possible of their American investments.

oGld, which can be sold quickly at the United States Treasury at the fixed price of $35 an ounce, is the easiest method of payment. The British and French already have perhaps sa much as $500,000,000 in gold deposited in New York and Canada.

Officials aren't worrying about the Allies dumping their securities on American markets in any way that might depress prices.

May Set up Offices

Several officials expressed the opinion that the Allies probably would set up relatively small offices in New York, staffed with trained brokers, who would sell securities in driblets whenever a good price appeared available.

They also predicted that most of the sales would be made by direct negotiation with prospective buyers, instead of through the New York Stock Exchange where the transactions could be spotted by speculators.

The large investment trusts, in which funds of thousands of small investors are pooled for joint investment in large blocks of diversified securities, offer a prime market for pust such "quiet" sales. Insurance companies, wealthy individuals, large corporations with idle cash are some of the other prospects.

In the last war, J. P. Morgan's priavte bank handled the liquidation of British securities in this country, but it is not expected to do so this time.

Daily War Survey

The occupation of Albania gave Italy a foothold on the eastern shore of Adriatic. At the time it was regarded at worst as an act of reckless aggression and at best as a cold-blooded move to protect Italian investments in Albania.

Now, however, the possession of Albania makes it much simpler for Premier Mussolini to work out his apparent plan of establishign a peace bloc in the Balkans under Italian leadership and to combat Russian and German influence in that quarter.

It may or may not be due to Italy's power and efforts that the Balkan nations, once described as the "powder keg of Europe," remain at peace while war rages to the north of them and threatens even the normally secure Scandinavian states. How long they continue at peace is problematical having regard to Russian aspirations for the acquisition of the Roumanian province of Bessarabia.

THE RUNAWAY

by

"Gavin, I'm so glad to know all this—that explains it! I knew you wouldn't go to a place like that in your senses! But why not a hospital? It would have been infinitely better. You almost died," Rebecca said, childishly impressive, here eyes round.

"I'd have died if it hadn't been for you, my dear. Don't cry, Beck, you'll make me cry."

"I'm not crying," she said, gulping, trying to laugh, as she clung, half sitting, half kneeling beside him, his arm about her.

INSTALMENT 9

"Look here," Gavin said, "do you realize that tonight we'll be in a ploce of our own? If I take you to lunch at the St. Francis do you think you can cook me a steak for supper? Get pepper and bread and coffee and so on?"

"Gavin!" she said, her eyes stars. His cheek was hard against hers.

"Realize that you're my wife?"

"Uh-huh," she said almost inaudibly.

"Realize what that means?"

"Uh-huh," Rebecca said again, on a little laugh.

"Scared?".

"Nope."

There was a silence,—his—lips against her temple, her head resting in infinite content and relaxation on his shoulder. After a while Gavin returned briskly to his abandoned breakfast tray.

"Well, you get started, and I'll finish this, and we'll go down to the bank, and find some place to live, and hunt up a market right near, and move in," he said.

Rebecca danced rather than walked downstairs half an hour later. Sunshine was streaming into the dining-room. Emma Battock was hidden behind a newspaper.

"Well, don't we look nice" Emma said approvingly. Rebecca flashed her a radiant look. She knew she looked her best in her last winter's silk with its embroidered collar, and the brown velvet hat that brought out the gold lights in her eyes. "Where going?" the nurse pursued, with her mouth full.

"House-hunting!"

"Well, I thought from the way Mr. Flood talked yesterday he's getting his feet under him," Emma said. "Mr. Tevers'll be real sorry to have you go. So you're slated for a honeymoon, are you?

Her glance— the significant glance of experience toward ignorance and innocence—brought the color to Rebecca's face. But it was happy color, part of a cloudlessly happy hour; there was no woman on earth with whom Mrs. Gavin Flood would have changed places at that moment.

Rebecca was desperately, amazingly lonely. Except for Gavin and she was beginning to discover how very little she knew Gavin, she had no friend in all the city, no confidante, no one with whom to laugh and plan. Gavin himself had few friends in town, but there were clubs, places where men rolled dice and played cards and drank beer, and at these he was welcome. In the beginning he came home almost every night, but he often stopped at a club on his way, and Becky never put a steak on until he was actually in the house.

He liked steaks best of all — steaks and coffee and French bread—and would make a little disappointed face if dinner was not hearty. The tenderloin cost ninety or ninety-five cents, the cheaper cuts and meats half that. But Gavin would not eat stew or hash or sausages or mince or meat pies; he did not like fish. And the amount of bacon he ate with eggs made them expensive too.

If the dinner she had prepared did not happen to suit him he would say cheerfully enough, "Put on your hat and leave all this. We'll go down to the Lido." Becky loved the Lido. But not after she had spent two hours in the kitchen making a veal loaf and a corn pudding. That was waste.

And even waste would not have been so bad if they had always had plenty of money. But she had been married many weeks before she began to feel constant anxiety as to their finances, and it was at about this time that she realized that finances with Gavin never would be anything but uncertain.

Disillusionment came fast. Suddenly, hardly over her first bridal newness of wifehood, housekeeping, marketing, living the new life under a new name, she was hardened into a quiet, puzzled, patient yet unresigned creature who bore what she had to bear simply because she could think of no endurable alternative to it. For she knew she could not go home, changed, saddended, silent about her experience since her runaway. She could not get a divorce and have Salletts presently saying, "Becky Gibson's left that man, you know. Looks as if he wasn't much good."

Indeed she did not want to leave Gavin. He protected her, and he was her husband; she was a married woman. That, balanced against all the advantages the other girls had in Salletts, was something anyway. And he was never consciously unkind to her. That was just it. He was unkind and did not know it, and irresponsible and did not know it, and extravagant and did not know it. And he was selfish to a point that amazed her almost as much as it hurt her. Gavin was as simply and completely self-absorbed as a cat. If he wanted a meal early he demanded it; if he wanted to be late or not come home at all he considered himself entitled to do so. That she had rights, feelings, sensitiveness, never occurred to him.

Sometimes he was gone from home all night. Sometimes when she made shy appeals for money he went on reading the paper as if he had not heard her, folded it, jumped up and was gone for the day without a word. Sometimes he brought two or three men home unexpectedly for dinner, told her amiably enough to give them "any old thing", and let her slip out to the delicatessen store or the market without protest. He went on fishing trips, hunting trips, bachelor parties. They had not been married four months before he went on a party that was not a bachelor party. She heard some of the other men teasing him about it afterward, and knew there had been women on the party—women of whom she knew little and suspected much. It cut her to the soul that he would leave her for such a company, and made her angry. But under her anger and heaviness of heart was a more influential element. She knew that it would be of no slightest use to reproach him. He said repeatedly that he hated whining women and crying women and indignant women and curious women and argumentative women. They bored him supremely. No man in his senses would pay the slightest attention to them.

He took her to the races and she loved it when he won as he usually did to a greater or lesser degree, and grew nervous when he lost. She knew they had no money to lose, and she was afraid of his dark moods, when he blamed everything and everyone for his bad luck. Coming home from the races after bad luck was a dismal business, and Becky usually spent those evenings alone. Gavin went off to find consolation in dice or cards.

She always lay awake until he came home, although when he got there it was usually wisest to pretend to be asleep. If he had lost again he would be irritable; if he had won he hummed while he was undressing and then she could open her eyes and smile sleepily upon him as if just awake, and he might kiss her and call her a sleepy little pussy. Hunger for these moments of affection and lightness of heart was one of her troubles in these days. She was so much alone that his companionship was indispensable to her, and she got far too little of it.

The months went by, and she was still pondering, still puzzled. She had been a giddy, carefree creature at this time last year, surrounded by persons all loving Becky Gibson, all helping to make her life full and happy. Now all that was gone.

She was alone now with a handsome, careless, selfish man who was neither kind nor unkind to her. She was alone in a two-room apartment modern in equipment, an apartment to be regarded by all the housewives of Salletts as incredibly luxurious. But there were hours when to Becky it seemed a prison.

Why had she exchanged all that for this? Well, one must make the best of it! Cheerful, friendly Mrs. Flood went with her husband to the races, cooked steaks for "the boys," was seen at restaurant tables sipping her thick glass of red wine. She kept her own counsel. Nobody knew much about her; she was just somebody's wife. The grayness of it, the strange dullness of it enveloped her.

Sometimes she tried to break through the maddening meshes that seemed to hold her feet, her mind, her very spirit bound in a trap. "Gavin, where are we getting to?" she might ask animatedly as she gave him his breakfast coffee.

"Gosh, I've got to remind Al that the fight's tonight," he might answer absently; "he said he could get tickets."

"I know. But listen, Gavin. We go on and on, and we don't get anywhere."

"What's the kick?"

"No kick. But we owe money — there's a regular sheaf of bills in there on the desk. I'll bet they total up to three hundred, maybe more. There's no sense to our going on this way. Your pay is—what?"

He might go on reading, murmur absently by way of answer. Or he might give her a slightly disturbed glance.

"Well, call it forty. But it'll be more this week."

"Why should it be more this week?"

"Oh, extra work I've done for Greenway." Greenway was a commercial photographer in City Hall avenue. Gavin had worked for him before they had quarreled, Becky gathered. But both seemed glad to be reconciled and associated in business again. Or it might be that he had won at dice or cards. "Don't you worry!" he would say. "I may be home for dinner; I may not. Potts and Gibbs and some of the fellers were talking of going down to Halfmoon Bay after the fight. I won't know till late. Have something decent in the house; a couple of the boys might come out with me around six."

If she became imperative and followed him to the door, it was never to win a satisfactory answer.

"Gavin, I've got to know. I don't want to charge two dollars worth of steaks and have everything ready, and then wait and wait and wait indefinitely! Dinners take cooking and planning; there's no woman in the world who could be ready and not ready five nights a week!" Rebecca might say, hating herself for the irritated critical tone, and get goaded beyond endurance at the prospect of another empty day, with the uncertain prospect of four for dinner or nobody for dinner at the end of it.

Gavin had a fashion at these moments of shrugging his shoulders and elevating his eyebrows as one perpetually puzzled by the vagaries of women.

"Well, well, now isn't that interesting!" he would say pleasantly. "You tell me all about what women'll put up with and what they won't put up with and then where are you?"

And he would saunter away, leaving her ruffled and upset, as angry at herself as at him.

INSTALMENT 10

Rebecca wondered sometimes, in her desperate doubt and unhappiness, if Gavin would be happier if she never had come into his life at all. The affirmative answer was inevitable. She was a parasite wife, clinging to him because he was strong and handsome and a man, enduring everything, sights and humiliations and injustices, rather than make a break. And what would a break mean for her? She couldn't go back to Salletts, not if the alternative were the poorhouse itself. And if she were to divorce him, get a job, support herself, she might just as well do it now when there was still the shell of her marriage remaining, when the fifty-five-dollar rent was being paid.

Becky began to look resolutely, steadily for a job. She had suddenly an interest in life. She read columns of newspaper advertisments. A bookshop took her on for Holy Week; she sold cards with lavender crosses and white and silver lilies on them at five and ten cents a card, worked for twelve days and was paid twenty-four dollars. The money vanished, her feet grew finally rested, and she began to look for work again.

She had written to her mother twice, loving letters, but letters that gave no address. Despite the heartsick longing she felt day and night to see her, she did not want Sarah keen-eyed, sympathetic, to find her in the Eddy street apartment. Sarah would see little to admire in a bed that swung into a dressing closet by day, an icebox that lighted brilliantly as one opened it, a garbage can about the size of one of Sarah's lard tins with a pedal to save one the trouble of stooping.

The neighborhood that surrounded the elegantly tiled street entrance also would find Sarah unenthusiastic. It was a grimy neighborhood of theatrical agencies and restaurants and cigar corners and liquor stores. All morning women in wrappers ran about these corners, with fur coats held together at the breast; there were fights here after dark, drunks in doorways. The lights of a burlesque show flamed up and down all night. It was an odd place in which to have put a building of seventy-two apartments, but here the Golcondita indisputably was, and from it Gavin resolutely refused to move.

It was in vain that Becky talked of a little place out toward St. Francis Wood, beyond the tunnell, where there were beautiful big markets and little gardens set in the fresh foggy sweetness from the Pacific. Gavin liked to be within actual sound and scent of his associates and his interests; he had no feeling for a six-room bungalow with a pation and geraniums, and Becky, as the months steeped them deeper and deeper in debt, dared not take matters into her own hands.

In March she got a job as stock girl in a woman's dress shop on Market street. It was a large place that sold hundreds of dresses every day, and put new dresses with new ridiculously low prices displayed upon them in six great angled street windows every night. The windows drew shopping women like flies. For evening dresses they were paid as high as eleven dollars and eighty-five cents plus tax; other dresses ran from one dollar eighty-five to seven dollars eighty-five, the latter often advertised with sketches in the papers as being "lavishly trimmed with stitching, fancy buttons, tucking, embroidery and fur." Sometimes one dress displayed all these features.

Rebecca was paid nine dollars a week liable to insurance, tardiness, emergency deductions. Emergency meant when one of the girls died or flowers had to be sent from the firm, or one of the girls was in the hospital and the firm was paying her half pay to hold her. For these expenses twenty cents per week was deducted from every pay check and nobody knew, as a girl named Willie explained bitterly to Rebecca, whether the beneficiaries ever received anything or not.

The girls here were of a very low grade— fierce, overpainted, overscented, overcurled girls who were also overworked and oversexed. They were without exception promiscuous in their relationship with men, savagely taking in money, dinners, dances, drink, everything they could. Their talk had so far left behind in recklessness, vulgarity and stark frankness Becky's knowledge of terms that she could hardly follow it.

The smell of their coarse cheap perfumes combined with that of their unwashed, perspiring bodies sickened Rebecca. She felt sometimes that she could not breathe the air they breathed a moment longer. For twenty-six dollars a month—or a day—it would not have seemed worth while to her a very short time ago.

But Rebecca at twenty was a frightened pupil now in the great classroom called life. There was a lesson for her to learn, and if its beginning were here in this incredible and insufferable place she knew she could not rise to the next class until she had mastered it.

So she reported daily at the Bon Marche, puncher a basement time clock, put her hat and coat and bag into a locker, mounted filthy wide iron stairs, entered from the rear a second-storey loft lined and crossed by frames from which dresses swayed in hundreds from cheap tin wooden hangers.

Everything that was common and cheap and long ago eliminated from the code of respectable shops went on at full speed at the Bon Marche from nine o'clock until five. Rebecca and a few other housekeepers went home at five instead of seven, and were docked three dollars a week for the privilege. The others stayed for two more hours and were paid twelve dollars, less deductions, a week.

Snatching and crowding went on; those were unending. Women waged unceasing war around the racks. Dresses were torn, and disagreeable floorwalkers, hated by all the girls, tried to fix the blame on the customer and, failing that, fixed it irrevocantly upon the saleswoman. More deductions.

The White Feather Makes Reappearance

By FRED BACKHOUSE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 6 (CP)—The white feather, so-colled symbol of cowardice handed young men who stayed home in the first Great War—and Afrequently to soldiers on leave and to men in reserved occupations — again has made an appearance.

One was sent anonymously to Dr. E. A. Wilson of Southport. The envelope in which it was contained bore no markings.

A public protest was issued by the Southport Medical War Charity Committee which said Dr. Wilson offered himself for war service at home or abroad soon after the outbreak of war. The committee said Dr. Wilson's name "is on the list, ready for duty when the army or navy make the call".

The white feather often was seen in the last war. Young men riding in street cars or buses suddenly would be confronted by women — many of whom wore the uniform of the various women's services—who would pin a feather upon the victim whom they believed was a "slacker".

Leslie Howard Suffers Severe Injuries While Driving Car in Blackout

London, Nov. 6 (CP)—Leslie Howard, British stage and screen star, was reported "a little better" today following an automobile accident on Saturday night during London's blackout in which he suffered a fractured jaw and injuries to his chest and forehead. Three teeth also were broken.

Howard today was "resting" at his country home near Dorking, Surrey, where he was taken after treatment in Kingston County Hospital. X-ray examination disclosed that his chest injuries, believed caused by impact with the steering wheel of his car, were not serious.

Howard probably will enter a nursing home tomorrow to have splints put in his jaw.

WEDDINGS

TILLY—KNIGHT

On Saturday afternoon a pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen W. Knight of Stouffville, when their youngest daughter, Anne, was married to Mr. William Graham Tilly of Toronto. Rev. Mr. Holmes of Goodwood United Church officiated, assisted by Rev. John W. Knight of Jamaica, brother of the bride. The wedding march was played by Mrs. John Knight.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore an afternoon frock of wine velvet and carried Briarcliff roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Vida Knight, of Toronto, sister of the bride, wore a turquoise blue velvet frock and carried Joanna Hill roses. Mr. D. P. Tilly of Sudbury, brother of the bridegroom, was groomman. Miss May Tilly of Belleville, sister of the bridegroom, sang.

After a buffet luncheon, the couple left on a motor trip. They will reside in Hamilton.

NOBLE—SHURIE

Picton, Nov. 6.—(Special) St. Andrew's Anglican Church at Wellington, decorated with a profusion of white 'mums, was the scene of a lovely wedding at three o'clock on Saturday, when Barbara Vallier Shurie, daughter of Mrs. Shurie of Wellington, and the late John Stuart Shurie, became the bride of George Benjamin Noble of Toronto, son of Mrs. George Noble of Perry, Florida, and the late Mr. Noble of Wellington. Rev. E. N. Grant officiated.

The bride entered the church to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March played by Mrs. Dayton Murphy. Given in marriage by her great uncle, Mr. James Macdonald, the bride wore a long gown of ivory velvet, with cowl neckline and double bustle effect. Her short veil was caught with orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of cream rosebuds and lily-of-the-valley.

She was preceded by Miss Marjorie Seim of Toronto, as maid of honor, wearing Rivieria purple velvet with sweetheart neckline and bustle effect and short train. She carried Talisman roses and pink pom poms.

Miss Hilda Raynor of Wellington, as senior bridesmaid, wore Mexican fuchsia velvet with sweetheart neckline and bustle effect, short train and carried pink and yellow poms. Mrs. Walter King of Wellington, represented the groom's mother, at her request and was in black velvet and corsage of Talisman roses.

'Mums of various shades decorated the home.

New Heads in the Beauty Race

PENNY SINGLETON . . has a new coiffure, featured by bang curls

By HELEN FOLLETT

WHY IT IS that women will bake their heads under hair dryers for nearly an hour and then fare forth from the beautery without having their tresses dressed, we don't know. They don't look much better than if they were trailing round with their locks full of hardware, those little gadgets that make curly cues and rolls.

Always in a rush, that's probably the explanation. Hair dressers prefer to comb out the finger wave, have the cash customer a credit to the establishment. The professional touch gives more of an air to the arrangement. Many a woman tears her wool out by the roots after the use of a wave set and a prolonged baking.

And this reminds us that the members of the beauty class who wear the hair parted should change the parting now and then, as the hair is inclined to break along the little pathway. Anyhow, why present the same old hairdo to family and friends for y'ars and y'ars? The lady in the looking glass will be pleased if there is a change.

Coiffures are varied this season. You can have 'em up or down, or even up and down, with rolls atop the pate and ringlets along the napeline. That's sumpin in the way of a novelty.

Let us whisper into your ear; That pale, wan, mysterious Garbo-look is as passe as a shingled bob. Fashion artists draw their models looking like famine victims, and exotic ladies of the stage show gaunt cheeks by using blue shadows. Silly. Health is fashionable. Smart girls prefer to look radiant and vibrant with vitality; don't like to put up the appearance of one who should take her cod-liver oil every morning and be carted around in a wheel chair.

Use a rosy powder. That's a good idea. The nearer your lipstick is to the natural shade the more splendid you will look. Those vermilions and Chinese red tones accentuate pallor.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Baby's Instinctive Habit

I suppose ninety per cent of the mothers of this country live in constant fear that their babies will swallow something within reach. Doctors are continually being summoned by a nervous mother who is sure that the baby has swallowed a safety pin.

Well, to be perfectly frank, most children do manage to swallow some object they shouldn't at one time or another. Fortunately it isn't often that the thing they swallowed causes any trouble. Not long ago I visited a large children's hospital. On one wall of the corridor leading to the operating room they have a display of objects they have removed from children's digestive tracts. The number and variety of this display is really astonishing.

Babies have a practically unbreakable habit of trying to carry to their mouths everything they can get their hands on. As I say, this action is instinctive; you can't do anything about it, so the only thing to do is see that no object is left within the child's reach that can do him any harm if he does swallow it.

Most objects swallowed needn't give rise to fear on the part of the parents. For instance a child will swallow a marble and it will pass right through his system and do him no harm. The same is true of a small coin.

I recall an amusing incident that occurred in my practice. I had been called to see a baby that was ill and I left a small box of pills to be given to the little fellow. You see, it used to be that if you didn't leave medicine of some kind for the patient, you were just no good as a doctor.

Anyway, I left the pills—tiny, harmless ones. The mother wasn't well, so she showed a little neighbor girl how to give them, and left to her the responsibility of giving and seeing that the child got them. Somehow the pills got mixed up with a small box of beads someone had left around, and the little girl, who wasn't any too bright, gave the beads to the baby instead of the pills.

This had been going on for about a week when one day the mother noticed one of the beads in the child's stools. Right away she thought of the pills, went to look and, sure enough, the box was almost untouched. Well, they came to me in a terrible state of mind. The little fellow was as well as could be. In fact, the beads may have have done him as much good as the pills could have done. However, I have never prescribed them to anyone since.

While there are certain objects babies can swallow and suffer no apparent harm, there are other objects which may cause real danger. These, of course, are pointed objects such as pins. It is up to the parents to see that no object like this should never be within baby's reach.

Safety pins provide the greatest problem. Unfortunately, these are part of the baby's attire and sometimes one of them comes loose, the child finds it and puts it into his mouth. One way of avoiding such an accident is to use such large pins that the child can't possibly get them into his mouth. Many mothers wisely use large blanket pins for fastening the bed covers down. I used them for pinning diapers. have even known mothers who

The Happy Young Mother

Long before the arrival of baby she began to fortify her body by enriching the blood and building up the vigor of the nervous system. This was to enable her to withstand the strain she anticipated and to supply abundant nourishment for her child.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has long been known for its benefit to women under these circumstances, and she proved it to be most helpful in her case, both before and after baby's coming.

The addition of Vitamin B_1 to the formula of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has made it more effective than ever as a preventive for many of the discomforts preceding childbirth as well as in recovering strength and vigor afterwards.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Good Manners Govern Church Attendance

When we enter a church, we should be reverent, not social. The point to keep in mind is to do nothing that takes our attention or the attention of others from the dignity of the church service. We should at once go to our pews, not stopping to chat with friends or acquaintances. We should not make a point of bowing to people in church or exchanging words of greeting.

There are more ways of making your contribution than by putting money in the collection-box. We contribute our spiritual courtesy by arriving punctually; by being reverently attentive to the service, to the minister, to the music. We can do this by actively participating in the service, either when we are familiar with the ritual of our own church, or reverently conforming to the spirit of the ritual (rising, sitting, kneeling) if we are in a church where the service may not be familiar to us. By never going to our seat during a prayer. By not making a conspicuous entrance when we arrive late. By not "giving way" to constant coughing or clearing the throat. By not leaving the church during the service, unless it is really necessary. (If we think that we may not be able to stay until the end of the service, we should take a seat near the door.)

If a stranger who is apparently unfamiliar with the service enters your pew, you, as host, open the service book or the hymnal to the proper place and offer it to her or him. If you are the stranger, and a member of the congregation does you any service, you bow your thanks or say your thanks at the end of the service.

In churches where there are ushers, an usher leads the way, the woman follows him, preceding the man. The man thanks the usher. If there is no usher, the man leads the way, or he and the woman walk side by side up the aisle. When they reach the pew, the woman enters the pew first. When they leave the pew, the man steps aside to let the woman precede him down the aisle, or they walk side by side.

At the end of the service people greet those near them, but it is best to wait until we reach the vestibule of the church before we carry on a conversation of any length.

Be courteous to strangers and newcomers in your church.

Wonders About Invitations

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1—I am about to be married. It is to be a home wedding and we plan to have a reception after. When sending out the invitations I am wondering what to do about the co-workers in my fiance's place of business. There are about one hunded employees and we are wondering what to do about inviting them. We could not very well send one hundred separate invitations. What would you suggest?

2—I belong to a club of girls. Although I don't know some of them, would they feel slighted if not sent an invitation?

S.

1—I am not quite sure whether you mean to ask me if you should invite these co-workers of your fiance, or, if you do invite them, what to do about the invitations. If it is the first question, you yourself would have to decide about this, and it depends, mainly, I should think, on whether or not your home can accommodate so many additional guests.

If it is the second question, there are only two ways of sending these invitations. First, the more gracious way, of sending a separate invitation to each of your fiance's co-workers. And second, the "blanket" invitation, addressed, for example, to "The Employees of the —— Department of the —— Company."

2—I believe that the wisest and most natural way of considering these invitations to the club members is to consider sending invitations to those girls whom you really know well enough to invite to your wedding and not necessarily send invitations to the others whom you do not know or do not know well.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a boy of 21 and have been going with a girl of 19 for the last six months. Everything was going along fine, but the other night we had an argument and she said that she didn't want to go "steady" with me any more, because we can't get along.

I feel pretty badly about it all, because this was our first argument and before that we were getting along swell. She says she'll see me only twice a week now and I don't see how I can stay away from her, when we used to see each other every evening. And worse than that she's told me I can go out with other girls. We're both terribly broken up about it, and the fact that I have no job makes things worse.

Bill

As I've said many times before, to other boys who have written about being jobless, why don't you try to prepare yourself for a job, so when you get a chance you'll be able to fill it. You can't blame a girl for hesitating to marry a boy who is unemployed and if girls do not hesitate, their parents make things pretty difficult for the prospective son-in-law who is out of work.

Take up a course in Vocational Training or Adult Education.

I hope you and your girl friend have made up about the argument, by this time. You say she's "broken up about it". Well that shows that she cares.

He Loves Her, But His Drinking Interferes

Dear Miss Fairfax

I'm 35 years old and for the first time in my life truly in love with a lovely girl of 23. However, I have a terrible vice: I am a periodical drunkard. I acquired the habit at college, and have never been able to rid myself of it.

When I drink, I'm more of a beast than a man. My girl comes from a temperate family, and although they're not teetotallers, they know when to stop. She happened to see me under the influence of liquor one day, but thought I was ill and was extremely sorry for me.

She has never found out that I drink, and I think it's unfair to marry this girl, knowing this about myself. Yet, she loves me so devotedly that I hesitate to tell her of this vice. I'm pretty

Miserable

You haven't told me whether you've ever tried a cure or not. Sometimes they are highly successful. But, cure or no cure, I would advise you not to think of marrying unless the girl knows all about this habit. Even then, it's a question of whether you should take advantage of her love and marry her, even if she is willing.

Alcoholism may be more than weakness of character; some physicians think it's a disease. And a new version of the old saying about "an apple a day keeps the doctor away", substitutes bottle for doctor. Apples are now supposed to stop the craving for liquor. About three a day is said to be the "dose".

Brother-in-Law's Brother is no Relation

Dear Miss Fairfax

Is the brother of my brother-in-law (my sisters husband) any relation to me?

It will be possible for me to get work in a certain company if I am no relation to the man in charge. He happens to be the brother of my brother-in-law. Does that constitute relationship?

B.

A relative of an in-law is not regarded as kin. I hope you get the job.

Suspicions Aroused by Visiting Relative

Dear Miss Fairfax

When war clouds began to gather over Europe, my father's nephew and my first cousin succeeded in coming here. He's a very attractive man with classy manners. Kisses ladies' hands, always gives them his chair, pays compliments and that sort of things. Two or three times I've caught my wife gazing at him, and it sort of worries me.

I'm just a plain man, devoted to my wife and three children, and I'm no hand-kisser. This guy doesn't live with us but as we're his only relative, he's always coming in with compliments for the wife, toys for the children, and I'm beginning to feel like an old second fiddle. Am I jealous or what?

S. F.

I'm afraid the green-eyed monster is beginning to look you in the eye. Don't worry over the hand-kissing cousin. They all do that in the part of the world where he comes from. Just take it as a matter of course. Don't raise the issue by making your wife feel you're jealous. Suspicions raise ghosts, which are difficult to manage sometimes.

Spare Your Pears for These Dishes

By Alice Lynn Barry

Many of us do not make sufficient use of the good things with which our markets abound. We offer today some swell suggestions for pear dishes which we hope you will use. Incidentally, this year's pear crop is something special.

Try fresh pears in salads for a new palate delight. For a super-special salad line up six pears, one-half pound cream cheese, one-fourth cup preserved ginger, three tablespoons cream, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon paprika, lemon juice lettuce and jelly. Mash one-half of the cream cheese and blend with cream, finely-chopped ginger, salt, paprika and lemon juice. Peel the pears; cut a slice from the base of each so that it will stand on the lettuce. Core the pears and put a little of the cream cheeese in the cavities; sprinkle with lemon juice. Chill.

For another nice salad fill the cavity of fresh pears with pimento cheese which has been pressed through a coarse sieve and mixed to a paste with cream. Place halves of pears together and lay on a bed of lettuce; sprinkle nuts lightly over the rounded part. Garnish with any salad dressing.

Stuffed Pear Cups are made with six fresh pears, one-half cup chopped celery, one-half cup chopped walnuts, one-half cup chopped olives, seasoned mayonnaise and lettuce. With a cutter or corer remove core from each pear. Take slice from broad end so that pear stands upright. Combine celery, walnuts and olives with mayonnaise. Fill pear cups with mixture and arrange individually on lettuce.

Coddled Pears

Coddled Pears help coddle a capricious appetite. This dish is made with six fresh pears, two cups boiling water, one-half cup sugar and a few cloves. Cook unpeeled fruit in water, sugar and cloves at simmering point until tender, but not broken, about 25 minutes. Remove to serving dish. Cook syrup down, pour around fruit and serve with whipped cream.

Meringued Pears are made with five large, fresh pears, six tablespoons sugar, grated lemon rind, candied ginger, three egg whites and one-fourth cup powdered sugare. Pare and core pears, place in a baking dish and will center of each with one tablespoon sugar and a little grated lemon or candied ginger. Add three or four tablespoons of water and bake until tender. Cover them up with a meringue made with the stiffly-beaten egg whites and the sugar. Brown quickly.

Try baking pears when the family gets a trifle tired of baked apples. Pare and core nicely-shaped pears; fill centers with brown sugar, raisins and nuts. Sprinkle all over with sugar and cinnamon. Cover the bottom of the baking pan with water and put in the pears. Keep cover on 45 minutes. Bake until tender—about one hour at 350 degrees F. Nice with whipped cream.

Lamb Stew
Apple, Cabbage, Pineapple Slaw
Pumpkin Pie Cheese Coffee

Lamb Stew — Ingredients: two pounds lamb shoulder, three tablespoons hot fat or salad oil, one quart boiling water, one tablespoon vinegar, one-half teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon granulated sugar, nine to twelve small whole, peeled white onions; one bunch carrots, pared; nine small potatoes, pared; four tablespoons flour. Cut the meat, which has been freed of gristle and most of its fat, into suitable pieces. Flour it and brown lightly in the hot fat in a covered kettle or Duch oven. Add the boiling water, the vinegar, and simmer one and one-quarter hours. Then all the salt and sugar, and continue simmering. Now begin cooking the onions in boiling salted water to cover.. Cut carrots in quarters lengthwise, and 10 minutes later begin cooking the carrots and the potatoes in separate saucepans with boiling salted water to cover. When the vegetables are tender, add them without the cooking water (which should be reserved) to the meat. Then combine the cooking water from the three vegetables and cool slightly. Now mix the flour to a smooth paste with six tablespoons of the combined vetegable liquor. Then add the rest of the combined vegetable liquor, about two cups. Pour this into the meat and stir until the gravy is thickened and smooth. If too thick, add a little water or vegetable liquor. If too thin, add more flour mixed to a smooth cream. Finally taste the stew and add salt and pepper as you see fit. Serves six.

Apple, Cabbage and Pineapple Slaw — Ingredients: three eating apples, four slices canned pineapple, four tablespoons mayonnaise, four tablespoons cream or top milk, two tablespoons vinegar, two tablespoons prepared mustard, two tablespoons celery seed, one-half teaspoon salt, few grains pepper, one-half teaspoon granulated sugar, four cups crisp shredded cabbage. Core and dice apples—do not pare. Dice pineapple. Combine the mayonnaise, cream, vinegar and mustard; then add the celery seed, sale, pepper and sugar, and stir until smooth. Add the apples, pineapple, and then the cabbage, mixing well. Serves six.

Know What You Buy

By Eleanor Ross

Nowadays, when we go shopping, we look for the label as well as for the style and price of an article. The consumer movement is growing, with women demanding more and more content labels on their merchandise, especially on fabrics. We refrain from buying unless we know all about the fabric, from what it is made, and how to care for it and clean it.

There is such a bewildering variety of fabrics on the market that it behooves us all to know exactly what we are getting. When Grandma went out and bought wool or silk, she knew she was getting it without a label and how it would wear. But we don't know about synthetic fabrics, so we demand a label that tells us. We want to know whether this or that fabric will stand professional dry cleaning or washing.

Grandma dampened her forefinger and placed it beneath linens. If the dampness came through it was linen. But today we have fine cottons that will pass this linen test, as do others of the bewildering variety of natural and synthetic fabrics with which the market abounds. Many fabrics may combine several different fibers in their weave. Labels tell exactly what fibers have been woven into a fabric and from these labels we can deduce just what fabrics best suits our purpose.

Important Group

Various weaves, mixtures, designs, colors and textures make the synthetic fabrics group an important one in the dress world. Some rayons lose strength when wet, and these usually carry labels giving full directions for cleaning. File away carefully such labels so that you won't have to rely on your memory when it comes to cleaning the garment. If for any reason the rules given by the manufacturer are not clear or do not suffice communicate with the firm, and you will be given amplified directions.

A good professional dry cleaning establishment can usually tell whether a garment can be cleaned satisfactorily or whether it should be laundered. Never wash a garment when directions indicate that it should be dry cleaned, and there is no need to dry clean a garment if it is indicated that it will emerge from the laundry tub successfully.

You will find that real wool and silk fabrics today often carry labels for their care and cleaning. Follow these rigidly and your coat, dress or suit will give longer service and look well all the time. There are new mixtures of real and synthetic woven into lovely fabrics that are used by some of the best houses. These need especial care in handling for their mixture creates an entirely new type of fabric. Do not buy such fabrics without full directions for their care.

Toronto Argos Squeeze Out 9-8 Win Over Hamilton Tigers To Keep Pace With Ottawa

Field Goal from Almost Impossible Angle Brings Victory to Argos.

BEACHES SCORE UPSET

Defeat Westmounts 23-1 and Can Tie for Top Position by Beating Imperials

By JACK CALDER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

If it's not one Toronto football team it may be another this fall, for Balmy Beach's bold youngsters are gathering power for an onslaught that may be more effective than anything their fellow-townsmen, the Argonauts, can offer.

While only 2,600 persons looked on, the Beaches walloped the previously undefeated Montreal Westmounts in Toronto's Ulster Stadium Saturday to tighten the Ontario Union standings to the breaking-point. Meanwhile, before 8,000 in uptown Varsity Stadium, the Argonauts had all they could do to squeeze out a 9-8 victory over Hamilton Tigers and maintain a tie with Ottawa for the leadership in the Big Four.

The Balmies' success was as brilliant as it was unexpected. Now, tied for first place with Montreal, they can enter the two-team O.R.F.U. playoffs by tying the Imperials at Sarnia when the schedules close on next Saturday. The Imperials must win to achieve a playoff spot.

Westmounts Overwhelmed.

Eddie Thompson, 22-year-old half back who has sprung into prominence in the last two seasons, ran off gains of 15 and 20 yards all afternoon and converted three of the four touchdowns as Balmy Beach overwhelmed Westmounts 23-1.

Buddy Atchison's fumbles produced two touches. Frankie Seymour plunged for another and Thompson hurled a pass to Dave Dickie for the fourth after setting up the ball on two 20-yard runs.

Sarnia ran into a peck of trouble at Peterboro but weathered a last-quarter flurry to defeat the winless Orfuns 13-9 and stay one point behind the co-leaders. Curly Krugg, former Queen's University and Woodstock star, pushed the Petes to one touchdown and to within five yards of another.

Annis Stukus drilled a field goal from placement, 17 yards out and from an almost impossible angle, to pull the Argos through their desperate tussle with Hamilton. Most of the time the amazing Tigers, fighting to preserve their last chance for a playoff place, pushed the scullers around and then missed scoring chances.

Two Yards Short.

A fake placement kick and pass from Bill Stukus to Red Storey scored an Argo touchdown, while Bob Isbister's kicking and passing put Teddy Manorek in place to plunge across for the Tigers. But Bill Myrmylyk didn't have the range on three placement attempts at field goals and the try to convert, and a touchdown drive along the ground fell two yards short of the Toronto goal-line.

With Murray Griffin replacing Orville Burke at quarterback most of the way, Ottawa stayed beside the Argos through a 27-0 victory at home over Ted Reeve's luckless Montreal Royals. Griffin passed to Wilf Tremblay for one touchdown and directed attacks that led to two others by Bunny Wadsworth and Tom Daley. Stan O'Neil got the fourth Rough Rider try with Burke in the pivot position.

Mustangs Win Easily.

University of Western Ontario approached to within one game of its goal—a season without defeat or tie—by defeating University of Toronto 15-1 before a record crowd of 7,000 at London. But Western's fifth straight victory didn't bring the intercollegiate championship, for Queen's can force a playoff by defeating or tying the Mustangs at Kingston next Saturday.

The teams were tied 1-1 at half time but Western soon brought Clem Faust into position for a 20-yard field goal. Jack Kennedy's 84-yard run left only a one-yard burst for a touchdown for Harry Szumlinski and Kennedy-to-Faust pass set up another, Szumlinski rounding the end on first down.

Queen's made sure of finishing no worse than second by hammering McGill 12-6 before 8,000 at Montreal. Art Walker passed 40 yards to Ken Carty, who ran 33 yards for the winning touchdown in the late minutes.

JIMMY ORLANDO OUT FOR MONTH

Defence Rookie of the Detroit Wings Injures Heel in Game

Detroit, Nov. 6 (CP)—Jack Adams is in a troubled mood today, sadly convinced the injury jinx that plagued his Detroit Red Wings last season is at work again as they get under way in the new National Hockey League season.

Jimmy Orlando, husky Montreal Italian, suffered a heel injury in the opening game at Chicago. He paid little attention to it. Last night he crashed into a goal post, skates first, and had to leave the game. Now club officials fear he has chipped the heel bone and may be out for a month or more.

"He was playing brilliantly on defence for a rookie," Adams said. "If he is out, we are going to miss him badly."

The Wings missed him last night, for in the third period of their game with the New York Rangers, the Rangers scored the goal that tied the game, 1-1, the way it finished.

ONLY FOUR TEAMS YET UNBEATEN IN U. S. FOOTBALL

Tennessee, Texas, Notre Dame and Cornell Untied and Undefeated so Far

MICHIGAN UPSET

Bob Zuppke's Illini Wins First Game of Season by Toppling Michigan 16-7

By BILL BONI
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Nov. 6 (AP)—Tennessee, Texas A. and M., Notre Dame and Cornell today marched side-by-side into the November home stretch of the 1939 United States college football season.

They are all that's left of the unbeaten and untied brigade of front-line gridiron powers. But they must share the acclaim with Illinois, coached by canny Bob Zuppke and perpetrator of the year's most unexpected upset.

Tied in their opener by Bradley Tech and beaten successively and thoroughly by Southern California, Indiana and Northwestern, the Illini came up hopping mad Saturday to fetter Tom Harmon, recover five Michigan fumbles and move to all three of their scores off as many of those recoveries for a 16-7 conquest.

The Illini held Tom to 72 yards in 18 trips, smeared all but five of his twenty passes and held those five to 46 yards.

Easy From Here In.

Of the all-winning "big four", unscored-on Tennessee undoubtedly has the easiest path to a perfect season, which would be the Vols' second in a row. Only the Citadel, Vanderbilt, Kentucky and Auburn are left and, off the impressive style in which Tennessee disposed of Louisiana State, 20-0, even unbeaten Kentucky, which tied Alabama 7-7, hardly should be classed as a hazard.

Notre Dame which whipped Army 14-0, still must play Iowa, fast-improving Northwestern and Southern California. Southern Methodist, Rice and Texas stand in the road of Texas Aggies, which thumped Arkansas 27-0, and Colgate, Dartmouth and Pennsylvania remain on the slate for Cornell, which registered a 13-7 margin over Columbia.

Surprises In Mid-West.

The Illinois triumph set the style for a surprising day in the midwest. Missouri ran up its biggest score of the series in handing Nebraska its first defeat of the season, 27-13. Northwestern finally shook loose Bill Lecorrevona, who romped 61 yards for the deciding touchdown as the Wildcats tripped Minnesota, 14-7.

Ohio State took over the 'Big Ten' leadership by belting Indiana, 24-0.

On the west coast Southern California gave Oregon State its first defeat 19-7.

CALGARY BRONKS MEET WINNIPEG

Defeat Regina 24-17 to Qualify for Play-Off for Western Title

Regina, Nov. 6 (CP)—Calgary Bronks refused to let bad luck discourage them Saturday, came from behind twice to tie Regina Roughriders and went on to win 24-17, qualifiying for the western football final with Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

Three thousand fans roared approval as Riders took a 6-0 lead in the first quarter of the sudden-death Western Interprovincial Union semi-final. Regina increased the lead to 11-0 in the second quarter but by half-time Bronks had tied the score at 11-11.

Again in the third Roughriders went in front on a converted touchdown but Calgary roared back determinedly for an 18-17 lead entering the final quarter. From there on they held command. Fumbles and intercepted passes led to Regina's scores as they made only two first downs to Bronks' 21.

The two-game, total-point final opens next Saturday in Winnipeg. Second game is scheduled for Calgary but Bronks have announced that unless the ticket sale approximates $4,000 by Nov. 10, the game will be switched to Winnipeg.

Paul Rowe, Union scoring champion, plunged for two Calgary touchdowns Saturday, Wolfie Hughes and Bizz Bisbing getting the others. Harry Guest, Howard Cleveland and Dean Griffing crossed the line for Regina.

Apps, Drillon and Davidson Lead Leafs to Smashing Win Over Powerful Boston Squad

Shutout Registered Against Bruins Who Played Without the Great Shore

CANADIENS FLYING

Score 8-2 Win Over Hawks While Wings Hold Rangers to 1-1 Tie

By ROBERT CLARKE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

It's a shame, indeed looking back at it all now, that no one thought of warning Chicago Black Hawks and Boston Bruins that they were in for old-fashioned "surprise" parties. Possibly the shock wouldn't have been so great.

Wherever lies the fault, the fact remains it wasn't deemed necessary to tip off the Bruins about Toronto Maple Leafs, nor the Hawks about Montreal Canadiens. When the first week-end of National Hockey League firing was over the Leafs counted a 5-0 victory over the Stanley Cup-holding Bruins, and Canadiens boasted a smashing 8-2 triumph over the Hawks.

Wings Surprise Rangers

To round out a complete list of week-end surprises, Detroit Red Wings, going through the first stages of a rebuilding process, came within three minutes of triumphing over the more highly rated New York Rangers. A goal in the last minutes of play brought the Rangers a 1-1 overtime draw.

Not during the complete 1938-39 season did the Bruins suffer as startling a setback as the one handed them by the Leafs, who were led by the reliable scoring line of Syl Apps, Gordie Drillon and Bib Davidson.

Frankie Brimsek proved no puzzle in goal to the Leafs, as Apps found the range for a pair of goals, while Drillon, Pete Langelle and Davidson marked up singles.

Shore An Absentee

Bruins were without the great Eddie Shore for the starry defenceman intends to play only in Boston home games this year after Dec. 15. To balance the scales, the Leafs were minus Captain Red Horner and Don Metz, both recovering from injuries.

Milt Schmidt, Bobby Bauer and Porky Dumart, Kraut line members were the only effective Boston attackers and even on their most dangerous forays they were balked by the great goaling of Walter (Turk) Broda.

Canadiens, who confounded the experts last year by finishing up in sixth place after starting the race with a powerful "paper" team, swarmed all over the Hawks, who started the N.H.L. season on Nov. 2 with a 3-2 victory over Detroit.

The Flying Frenchmen, who managed to score exactly eight goals in their first six games last season, poured four goals past Mike Karakas in the first period, added three more in the second and then one more in the third after the Hawks rallied briefly for their two scores.

Mantha Leads Scorers

To George Mantha went the honor of being the only player to get more than a goal. Mantha fired home two shots, while the other tallies went to Rod Lorrain by Wentworth, Marty Barry, Toe Blake, Ray Getliffe and Louis Trrudel. Wentworth picked up three assists.

The Hawks, completely disorganized in the first two periods, managed to unite for scores by Mush March and Johnny Gottselig in the third session.

Both goals in the Red Wing-Ranger piece came on solo dashes with Gus Giesebrecht counting for the Wings midway through the second period and Wilbur (Dutch) Hiller gaining a draw for the New Yorkers by beating Tiny Thompson at 17:05 in the third period.

The Wings had their best chance to really put the game away when Lynn Patrick drew a five-minute penalty in the opening period for slashing Scotty Bowman, Detroit defenceman. The New Yorkers however, put on a masterly defensive show to hold off their opponents until Patrick's time was up.

Ted Reeve to Quit Coaching Next Year

(By the Canadian Press)

Montreal, Nov. 6—(CP) — Ted Reeve, Toronto newspaperman and former football star, has "had enough" of coaching and will not be back next year at the helm of Montreal Royals who have not won a game in the interprovincial rugby football union in two seasons.

"I'm quitting this coaching business and going back to the comparative comfort of newspaper life," Reeve announced during the week-end. "I've had my share of football and the game has been good to me, but I know when I've had enough."

This is Reeve's first season with Royals. A former Toronto Balmy Beach player, he coached Queen's University of Kingston Ont., before coming here.

City Juvenile Hockey Loop To be Discussed at an Open Meeting in "Y" Tuesday Night

Citizens Interested in Sponsoring of Hockey Among Teen-Aged Boys Should Attend

ALL ARE INVITED

The boy who trains his body and his mind in healthy athletic competition adds to his equipment for success in life. The physical fitness that comes from taking part in sports is a splendid asset. But just as valuable is the keen alertness of mind it gives—the spirit of fairness and good sportsmanship that is developed.

It is with these fundamentals in mind that an effort to organize a juvenile hockey league in Belleville will be launched on Tuesday night at the Y.M.C.A. when an open meeting of all persons interested in the promotion of hockey among the teen-aged boys of Belleville will be held. The movement was suggested by A. R. "Toots" Holway, coach of the Belleville junior O.H.A. squad and was resolved upon following the success of a juvenile team that brought most prolific results two years ago.

Interested Men Needed

"What is needed, however, are several men who are interested in the sponsorship and fostering of hockey among the youth of our city to act in executive and advisory capacities and also in the coaching and tutoring of the youngsters. More essential, however, are those who will act in executive positions and assist in the organization of such a league," explained Mr. Holway as he added that Tuesday night's meeting at the Y.M.C.A. was open to the public and ideas and suggestions for the futherment of hockey among the teen aged of Belleville would be openly discussed.

One plan, as suggested by the mentors of the Belleville juniors, is to operate a Belleville Juvenile Hockey League commencing as soon as the Hume arena opens next month. Along these lines four teams would be sponsored with officers elected to carry on the executive work of the group. Following a complete playing schedule an all-star team could be selected to represent Belleville in the Ontario Juvenile Hockey Association and thus the annual replenishment of hockey players in Belleville would be assured for all time to come.

Marked Success

Other cities throughout Canada have long-since realized the value of the organized sponsorship of hockey among the teen aged juveniles of the community which has resulted in marked success and has paid splendid dividends not only in the production of players, but in the providing of good clean sport for the youth of the community and to assist in the minimizing of juvenile crime and delinquency.

Such a movement is a civic affair and should receive the wholehearted support of the entire community. Citizens interested in the youth movement of Canada, as well as those interested in sports and more particularly hockey are urged to swell the attendance at Tuesday night's open meeting at the Y.M.C.A. at 8.00 p.m. when efforts to sponsor a juvenile hockey league in Belleville will be the chief item on the night's agenda.

N.H.L. STARS

Gordon Drillon, Toronto, scored one goal and assisted in two others as Leafs shut-out Boston 5-0.

Turk Broda, Toronto, opened N.H.L. season with shutout.

Cy Wentworth, Canadiens, tallied once and figured in three other goals in Canadiens' 8-2 victory over Chicago.

Gus Giesbrecht, Detroit, tallied for Red Wings in 1-1 tie with New York Rangers.

Wilbur (Dutch) Hiller, Rangers—his third period goal saved Rangers from defeat.

SPRINGFIELD AND CAPITOLS SCORE DOUBLE VICTORIES

Eddie Shore at Head of Indians Instils Fighting Spirit of Bruins Into Team

WELL-BALANCED TEAM

Indianapolis, New Entry in Int-Am, Will be Hard to Beat

(By The Canadian Press)

On the basis of opening weekend International - American League games that nine-club circuit is in for an interesting winter.

Fans who attended the eight games that sent the league away to a flying start Saturday and Sunday saw just about every style of hockey in the books, and got the impression that Eddie Shore has instilled some of Boston's fighting spirit into Springfield Indians and that Indianapolis Capitols are worthy of their new franchise.

Springfield and the Capitols scored double victories, the Indians defeating Providence 4-2 Saturday night and 6-1 last night and Indianapolis taking the measure of Hershey 4-2 Saturday and Syracuse 5-3 Sunday.

In the other Saturday games Syracuse beat Pittsburgh 1-0 and the champion Cleveland Barons edged out Philadelphia 2-1. New Haven beat Hershey 3-2 last night while Pittsburgh downed Cleveland 2-1 in overtime.

Debut a Success

Shore, for years the backbone of Boston Bruins defence in the National League, didn't play for Indians but his managerial debut was a complete success. Three third period goals, by Norm Schultz, Roger Jenkins and Jack Thurrier erased a 2-1 lead Providence built up in the first two periods of the Saturday game and last night the Indians tallied five times in the final period for their victory.

Indianapolis, playing their first game in the Int-Am, showed a well balanced team. Against Hershey, Jim Carveth was their star, scoring the first goal unassisted and assisting Wilder in the second. Don Deacon, who won the league scoring title last year while playing for Pittsburgh, figured in three goals against Syracuse, scoring one and assisting in two others.

Beveridge Fine in Goal

Bill Beveridge, who shutout Pittsburgh Saturday, was in top form again last night and only his fine goaling kept the Capitols to five goals. Emery Hanson, Syracuse right-winger, brought Stars their victory against Pittsburgh, firing the only goal of the game in the seventh minute of the third period.

Two former N.H.L. stars, Leroy Goldsworthy and Bob Gracie combined to give Cleveland their victory over Philadelphia. Gracie fed Goldsworthy a pass at the start of the final period for the game-winning goal.

In Cleveland's Sunday game the scoring was confined to the third and overtime periods. Mickey Drouillard's shot from centre ice that struck goalie Moe Roberts on the chest and bounced over his shoulder into the net decided the issue in favor of Pittsburgh at 5:55 of the overtime period.

The Deacon Sport Wear Bowling team of the Belleville Major Bowling League scored a four point victory over Gibbards of Napanee in opening the new and up-to-date superior alleys at Napanee on Friday night. These alleys have recently been laid down and are the last word in construction. The boys report a wonderful time, the team being entertained to lunch after the game. Dave Tobe was high with three string of 757, but Walter Gerow can still knock them down. He had a count of 705. Dave Tobe had also the high single of 304. Two ladies' teams from the Recreation Alleys will visit Napanee on Wednesday night for a friendly game. The scores:

On Saturday next, Nov. 11, the annual meeting of the Ontario Juvenile Hockey Association will be held in the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, and we have a letter to hand from Secretary John Stafford inviting a Belleville delegation. Only five years ago this association came into being and almost immediately met with success and the spontaneous efforts of far-seeing persons, who were interested in minor league sports throughout the province. As a matter of fact the O.J.H.A. has flourished and advanced so rapidly that the Ontario Hockey Association made advances towards this organization in an effort to have the sponsors of minor league hockey in Ontario range themselves under the older association banner last fall, but the heads of the O.J.H.A. feel they have something bigger and better than the O.H.A. and also feel they are doing a greater work among the teen aged boys of the province. The O.J.H.A. is an amateur organization in every sense of the word, as are its affiliated clubs.

* * *

Two years ago a juvenile team was organized in Belleville and affiliated with the O.J.H.A. The success aims of the juvenile set-up most forcibly blossomed in the Belleville teen-aged club, which was the nucleus of the present local junior O.H.A. sextette. However, last year the juveniles were neglected and today we find those at the helm of junior O.H.A. hockey in Belleville feeling they missed the boat by not continuing their juvenile group last year. With the annual meeting of the O.J.H.A. being held in Toronto on Saturday a Belleville delegation to Toronto might well be in order and even go further to affiliate themselves with this smaller organization, that is expanding and growing with amazing rapidity. Frankly, the operation of a Juvenile City Hockey League in Belleville under proper coaching and executive ability, would not only pay dividends this season, but provide a basis from which an all-star juvenile team could subsequently be selected to represent Belleville in the O.J.H.A. next March.

* * *

So rapidly and far has the O.J.H.A. advanced within the short period of five years, that, at their annual meeting on Saturday the advisability of expending the association into "A" and "B" groups will be one of the principal questions on the agenda. The association executive feel that by introducing "A" and "B" groups they will be able to assure the smaller centres of a provincial juvenile title, while the larger centres would of course be included in the "A" group. The idea is quite commendable and has its merits, except for play-offs where there might only be one team of either group in a large area. Such matters will all be 'ironed out' to the mutual advantage of all next Saturday, no doubt. In the meantime sport-minded hockey fans should not take Saturday's meeting too lightly . . . show some interest in the sponsorship of sports among the juveniles; they pay inestimable dividends.

* * *

Immediately upon learning the O.J.H.A. had called its annual meeting for Saturday next, Toots Holway swung into immediate action early today and suggested efforts be put forth to reorganize juvenile hockey in Belleville. A meeting, with this purpose in mind will be held in the Y.M.C.A. on Tuesday evening at 8 p.m. when open discussions relative to the fostering and sponsoring of minor league hockey in Belleville will be held and to which the general hockey-loving public is cordially invited to attend and voice their suggestions and ideas. This league is not being organized to conflict with the good work of the Ki-Y group, which will operate later in the season. Other centres throughout Canada have long since realized the value of sponsoring minor league hockey, so why not in Belleville?

Jake Powell, veteran outfielder of the world champion New York Yankees, is in our midst. Jake and a party of Americans are holidaying at Thompson's Hunting Lodge near Cordova Mines and hopes to get in some hunting in "the Canadian wilds".

It will be bargain night at the Hume Arena on Thursday when four wrestling bouts will be presented with no increase in the general price of admission. Following two weeks of strenuous training Roy Doherty, the Shannonville Hercules, will return to battle one Jim Kruher, a 200-pound gent from out Vancouver way. Doherty says he is in much better condition since his last appearance and promises to prove to the fans that he can match strength with any of 'em. Another local lad, Bill Tracey, the former Texas wildman of the ropes makes his initial appearance in a local ring versus Lorne Mottridge, also of Vancouver. Besides these bouts there will be two main attractions when The Mask meets Chief Lone Bear and Dave Khoen and Joe Malch resume hostilities. Incidentally in their last meeting Khoen and Malch wrestled sixty minutes without a fall and the return bout is by the popular request of the fans.

* * *

..SPORT SPICE — Flashing dazzling speed the Toronto Maple Leafs showed superior condition and skated to a 5-0 win over the Boston Bruins Saturday. . . . The Blackhawks lost to Des Canadiens while the Rangers and Detroit tied, so today the Leafs and Canadiens have a win each, while Chicago has a win and a los sand Detroit a tie and a loss. . . . Balmy Beach beat the Montreal Westmounts 23-1 on Saturday to move into a tie with the Quebec entry for the senior O.R.F.U. race. . . . Ottawa blanked Motreal Royals 27-0 and Red Reeve immediately announced his retirement from the game. . . . Lf Western can beat Queen's in Kingston next Saturday they'll have gone through the intercollegiate schedule without a loss and become champions, but Queen's are hoping for a "tri-color" win and a subsequent intercollegiate play-off . . . The International puck loop swung open its doors over the week-end with some fine scores.

Schooner Bluenose Goes on Auction Block

Lunenburg, N.S., Nov. 6 (CP)—The schooner Bluenose, queen of the North Atlantic fishing fleet and international fishermen's racing champion, will go on the auction block, Captain Angus Walters announced last night. Walters said she would be sold at public auction for debt.

A Canadian firm is suing her operating company for $7,000, the balance due on the engines she uses for auxiliary power, Walters said. If she is not purchased at auction, her ownership will revert to the plaintiffs, the Canadian Fairbanks Morse, Limited.

The craft is owed by the Bluenose Schooner Company of Lunenburg. She has been taken on barnstorming tours around the Maritime Provinces since she came home from Gloucester last year with the International Fishermen's racing cup.

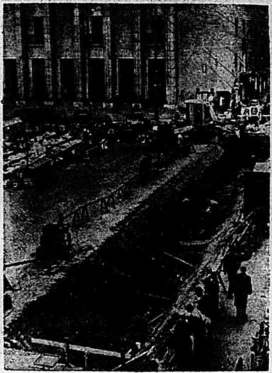
Peaceful Sweden Takes Raid Precautions



It doesn't take two to make a war any more. If it did, Sweden would never have any misgivings. As it is, the peace-loving Swedes must follow the example set by some of their more grasping neighbors and prepare for what may come. Here is a scene in the heart of Stockholm, where authorities are preparing a huge air raid shelter for the civilian population, just in case present negotiations between Finland and the Soviet should break down and involve other Scandinavian countries.

Mountain View

Mountain View—On Monday afternoon October 30, the Mountain View Women's Institute entertained the Rednersville Institute at the home of Mrs. Clifford Barber with sixty-two members and visitors present.

The Mountain View President, Mrs. Lewis Wallbridge opened the meeting. Letters and communications were read and all business dealt with. It was decided to have a pantry shower in aid of the Picton Hospital. Plans were made for cooperating with the Red Cross and the best way of doing so. Yarn was given out for the knitting of socks.

Mrs. J. D. Keeble gave a report of the Area Convention held in Belleville recently. Misses Isobell and Dorothy Peck of Rednersville favored with a piano duet.

The government speaker, Miss Atkinson was then introduced to the members. The subject of her address was "Health". This address was very instructive as well as beneficial. Many valuable illustrations were given which one could well put in every day life. One thing that was particularly stressed was to take care of health while one had it and to work some, play some, rest some and not forget recreation. Posters were shown of the different stages of T.B. The members were given a chance to ask questions pertaining to diseases.

Mrs. Morton Weese of Rednersville moved a hearty vote of thanks to Miss Atkinson for the splendid address given. This was seconded by Mrs. T. Nightingale of Mountain View. The meeting was brought to a close by singing "God Save The King."

Delicious refreshments were served by the Mountain View Institute.

Mrs. Earl Onderdonk of Rednersville moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Clifford Barber and the Mountain View Institute for the pleasant afternoon.

Little Benny's Note Book

I ate supper alone last night on account of pop and ma being out to a dinner party at somebody's house, and this morning at breakfast pop said to ma, Yee gods what an evening, why dont people like that stay quietly at home by themselves and mind their own business.

I knew she'd make us write in her guest book, ma said. That guest book of hers is one of the apples of her eye and simply nobody can escape. I was glad she picked on you to do the writing for the family, Willyum, because when I poise a pencil over a guest book my mind becomes a proverbial blank. I didn't get a chance to see what you wrote, Willyum, what was it? ma said, and pop said, O, the same sort of thing I always write, just a few graceful words that leave something to the imagination. I wrote, The hoar duvver were better than the cocktails, the cocktails were better than the dinner, and the dinner was better than the bridge, he said.

Now Willyum you never wrote any such awful things, ma said, and pop said, Why not, they couldn't take it in a disparaging way unless they had a gilty conscience. But as a matter of fact what I really wrote was a couple of lines of verse. People are always more grateful if you take the trouble to make a rime, he said.

Well yes, it does show more thought, what verse did you write? ma said, and pop said, I wrote, Last night is dead, it is to laugh, Let these 2 lines be its epitaf. And believe me it was the deadest night I ever spent he said.

Willyum you wouldn't dare, now I demand to know what you wrote in that guest book, ma said, and pop said, Well if you must know, I just wrote, We're off thanks. Meaning of course, Thank heavens, he said.

O what's a use of asking you anything, I suppose I'll never really know, ma said.

Wich she proberly wont.

3rd Thurlow

3rd Thurlow—On Tuesday evening members of the "Others" S. S. Class held a Hallowe'en party in the S.S. rooms at Cannifton. Miss Elsie Smallhorne (cow-boy) best dressed. Mrs. Jack Williams (baseball player) best dressed. Miss Margaret Whittfield and Norman Hall (man and wife) comic. Mrs. Harry Tweedy (going both ways), comic.

A program was then given, consisting of sing songs, coronet solo, readings, piano selections, also a short play, with ghosts walking through a cemetery in the dark, covered with white sheets, carrying a flash light, singing softly and reading verses on the tomb stones which caused much merriment, but made a real creepy feeling come over all. This part of the program was brought to a close. Peanut scrambles were then had for the children with a few adults joining in, lunch was served which consisted of sandwiches, cakes, candy, and coffee.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Nov. 6.—(CP)— Stocks registered a moderate retreat today in slow trading. Industrials and Base Metals weakened about a half point in the index.

Lake Shore was sold for a loss of 3-4 to 30 and the cheaper Golds held the recessions down to a few cents. Senior Base Metals weakened about half a point and cheaper issues of the group were mainly steady.

Utilities, Steels, Paper and Building issues were the weakest groups in the Industrial section. Bids were off narrowly for the Western Oils. Home, Anglo-Canadian and Calgary-Edmonton dropped 2 to 5 cents. Pacific Petroleum, a new listing, came out around 44 cents.

WALL STREET

New York, Nov. 6. — (AP)— Further rising hesitancy was displayed by leading stocks in today's market.

Dealings were at a relatively slow pace from the start. A little buying support came in around noon and, near the fourth hour, early declines running to 2 points were cut substantially in many instances.

Trimmed a little among Canadian stocks were Lake Shore and McIntyre Porcupine. International Nickel, however, added a small fraction. Dominion 4s showed little variation in the Bond market.

Backward stocks most of the time—some eventually revived—were Douglas Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Boeing, Curtiss-Wright, Consolidated Aircraft, U.S. Steel, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, Western Union, N.Y. Central, Du Pont, Allied Chemical, Anaconda, and Johns-Manville. Resistant were Bush Terminal, Safeway Stores and Sperry.

Produce Unchanged

Toronto, Nov. 6.—At Toronto Saturday butter and eggs maintained former levels. Poultry was quiet and unsettled.

The egg market continued firm under light receipts. Buyers assumed a cautious attitude toward top grades in view of high prices, but took on lower grade more readily. Inspected shipments to Northern Ontario points have been small.

Trading still lagged on the butter market. Buyers displayed little interest in offerings and purchased only small lots for their immediate requirements. Holders generally were not pressing supplies on the market, however. Prices remained unchanged.

Demand has been only fair for the ample volume of live and dressed receipts on the poultry market during the week. The general tendency was for lower quotations. Prices on turkeys were nominal. More activity was evident in packing for storage.

NATIONS COURT NEUTRAL BULGARIA

Sofia Has Dreams of Rewinning Roumanian Dobrudja

Paris, Nov. 6— (CP—Havas) — Diplomatic attention centred here today on the intensive courtship of neutral Bulgaria now being carried on by the Allies, Germany, Soviet Russia and Italy.

Bulgaria, regarded as a strategic "doorway" to southern Europe, heretofore has avoided any ties with either the great powers or her Balkan neighbors. Now, as a neutral state ringed by neutrals, she is being wooed by all.

Germany's overtures are being made largely in the economic domain. Berlin, for instance, is buying Bulgarian oaks to be processed into "ersatz" coffee.

Soviet Holds Out Lure

Satisfaction of Sofia's dreams of rewinning Rumanian Dobrudja is being held out as the Soviet lure. The delegation of Bulgarian deputies who recently visited Moscow evidently were given to understand that Russia would persuade Rumania to cede the territory without trouble.

Italy, striving to stem both Soviet and German expansion in the Balkans, last Saturday signed an Italo-Bugarian trade pact which provides for increased purchases of Bulgarian gains and tobacco.

Britain, acting for the Allies, had dispatches George Rendel, British Minister at Sofia, to Ankara under instructions to try to develop better relations between Turkey and Bulgaria. Ankara to date has been regarded distrustfully by Sofia as the backbone of the Balkan Entente, which banded together Turkey, Rumania, Yugoslavia and Greece against Bulgarian revisionism.

COW IS KILLED BY MOTOR CAR

The accident occurred about a mile and a half east of Madoc village. Traffic Officer J. H. Hatch investigated and charges are pending.

U. S. FREIGHTER

draw neutral countries into the war," Molotoff said.

One rumor was that the ship's freight had been sold at Bergen but an such sale, it was believed, would have to be tentative and dependent on official decisions.

Cargo May Be Sold

The possibility was mentioned in shipping circles that the freighter's cargo of tractors, leather, fruit, wax and other articles might first be transferred to a British ship and taken to England.

The freighter's freedom and the internment of the Nazi prize crew which took command of her on the Atlantic Oct. 9 was assured yesterday when Norway rejected a German protest. The American crew, however, has not yet been permitted to come ashore.

The German prize crew, which anchored the City of Flint in the harbor of Haugesund Friday against Norwegian officials' orders, still was interned aboard the Norwegian warship Olav Tryggvason.

Diplomatic Exchanges

A communique described at some length diplomatic exchanges during the times the City of Flint was in Norwegian territorial waters, both before she went to Murmansk, Soviet Russia, and on her return toward Germany.

The statement said the commander of the German prize crew took the City of Flint to Haugesund contrary to Norwegian orders because, he asserted, he wanted to see the German Consul there "according to orders from my government."

Of a reason he gave earlier—that a sick member of the American crew needed medical attention — it said a Norwegian doctor visited the vessel and found the man had suffered "insignificant" injuries.

"If this war continues"—and the ruling circles of France and Great Britain are doing everything possible to see that it should do so—then the number of neutral countries will decrease more and more."

With evident reference to the United States, Molotoff also said that certain parties were profiting from their neutrality to derive pecuniary profit out of the misery of others.

Joseph Stalin, War Commissar Marshal Klementi Voroshiloff and other leaders were among those in Bolshoy opera house who applauded his words which included a sweeping attack on capitalism.

"The capitalist and Imperialist countries have no other means of checking their internal difficulties except to resort to international adventures," Molotoff said.

He added a comparison between the capitalist countries and the Soviet Union was scarcely favorable to the former.

Calls Capitalist World Rotten

"The capitalist world is rotten. Fissures are multiplying in its system. Its internal forces are corroded. It can no longer exist without war and without Imperialist adventures despite all the riches accumulated in the hands of the group that is in power.

"It is false to say that the present war is fought to defend democracy. It cannot be expected that those responsible for the war will renounce it voluntarily. It is probable, therefore, that the war may be extended, extending at the same time the domination of capitalism.

"The Soviet Union has decided to oppose it, acting thereby in the interests of all humanity. It is evident that the internal consolidation of the U.S.S.R. and the reinforcement of its international position represent not only the duty of the Soviet people but also the interest of all who desire a rapid end of the war."

In a sharply worded manifesto, issued as the U.S.S.R. began a three day celebration of the 22nd anniversary of the Communist revolution, the international assailed the United States for repealing the arms embargo and also attacked Italy and Japan.

No mention was made of Germany in the manifesto, which occupied four columns on the front page of Pravda, Communist party newspaper.

"The Bourgeois of the so-called neutral countries," the International said, "warm their hands near the fire of war. Under the mask of neutrality they become rich on military supplies.

"The American Bourgeois, very interested in further developing the war, repeals the embargo on the export of arms in order to secure huge profits to the kings of the munitions industry."

The manifesto, signed by the International's Executive Committee, urged the workers of the world to unite to "defend the Chinese people, to go against those who favor continuation of war and unmask them as helpers of imperialists."

Wives and mothers were told to "demand that their sons come back from the front".

Britain and France were accused of oppression in India, Indo-China and Arabia and of "keeping half the world in the chains of colonial slavery."

"The Bankers of London and Paris seek to preserve the worst reactionary regimes in Europe," the manifesto agreed.

"The Italian Bourgeois waits only for a convenient moment to throw itself on the oppressed and have its share of the spoils."

Russia's Power Praised.

The statement praised Russia's power and said that "when the Polish State ceased to exist the Soviets gave a helping hand to their brothers in the western Ukraine and White Russia, taking 13,000,000 out of war and delivering them from oppression."

Britain and France, the manifesto said, are trying to involve the Balkans in war, but, it declared, Russia will "disturb" this plan.

As Russia embarked on the gigantic celebration of the revolution, a Finnish delegation waited on the sidelines, a series of vital talks with Soviet officials apparently temporarily suspended.

Bergen, Nov. 6—(AP—via radio) —Captain Joseph Gainard, describing the capture of the United States freighter City of Flint by a German prize crew, today said his captors threatened to sink the ship if his men gave them "any trouble."

"This is a war measure," he quoted a German lieutenant as saying. "And whether any of us like it or not I must carry out my orders."

The German prize crew, Captain Gainard said, were armed with pistols, hand grenades, bayonets, machine-gun, and other weapons.

The American skipper recounted his experiences in a broadcast to the United States .

After being captured Oct. 9 by a crew from the German pocket battleship Deutschland, Captain Gainard said, the City of Flint "proceeded on various courses" until Oct. 18, when the Germans painted out all traces of American ownership. The colors of Denmark were shown on canvas stretched amidships, he said, but the Danish flag was not shown.

"This procedure is believed to be in accordance with international law as long as guns are not used," Captain Gainard said. On Oct. 21, the German prize crew hoisted the German merchant flag. Later that day we anchored in Tromso harbor. I manoeuvred the ship with the assistance of the Norwegian pilot.

German Flag Hoisted

"The next evening we proceeded to Murmansk. During the voyage the German naval flag was hoisted and we entered port to anchorage. I tried continually to get in touch with our ambassador but did not succeed during our six days' stay. On the fifth day at 3:45 I was told that the ship was again a German prize, and we were to leave at once .

GERMANY

The newest military action, meanwhile continued on the centre of the French Forbach Salient, almost halfway between the Maginot line and the German industrial city of Saarbruecken.

The morning communique said there had been artillery action "at several points of the front."

German howitzers, in four consecutive days, had dropped about 300 shells on Forbach, Saareguemines and on French lines farther east toward Bitche on the Rohrbach Plateau, in front of the Maginot line.

French observers said the Germans apparently were trying to smash all approaches to Forbach and French communications with Warndt Forest gun emplacements But the French said they were maintaining a firm grip on the Salient, commanding the Forest and Saarbruecken, through the Spicheren Spur and other forts built on hills about the cities.

Driven From Island

Military sources reported that German troops had occupied a small island in the Rhine only to be driven back to their own bank of the river by fire from heavy mortars.

The German units crossed to the unidentified island on the hitherto quiet southern flank of the Western Front before French observers noted their presence.

The French fire sent earth and brush flying into the air, it was said, and the Germans hastily withdrew. German casualties, if any, were not disclosed.

Patrol skirmishes and artillery action were general on both sides along the 100-mile northern flank but French attention was riveted to the south because of the apparently first German attempt to cross the Rhine, a natural barrier between the opposing armies in that area.

Another strong German force attempted to storm a French post in the Vosges Mountains but a French counterattack halted it these sources said.

The French sent three air patrols over German lines yesterday in an effort to determine German intentions. (A high command communique in Berlin claimed a French plane had been shot down near Saarebourg-Moselle.)

British and German planes took advantage of clear intervals in the weather yesterday to make reconnaissance flights over enemy territories.

The most important German flight, military dispatches said, was by a squadron of three planes which caused a series of alarms in northern France.

British and French reconnaissance flights penetrated deeper into Germany than the Germans were able to get into France.

FIRE DESTROYS

Shortly afterwards a lurid sheet of flame was seen to envelop the interior of the building. Dense clouds of smoke rolled out of doors and windows and by the time residents of the village arrived at the scene the entire structure was a mass of flaming embers. Intense heat drove potential rescuers of furnishings away from the building, and villagers were forced to stand by and watch one of the famous connecting links with the historic past be reduced to a pile of smoking ashes.

Neighboring Church Saved

Efforts on the part of villagers, however, saved the United Church, which stands in close proximity to the hall.

The old frame structure, built years ago when Hastings County flamed at times with the battle cries of adherents of both political parties, was the stamping ground of stalwarts of both Liberal and Conservative parties. Oldtimers yesterday recalled the halcyon days when the county was divided into three ridings, North, East and West Hastings. Both parties used the now demolished hall for their meetings, nominations and elections and dusty beams, now piles of gray ashes, echoed and re-echoed with the cries of political debaters.

The community too, will feel the loss. For within the greying confines of the building, many community affairs were held. Travelling shows held sway there, and embryonic Sarah Bernhardts and John Barrymores of the district faced the footlights for the first time within its walls.

It was not ascertained today whether reconstruction would take place.

Plainfield Women's Institute, also lost dishes for three hundred sittings that were stored in the hall.

NEUTRAL GOV'TS

The Daily Herald said: "In spite of the heat and fury of comment made by Germans to neutral correspondents in Berlin yesterday, many well informed persons in Oslo believe that the Germans are really glad to be rid of the City of Flint.

"They think the City of Flint was taken into Haugesund because Nazi leaders did not want trouble with the United States and preferred to give the whole thing up as a bad job."

The Daily Telegraph and Morning Post declared:

"The result of Germany's effort has been a demonstration, ludicrously humiliating to Hitlerism, that all its naval forces cannot bring an ocean prize into a German port, cannot eke out German's inadequate resources by one ton of ocean-borne goods.

"The Norwegian action in setting the ship free and interning the prize crew exactly accords with the rules of law accepted by a great number of countries, including the United States and Great Britain. German official protests and semi-official fury complete the ludicrous exposure of the impotence of Nazi naval plans."

300 Aircraft Ready.

In a second editorial the same paper said: "The ink was hardly dry on the neutrality bill before lorries rumbled along the waterfront of New York laden with material for waiting British ships. Some 300 aircraft are ready to be put on board.

"But this is only a small beginning. Agents of the allies have made contracts for the purchase of airplanes and equipment to the value of many millions. We know from the Minister of Supply (Leslie Burgin) that he expects to obtain immediately machine tools, gun steel and raw materials in such quantities as will make good any gaps in our own productive power. Such are the advantages which we derive from the removal of the arms embargo.

"The voice of Hitlerism still threatens, as Kaiserism threatened, to stop Atlantic transport. But the farce of the City of Flint has just told in another style the story of the defeat by our sea power which worked out to the surrender of 1918."

S. A. EXPOSES NAZI GROUPS

Vigilance of Authorities Discover Gigantic Plot in Africa

Johannesburg, South Africa, Nov. 6 (CP-Reuters)—Vigilance of South African authorities has exposed an underground Nazi organization which has plotted national uprisings, and safotage to factories and essential services, it was learned authoritatively today.

The Union Government has for some time had its eye on Nazi activities in which German diplomats were involved. It forestalled an alleged rebellion and disturbance by expelling a number of ringleaders at the outbreak of the war, interning 200 others.

Those expelled included Dr. Lierau, former German Consul-General at Windhoek; Herr Stiller, former counsellor of the German legation; and Dr. Rudolh Leitner, former German Minister to South Africa.

More than a year ago an organization called Auslands was known to control Nazi activities in the Union and elsewhere, and was linked with German legations and consulates. A more active Nazi was appointed German Consul at Durban. A new Consul was participated prominently in the Austrian Anschluss was sent to Lourenco Marques, in Portuguese East Africa.

These changes produced increased propagation of subversive Nazi doctrine among disaffected elements in the Union. The Auslands was in close contact with Ossewabrandwag, a body formed in the Orange Free State nominally for cultural purposes, but actually based on Nazi lines.

Consolidated Optical Company Constructing New Addition

Addition to Measure 120 by 40 Feet and Will Take Care of Company's Increased Production

READY EARLY IN 1940

With the retaining wall virtually complete, the new additions to the Consolidated Optical Company's plant on Coleman Street will go into actual construction in the near future, Mr. Arthur Groves, manager of the plant stated this morning.

Built to facilitate increased production caused by an uptrend in business, the new addition will measure one hundred and twenty feet by forty feet and will adjoin the main building on its east side. It will house new polishing and grinding departments of the company.

It is expected the new addition will be ready for occupancy and actual production during the early months of 1940, Mr. Groves stated.

EAST EUROPEAN LOSSES MAY DOOM HITLER

Gamble in Poland Creates Staggering Load Which Requires Rare Skill

DUCE LEADS WAY

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

New York, Nov. 6 (AP)—The further the European imbroglio unfolds itself the more evident does it become that Adolf Hitler's staggering gamble in his conquest of Poland will call for uncanny skill.

Developments in the few weeks since the start of the conflict make it difficult to see how, unless he can win a quick war he can avoid politico-economic losses in eastern Europe which would turn victory into virtual defeat. These developments relate principally to the Russian and Italian raids into his preserves.

Mussolini Points Way.

Premier Mussolini pointed the situation up by overhauling and strengthening his army. While not officially explained, this undoubtedly is calculated not only to bolster Italy's neutrality but to ensure her place in the Balkans and the Mediterranean zone.

Hitler's trouble started when he unexpectedly found an Anglo-French war on his hands. Then his new friend, Stalin of Russia, having given him a push into the conflict with the allies, proceeded to annex Eastern Poland, seize control of the Baltic states, and reach for dominion of the Balkans.

The Balkans in particular have figured for years in Hitler's great dream of expansion to the east—an imperial vision which the ex-Kaiser and other German leaders had before him.

Axis Damaged If Not Broken.

Now to complicate matters along comes Mussolini and gives the Berlin-Rome axis such a bend that it looks badly damaged, if not broken. The Fascist chieftain's purge of his lieutenants last week, in which he got rid of pro-Nazi elements, emphasized his apparent determination to lessen his German entanglements.

Even before this development Mussolini had tossed his hat into the Balkan ring and started out to defend from Russian inroads what he regards as Italian prerogatives in this area. He had accepted German domination on the Balkan Peninsula over a long period because there was mighty little he could do about it.

Hitler Shocks Il Duce.

Herr Hitler was riding fast and far and was well mounted. The European war, however, changed the picture.

I have just had private word from a good Italian source in Rome tending to confirm that Il Duce was shocked when his axis partner shook hands with Russia and gave the Communists the right to go ahead in the Balkans.

It has been generally understood that the Italian chief is trying to form a "neutral" bloc among the Balkan states. He is said to have been making progress.

HIGHWAY CRASHES

fly-wheel. In Stratford, John Weitzel of East Zorra Township died on Saturday of injuries received when attacked by a bull.

The only drowning occurred at the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph. Ronald McKinley Miller, 24-year-old entomology student, fell into an outdoor pool while attempting to gather insects Saturday. Albert Ramsden, 42, of Toronto, died near Beaverton in a hunting accident. He was shot by a companion Saturday while hunting rabbits.

Hunter Burns in Shack.

Arthur Donaldson Thompson, 30, Strathroy, a former teacher at Pembroke Collegiate, died in hospital at London of injuries received last Aug. 9 when he was sawing a fallen tree. James Kelly of Verulam township, near Lindsay, was burned to death when his hunting shack was destroyed by fire Saturday.

William Chilcott, 53, was killed Sunday when his automobile left the highway near Rockland and crashed into a tree. Dr. Charles Kiser, 72, of University City, Mo., died at Hamilton Sunday of injuries suffered there a month ago in a motor accident.

Murray Holland, 21, of Thorold, Ont., died Saturday night of injuries received in an automobile crash near Welland, and James Jackson, 21, of suburban Mimico, was killed Sunday when struck by a truck in Toronto.

SPIDER'S WEB USED IN WAR

Delicate Web Provides Fine Line for Lenses by Which Angles May be Judged

By HAROLD FAIR
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 6 (CP)—The lowly spider is doing its bit to help Britain win the war, a director of ammunition production disclosed today.

The insect's delicate web is used for the graticules of binoculars. The procedure is not new but was mentioned by the director in describing the British war effort.

This delicate web provides the fine line of lenses by which angles may be judged. Human hair spun in glass is too thick for the line.

The director displayed for the first time in public the progress manuals by which the ministry of supply has told firms of methods of manufacture. He said the dominions had been made familiar with all the manuals and that Canadians had obtained production information.

Small and Large Forms.

Outlining the problems converting industry to war requirements, he said the government was attempting to utilize small as well as big firms. It was necessary to spread the load so industry could also turn out normal products and thus swing back after the war without a crash.

Examples of industrial conversion included electrical industries turning out tanks, gun mountings, guns, instruments and shells; agricultural plants producing tanks, guns and shells; the knitting machinery industry turning out small arms components and instruments; sugar factories, engineering armor plate, shells and tank components; the gramophone and wireless industry, making fuses, gauges, shells and cartridge cases.

Beat Ploughshare to Sword.

The director said the problem was to convert the ploughshare to the sword and ensure that everyone gets the rightful quantities. The efficiency of war, he said, depends on industry.

He cited the improvement of the British optical industry since the last war. Now British glass compares favorably with the best in the world.

Merchants Generally Not to Observe Nov. 11 as Holiday

Toronto, Nov. 6—(CP)— George Hougham, manager of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, said today that Remembrance Day, Nov. 11, will not be observed as a holiday by merchants generally in Ontario. He said he had received information that Alberta, Saskatchewan and British Columbia will observe the day as a statutory holiday.

"It would have been much better," Mr. Hougham said, "if the Sunday nearest Nov. 11, Armistice Day, had been selected as Remembrance Day, with services of an appropriate character, unmarred by sports and business activities, instead of having a statutory holiday which is not capable of general enforcement and which is not devoted to the purposes for which it was intended."

SEABOARD STATES LASHED BY STORM

65 M.P.H. Gale Subsides Today Leaving Much Waterfront Damage

New York, Nov. 6 (AP)—A 65-mile an hour gale that lashed United States eastern seaboard states with sleet, heavy rains and snow subsided today, leaving in its wake much inland and waterfront property damage.

The storm, travelling north from Cape Hatteras, battered the coastline last night with a fury reminiscent of the New England hurricane of September, 1938.

The disturbance was described as a "tropical cyclone" by Professor Charles F. Brooks of Harvard's observatory.

Clearing skies were forecast for most of the area, but temperatures tumbling to sub-freezing levels made highway traffic perilous. Snow ploughs were called out to clear the highways in Vermont.

Several small craft were pounded to pieces and Coast Guardsmen answered distress calls from pleasure craft from New Jersey to Boston.

Four exhausted men were rescued from a 35-foot disabled motorboat off New Bedford, Mass., by a Coast Guard power boat attracted by makeshift flares of gasoline-saturated rags.

Three small craft reported in trouble off Rhode Island still were sought by Coast Guardsmen. The storm forced a steamship to heave to off Nantucket.

Along Massachusetts' north shore scores of automobiles were stalled when waves whipped over sea walls splashed their ignition systems. Windows were blown in at Worcester by gale winds. Water surrounded several seaside cottages.

Snow-blocked highways stalled 200 motorists near Bridgeville, N.Y.

SIMPLE SERVICE TO BE BROADCAST

Remembrance Day Will be Commemorated at Ottawa on November 11th.

Ottawa, Nov. 6—(CP)—Arrangements went forward today for the annual Remembrance Day service at Canada's National Shrine, the Peace Tower of the Parliament Buildings where the Dominion soldiery of today will gather with veterans of other wars and civilians to pay tribute to those who fell in 1914-18.

Throughout Canada, from the largest city to the tiniest hamlet, civic authorities have arranged ceremonies for Nov. 11. But this service on Parliament Hill will be heard from coast to coast, a national tribute to those who died in the first Great War and to Canada's current war effort.

It will be a simple service in the presence of the Governor-General, Lord Tweedsmuir; Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Canadian dignitaries of. church and state, the diplomatic corps and consular representatives of many countries.

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation will broadcast the National service from 10:45 a.m. E.S.T. to 11 a.m. and from 7:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. The Canadian Legion's special service from Toronto will be heard over a national network with Lord Tweedsmuir opening the service from Ottawa.

Heifer Climbs Into Hay Loft

Peabody, Mass., Nov. 6 — (AP)—The aroma of a crop of newly-harvested hay got "Sally" into all kinds of trouble today and the fire department was called to straighten it out.

For days "Sally" has sat on the ground-floor of the cattle barn at the Ashman farm, looking up into the hay-loft and, like Ferdinand, just smelled.

The temptation was too great. Today, fireman had to drag the young 400-pound heifer down 25 steps from the loft. Everyone is still trying to find out how she made the ascent.

20 FILIPINOS KILLED IN BUS ACCIDENT

Manila, P.I., Nov. 6 — (AP)—Twenty Filipinos were reported killed today in the plunge of a passenger bus through a wooden bridge into a swollen stream at La Castellana, Occidenta Negros Province.

School Bells Ring In Alsace Towns

Basel, Nov. 6.— (AP)— School bells rang today for thousands of French children in the Alsatian towns of Mulhouse and Colmar, shadowed by the Maginot Line defences and within the range of the big guns of Germany's Westwall forts.

Encouraged by continued quiet along the Rhine front. French authorities deferred plans for removal of the civilian population from those two centres and ordered resumption of many normal peacetime activities.

With gas masks and lunchboxes, children trooped back to school within ten miles of Germany's Rhine fortress of Istein.

It was estimated that 70,000 of Mulhouse's 100,000 population remain, while about 35,000 remain in Colmar, which has a normal population of 50,000.

ARRANGEMENTS

Take Advantage of Act

The predicitons were voiced as Britain prepared to take full advantage of the United States' vast industrial resources, a reservoir opened to the Allies by congressional repeal of the arms embargo. The embargo repeal was hailed by the press as a blow to Germany and as a decided advantage to the Allies.

Plans to raise cash by means of a public loan, to purchase planes and munitions in the United States, are under study by treasury officials. It is expected the government will ask parliament this week for power to issue a war loan, the first of the war. Some observers have put the probable borrowing figure at 250,000,000 pounds, ($1,117,500,000).

Canada is expected to figure largely in Britain's financing of the war. The Sunday Times said the senior Dominion as well as being a source of munitions and men, also has another responsibility, "that of banker for a not insignificant portion of Britain's purchases.

Canada Ready to Help

The Sunday Times predicted that at first Canadian war materials would be paid for in cash, then by transfer back to Canada of British-owned stocks and bonds of Dominion industries, and ultimately by Canadian Government loans to the British Government. The article concluded: "whatever is needed from Canada in men, money or materials, the Dominion stands ready up to the limit of its resources."

The press warned against the "false lull' in hostilities at present. Some commentators attributed the lack of military action to a determination by Adolf Hitler to attempt to win the diplomatic war before beginning real fighting. London newspapers agreed this lull would aid the Allies by giving them an opportunity to strengthen their defences but warned it should not be taken as anything but a "passing phase."

Mass Bombings Not Near

Military experts studied the effects of the German air raids on the Firth of Forth and Scapa Flow and the British attacks on the German base at Kiel in predicting that mass bombing attacks were not an immediate possibility.

Generally the bombers were unescorted. From available accounts —British and German—one British expert said it appeared that about one-third of the bombers were lost.

"This average," said the tactician, "was too high for really profitable operations when you consider the importance of machinery in such a war as this and the difficulties of replacement."

He added that "most of us believe that en masse long-range bombing will wait until the fighters catch up in their staying abilities with the bombers."

More Staying Power

There were hints that steps are being taken in this direction. The tactician expressed the "possibility based opinion"—as he put it—that British planes being built now have more staying power than the German fighters.

"At any rate you can say we aren't losing too much sleep about German threats to 'rain bombs' on England," he said.

In the midst of a chorus of British praise for Finland's firm stand on Soviet Russian territorial demands and Norway's release of the City of Flint, the British government last night named a new envoy to Sweden.

Victor Alexander Louis Mallett, 46, counsellor of the British Embassy in Washington, will succeed Sir Edmund Monson as Minister to Stockholm.

Sir O. Mosley Stoned

Another development on the home front was the stoning of Sir Oswald Mosley's automobile last night after the Fascist leader had told a crowd, "we want peace because we want to get on with our job of building up the British Empire." Sir Oswald was not struck although several persons were slightly injured.

From "somewhere in France" came word that Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, lunched with Lord Gort, Commander in Chief of the British Expeditionary Force, at General Headquarters yesterday before returning to England.

From the channel coast came news that two "explosions" sank the 5,295-ton Greek freighter Nicolaos M. Embiricos, carrying a cargo of grain from Galveston, Tex., to Antwerp. The captain and crew of 26 were rescued.

HON. D. MANION

Mr. Mackenzie King last week replied that if Dr. Manion had any specific charges and would give him details he would have them investigated.

"From information which is constantly coming to me from all parts of Canada it is apparent that the prime minister's pledge to banish patronage is not being carried out," Dr. Manion declared.

Makes Public Letter.

The Conservative leader also made public a letter he sent to the prime minister Sept. 22 and which he said was not answered. This letter charged jobs on government war projects were being awarded through political agencies and urged the prime minister to end all patronage during the war.

"The prime minister is better at offering investigations than at correcting abuses," Dr. Manion said.

"At a cost of $30,000 he investigated the scandalous Bren Gun contract. But though Mr. Justice Davis condemned the transaction on practically every page of his report the only result was a violent defence of the minister responsible by Mr. King, his ministers and his party.

"Anyway, it is not investigations that the public wants but a cessation of favoritism and patronage."

Text of Conservative Leader Manion's statement in reply to Prime Minister Mackenzie King, issued today, follows:

The Prime Minister's statement in reply to mine requires a few brief comments. Before making them, however, it should be pointed out that the interpretation put upon my statement by some of the press in implying that my remarks referred only to war contracts was wholly incorrect. I spoke of "political patronage and favoritism in Canada's war work", referring to appointments and promotions, as well as to other branches of that effort throughout Canada.

Six weeks ago I wrote to the Prime Minister a suggestion that he issue specific instructions to do away with patronage and favoritism, particularly as it applies to war work, but from information which is constantly coming to me from all parts of Canada it is apparent that the Prime Minister's pledge to banish patronage is not being carried out. Therefore the necessity of bringing the matter to the attention of the public.

Mr. King's statement that he has every reason to believe the utmost care has been exercised to avoid partisan ships, influence, or patronage is absolutely belied not only by the information given to me but as well by the series of articles carried in the Financial Post, in which many serious accusations have been made. The article on October 26 contained these words:

"The articles in the Financial Post have cited many examples of unbusiness-like methods and of political favoritism in the spending of our defence millions.

Contracts have been let to party friend. Contracts have been let on a cost-plus basis with inadequate control of possible profits. Contracts have been let to firms with ill-equipped plants or no plants at all. What does Mr. King think of such methods of doing government business?"

Says Charges Ignored

Mr. King has entirely ignored these serious and definite charges and I hardly know, therefore, why he wants details from me. However, I gave him two illustrations, one from the Maritimes and one from British Columbia, both as to refusal of permission to tender on work because they were not on the Liberal patronage lists.

Let me quote two other letters regarding jobs: "(1) In a letter received this morning from a small Central Ontario City, the writer states that any men employed on a war project there have to be approved by the Liberal member and the President of the Liberal Association. (2) In another letter from an Atlantic Coast city, the writer says that in certain war work being done there even ordinary labor is hired only through Liberal channels. That is the type of letters which I am receiving from all over this country. However, I intend to offer no more examples through press interviews but at the proper time and place, namely at the next parliamentary session the opposition will, if this practice continues, see that these conditions are given a proper airing. Mr. King says that if I "would make public the specific details of any instances of political charges they will be at once investigated."

Bren Gun Probe Report

The Prime Minister is better at offering investigations than at correcting abuses. At a cost of $30,000 he investigated the scandalous Bren gun contract, but though Mr. Justice Davis condemned the transaction on practically every page of his report, the only result was a violent defence of the minister responsible by Mr. King, his ministers, and his party. In spite of all the evidence adduced, Major Hahn and his friends are still working on the contract. Therefore, the public may justly doubt the utility of accepting at its face value Mr. King's expressed willingness to "investigate" irregularities. Anyway, it is not investigations that the public wants, but a cessation of favoritism and patronage.

Let Mr. King adopt the suggestion in my letter to him (unanswered) of Sept. 22 and issue specific and emphatic instructions to all military and civil officials in charge of government purchases and appointments of any kind in all centres of Canada that patronage lists must be destroyed and not replaced, and that all appointments — during the wartime at any rate—must be made absolutely on a basis of merit and not on political grounds. And let Mr. King make it his duty to see that his instructions are carried out.

RESIDENT WALKS INTO SIDE OF CAR

When he became confused in directions, Thomas Smith of 8 King St., Belleville, was knocked down by an automobile on the Marshall Road opposite the Belleville Exhibition Park early last evening. Mr. Smith sustained multiple bruises and minor cuts, but was not seriously injured. The automobile was driven by Mrs. H. W. Smith of Napanee, no relation to the injured man. Mrs. Smith informed P. C. Ellis upon his investigation, that the injured man was walking in the centre of the road and as she was about to drive past, Smith walked into the side of her car and was knocked down.

Empire Air Training Conference Opens

Ottawa, Nov. 6 (CP)—The Empire Air Training Conference opened here today with delegates from Great Britain, Australia, New Zealand and Canada giving expert consideration to developing personnel for creation of the world's most powerful air armada to fight Nazi Germany.

In one of the most significant meetings in the history of military aviation, the Empire representatives reviewed the projected scheme to make Canada the air centre of the British Commonwealth and provide advanced training for pilots from other Dominions and Britain.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Defence Minister Rogers, Finance Minister Ralston and Transport Minister Howe were scheduled to participate in the conference as Canada's governmental representatives while Royal Canadian Air Force officials will provide the technical advice.

An outline of the training plan has already been drawn up by Canadian experts, it is understood, and it will be presented for the approval of the other Empire delegates.

Lord Riverdale is head of the British Air Mission while Hon. J. V. Fairbairn is chief Australian representative and group Captain H. W. L. Saunders heads the New Zealand mission.

The proposed scheme calls for use of present Canadian flying facilities, both military and commercial, but dozens of new landing fields probably will be constructed to handle the hundreds of student fliers who will converge on this Dominion. The plan possibly will turn out 25,000 airmen a year when it is fully underway.

The problem of obtaining the hundreds of new training planes for the project has been largely overcome by the action of the United States Congress in repealing the arms embargo and enabling the Allies to purchase on a cash-and-carry basis from U.S. factories.

It is probable that within a few weeks some definite announcement will be made concerning Canadian and Empire purchases of fighting planes both from Canadian and American manufacturers.

STORM SHIFTS LUMBER CARGO

Steamship Vamar is Now Out of Danger Says Mackay Radio

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—(AP) — Mackay radio reported today the Steamship Vamar was out of danger after a tropical storm had caused her lumber cargo to shift in the dangerous waters north of Cape Hatteras.

The 598-ton vessel, formerly the Eleanor Boling, one of the ships used by Admiral Richard Byrd in his polar explorations, sent out an S.O.S. early today and the Freighter El Mundo reached her at 8.10 a.m. C.S.T. to find the Vamar's crew dumping her deck load of lumber.

Operated by C. D. Mallory and Company, the Vamar was en route from Charleston, S.C., to New York. She carries a crew of 21.

Member of Regiment Injured When Car Crashes into Ditch

Picton, Ont., Nov. 6 (Special)—Losing control of his car while attempting to pass another vehicle near Woodrous Corners three miles south of here on Saturday night, Private Warren Emory of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment suffered a fractured jaw, dislocated shoulder and other injuries when the automobile turned over three times before crashing into the ditch a wreck. He was rushed to Prince Edward County Hospital after receiving treatment from Dr. C. A. Publow.

Private Ernest Pringle, passenger in the Emory car escaped with a shaking-up.

According to investigating County Constable James Lovelace, Emory, who had bought the car but a few hours previous, pulled the vehicle too close to the ditch when attempting to pass the car in front. It went out of control, turning over and hurling Emory out of the door in an unconscious condition. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Emory of this town.

BELGIUM PROTESTS

Brussels, Nov. 6 (CP-Havas) — The Belgian government protested today to Berlin against flights by German planes over Belgium territory.

"Foreign planes flew over Belgium Sunday," Belga News Agency said in announcing the protest. "Lookout services were able to determine that the planes were of German nationality. The Belgium government immediately instructed its Ambassador at Berlin to make a protest to the Reich government."

CHURCHILL VISITS THE FRONT

With the British Expeditionary Force in France, Nov. 6 (CP-Reuters)—Winston Churchill's visit to British Headquarters yesterday was private, brief and informal. The First Lord of the Admiralty, after spending a few days in Paris conferring with French naval authorities, decided to lunch with the British Commander-in-Chief on his way home.

In the simple surroundings of Viscount Gort's Headquarters about a dozen men sat around the lunch table. Included, in addition to Lord Gort and Mr. Churchill, was the Duke of Gloucester. About 2.30 p.m. Mr. Churchill left.

A British Tommies' soccer team was beaten 14-0 by a French army team in a weekend game. A Royal Air Force side drew with a French team 2-2.

41 Windows in Glasgow Daubed With Swastikas

Glasgow, Nov. 6 (CP)—Swastikas were scrawled on many shop windows here last night. In one street alone 41 windows were daubed.

John McGovern, Independent Labor member of parliament, described the action as "deplorable" and said he planned to mention it in parliament this week. No anti-Semitic activity or interference with any religion or race is wanted in Great Britain, Mr. McGovern said.

MAY INTENSIFY RAIDING AT SEA

German Raiders Expected to Try to Intercept Arms Cargoes

Berlin, Nov. 6 (AP)—Authoritative German sources declared today that lifting of the United States arms embargo was "unneutral" and intensified sea warfare appears a likely consequence.

"American arms have been made available to our enemies," informed persons commented, "but these materials will have to get past our raiders."

These sources also indicated in view of the loss of the United States freighter City of Flint—taken from a German prize crew and handed over by Norwegian authorities to her American personnel—that Germany would deal more sternly with contraband shipments.

On the western front, where the German high command yesterday found nothing noteworthy to report, there was "somewhat livelier reconnoitering activity in several sectors" and "weak artillery fire", this morning's communique said.

The communique also said that a French plane had been shot down by German pursuit planes near Saarburg (Saarebourg - Moselle, France).

As disappointment became more apparent over the fact that the United States had, in effect, made available vast war supplies for Germany's enemies, the foreign office mouthpiece, Deutsche Diplomatisch-Politische Korrespondenz, declared the new law places a "serious responsibility" on President Roosevelt.

This semi-official commentary contended that a desire "to buy profits with blood and the prosperity of other peoples" was the only consistent policy of a group of former war profiteers.

Hitler's Paper Attacks U.S.

Adolf Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter expressed similar feelings. headlining its editorial, "Roosevelt, Yesterday and Today", the newspaper said:

"The American President Roosevelt on Saturday reached a goal toward which he has aimed unmistakably ever since outbreak of the European war conjured up by England: he accomplished a change in the neutrality law which the American people had given themselves four years ago after most careful consideration."

The Berliner Montagspost directly blamed the president for lifting the embargo.

"The American President proved again that business—first of all and in any case—always remains the primary object," the newspaper asserted. "Herr Roosevelt and American war agitators and warmongers promise themselves the big business."

While the newspaper editorialized on the Washington development, not a word was printed about the loss of the City of Flint.

Other sources, however, pointed to the fact that if the City of Flint had been sunk when the pocket battleship Deutschland captured her Oct. 9 instead of being taken as a prize there would be no chance now that her cargo would reach Britain.

CRUSHED BETWEEN TRUCK AND TREE

Seven-Year-Old Girl Dies Shortly After Admittance to Hospital

Chatham, Ont., Nov. 6 (CP) — Crushed by a motor truck against a large tree at the corner of Raleigh and Harvey streets, Barbara, seven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Bunning, Chatham, died today shortly after being admitted to St. Joseph's Hospital.

The driver of the transport, Millward James Heath, of 208 Ross avenue, Sarnia, swerved to avoid a motor car which stalled in his path. In swinging to his left, the big truck climbed the sidewalk and bowled over the child who was skipping along the sidewalk.

The truck after sideswiping the big maple, crashed into a fire hydrant.

Heath lifted the child in his arms and hailed Austin Ross who was driving past and they raced to the hospital.

'No Fight for King' Says Relief Recipient

London, Ont., Nov. 6— (CP) — James Pello's application for relief struck a snag today when he said he would not fight for the King.

He had brought a mimeographed copy of an oath of allegiance provided by the Welfare Department to Lawyer Eric G. Moorhouse. Moorhouse read it to Pello preparatory to defending his affidavit. When he reached the section referring to defending the King, Moorhouse said: "Would you fight for the King?"

"No fight", said Pello.

Moorhouse referred the case to Welfare Administrator Frank McKay.

Captured U-Boat Crews Should Like English Hospitality

By Fred Backhouse
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Nov. 6 (CP Cable)—Roast beef, Yorkshire pudding and football are not exactly what Adolf Hitler ordered for his U-boat crews, but many of them are getting it in prison camps here.

A glimpse of one camp in a disused mill in the north of England, shows German prisoners have to run the kitchen and prepare their own midday meal of roast beef and vegetables. They serve table and wash the dishes.

After morning parade they dig in the fields—the irony of men sent out to starve Britain now till the soil to help Britons. They also fill sandbags.

During their spare time football matches are organized. Prisoners not playing sit on the sidelines. All the men are well clad and appear in good health. They wear civilian clothes with a distinguishing circular mark sewn into the back of the coats and the knees of the pants.

MILLIONAIRE WILLING TO 'ANGEL' SPY HUNT

New York, Nov. 6 (AP)—An anonymous millionaire today became the "angel"of a $250,000 spy hunt.

His funds, it was said, stood behind an offer by the S. Rankin Drew Post, 340, American Legion, to pay $500 to any person giving information which led to the arrest and conviction of spies or saboteurs acting for foreign powers.

"He is worth at least $25,000,000," said Colonel Lewis Landes, Post commander, "and is ready to put up $250,000 if necessary to eliminate this business."

Landes would not disclose the man's name, but said he served with the French army in the last war and came from one of the oldest families in the United States.

Baton Rouge, La., Nov. 6—(AP) —Counsel for Dr. James Monroe Smith, former Louisiana State University President summoned to trial today on a forgery charge involving university bonds, announced in court that the educationist would plead guilty this afternoon.

Walter B. Hamlin, Smith's attorney, said an arrangement had been worked out with District Attorney Dewey J. Smith was detained last summer in Brockville, Ont.

THEIR MAJESTIES VISIT SOUTH AFRICA HOUSE

A smile familiar to hundreds of thousands of Canadians is that of Her Majesty, the Queen, seen here with the King as they paid a visit to South Africa House in London. On the same round of visits they also stopped at New Zealand House and Canada House. Both the King and Queen have been active in taking a personal interest in the empire's war measures since the outbreak of hostilities.

AUTHORITY TO BORROW $1,125,000,000 ASKED

No Inner Cabinet, Says Chamberlain, Denounces Rumor

'Malicious Invention' is Prime Minister's Definition of Statement

FINANCIAL MEASURES

National Loans Resolution Aims to Give Treasury Powers of Borrowing

By PAT USSHER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Nov. 7—(CP Cable) — Sir John Simon asked the British Parliament today for authority to enable the treasury to borrow an additional sum, not exceeding 250,000,000 pounds (about $1,125,000,000), for supply.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer also sought power to borrow any sums required for the repayment of maturing securities issued under the War Loans Acts.

Sir John moved a national loans resolution in the House of Commons to this effect; explaining the bill would give the treasury powers of borrowing similar to those given by the War Loans Act passed in the last war.

Sir John said discussion of terms for future loans would be against the public interest and that "for the purpose of large war borrowing general authority such as the present resolution confers is desirable."

The Chancellor also announced a selected committee would be established on national expenditure connected with the war, both civil and military, along the lines followed in the first war.

No Inner Cabinet Says Premier

Announcement of these financial measures followed a denunciation in the House by Prime Minister Chamberlain of a report that there existed within the British Cabinet a secret "inner cabinet."

"My attention has been called to a statement," Mr. Chamberlain said, "to the effect that there is now an inner cabinet composed of the Prime Minister, the Foreign Secretary, the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the Lord Privy Seal, whose decisions are withheld from the Defence Ministers until they come before the War Cabinet in the form of recommendations.

"The statement is entirely without foundation. I cannot too strongly deprecate the publication in this country of such malicious inventions which, while they may do little harm in this country, provide enemy propagandists with the material for which they are constantly seeking."

Why The Weather?

The bora! There are certain winds that have long been known locally by certain names. The bora, for instance, named from Boreas, is a cold north wind, as its name implies. It occurs in the Adriatic sea region. It is of cyclonic origin; that is, it occurs when there is a certain distribution of "highs" and "lows" around Italy. In the case of the bora, the "low", or cyclone, lies over the southern Adriatic which draws the cold air south from interior Europe making the bora. It is much the same as the norther of North America which occurs when a "low" passes to the east, drawing down on its western side cold air from the interior of Canada forming a norther or cold wave.

QUEBEC LIBERALS HAVE 69 SEATS

Returning Officer Casts Vote For Liberal When Candidates Tie in Recent Election

Marieville, Que., Nov. 7 (CP) — Representation of the Liberal party in Quebec's 86-seat Legislative Assembly was increased to 69 Monday by the vote of Rouville riding's returning officer cast in favor of Liberal candidate Henri Panet.

The returning officer, Remi Pelletier, was called on to vote Monday when a judicial recount conducted before Mr. Justice A. Trahan gave 1,760 ballots each to Panet and Laurent Barre, Union Nationale candidate and representative of Rouville in the legislature since 1931.

Barre had been declared re-elected Oct. 25, voting day, when unofficial returns were compiled. Monday's official count revealed the deadlock.

The vote of Returning Officer Pelletier was the only one cast under similar circumstances in the election which upset the Union National government and sent the Liberals back into power.

In 1936 when the Union Nationale's election victory ended 39 years of Liberal administration of Quebec, Cleophas Bastien, Liberal candidate and legislature member for Berthier, was re-elected on a returning officer's ballot.

Liberals	69
Union Nationale	15
Independents	1
Nationals	1

9 French Pursuit Planes Attack 27 German Machines Downing 9

Paris, Nov. 7—(CP)— A violent aerial combat between twenty-seven German and nine French aeroplanes was reported by the General Staff tonight, with the French announcing they shot down nine of the enemy and escaped themselves without a loss.

The encounter was announced as German ground forces, supported by artillery, were reported increasing their pressure on the French frontier town of Forbach.

The French air squadron took the initiative against the German formation three times its size, the General Staff said, and at least seven of the invading planes fell behind the French front lines.

The night communique said:

"Great activity of the two aerial forces. During a violent aerial combat nine French fighting planes attacked a group of twenty-seven German fighting planes. Nine of the latter were shot down, including seven at least in our territory. Our complete patrol returned unhurt."

The fact that the French High Command, so sparing of words, devoted an entire communique to the French fliers' performance emphasized the importance of the aerial victory.

The safe return of all nine French craft to their bases indicated, in the opinion of military experts, that the Frenchmen carried out their attack with exceptional skill and speed.

This first big clash between planes in battle formation and of similar type was a decisive victory for the French craft and proved that their equipment and fighting qualities leave nothing to be desired, officers said.

Spotting the German craft through a rift in the clouds above Alsace, the French fliers swept into action in triangular formation. The Germans, apparently eager for a fight, attacked in groups of three planes each.

The result was not long in doubt. Outmanoeuvred by the French machines, one German machine after another fell in a long trail of black smoke.

It was believed the toll of German planes might be higher than nine. It was established that seven machines crashed within the French lines and two went down in flames behind the German positions. It was believed, however, that two other German craft were crippled and came down in a French forest.

The clash proved, French officers said, that the planes at the disposal of the French airmen have incomparable striking power and manoeuvrability.

One of the last remaining links with the glamorous colorful minstrel days; of blackface endmen, silver-voiced tenors, the blare of minstrel bands and the gorgeous scenic beauty of American Minstrel productions, was severed here today, when Paul Lalonde, one of America's outstanding minstrels, and Belleville's own contribution to this phase of musical entertainment passed away suddenly in Belleville General Hospital.

The late Mr. Lalonde, was admitted to the institution last night, and an operation was expected to be performed his morning. But he failed to rally from a period of depression and succumbed shortly after eleven o'clock today. He was in his seventieth year.

C. W. L. DISCUSSES RED CROSS WORK

At the regular meeting of the Catholic Women's League held last evening in St. Michael's Academy plans were made for raising funds to aid the Red Cross. Members have been co-operating in the sewing and knitting project of the local Red Cross branch. The C.W.L. made arrangements for a tea to be held in the near future for Red Cross purposes. Routine business was completed at the meeting.

$8,000 Set as Objective In Red Cross Campaign

The executive committee of the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society met last evening and decided upon $8,000 as the objective for the city in the national campaign to raise three million dollars for war purposes.

The campaign committee for Belleville consists of: H. J. Clarke, chairman; J. W. Imlah, treasurer; H. W. Ackerman, Morley Duff, J. B. Boyce, E. F. Bernstein, W. J. Morrison, W. B. Deacon, George Griffin, P. C. MacLaurin, I. G Hefkey, Mrs. F. S. Lazier and Mrs. (Col.) E. A. Geen.

The National Campaign will start on November 13th, and will be the first war appeal of the Canadian Red Cross.

It will be recalled that during the Great War of 1914-1918 the Canadian Red Cross raised nearly ten million dollars for similar purposes, and a further six and a quarter million dollars for the British Red Cross. The people of Belleville made substantial contributions towards the various campaigns for both causes.

The general objectives of the fund are:

1.Provision of raw materials, wool, etc., for make-up by volunteer groups across Canada.

2. The building and equipping of a number of hospitals in England and France for the care and treatment of Canadian wounded.

(Arrangements are already under way for the building and equipping of a Canadian hospital at Cliveden, Lord Astor's estate in England.)

3. Providing medical supplies for use by Red Cross workers in the theatre of war.

4. Provision and maintenance of ambulances and auxiliary services for first aid to Canadian soldiers who have been wounded.

5. Supplies for the special care of soldiers in all Canadian hospitals.

6. Extra comforts to soldier patients—(a service which warmed the hearts of thousands of "Tommies" in the last war).

7. The addition of recreation rooms, special wards for chest treatments, and gymnasia to Canadian Hospitals in England and France.

8. Supplies for Canadian prisoners of war in enemy countries.

9. Support of international liaison offices for exchange of information on prisoner of war, casualties, etc.

10. The provision of rest homes for nurses.

11. Continuation of peace-time programme (such as 43 outpost hospitals on Canada's frontiers, crippled children's aid, Junior Red Cross health instruction, help for sick and needy veterans of the last war, disaster relief, etc.)

12. Emergencies arising from war activities.

Voroshiloff spoke briefly in Red Square, through which thousands of troops marched in a parade that lasted more than 1 1-2 hours.

To the French air force must go the honor of the biggest air triumph in the war so far. Monday's official communique reported nine French pursuit planes attacked a German squadron of 27 and shot down nine while all nine attackers returned safely to their bases.

While the brief communique gave few details the figures speak for themselves. In the first place the 27 enemy machines are the largest number yet reported as taking part in a single engagement. The destruction of one third of this formidable squadron by a greatly inferior force should give German leaders who may have been counting on their air force to break British and French resistance something to think about.

COMINTERN'S PLAN

First Commintern Effort Was Failure, Stalin Changed Policy in 1924

New York, Nov. 7 (AP)—Communist International headquarters in Moscow appears to have decided that this is the appointed hour to strike again for Europe's conversion to the red-flag doctrines.

This move had been expected, but a formal effort hadn't been looked for until the war had been given a chance to crack morale in the belligerent countries.

The appeal by the international (comintern) to the workers of Great Britain and France to "go against those who favor continuation of imperialistic war" fits perfectly, strange though it seem, with what is generally understood to be that organization's program for world revolution.

PLANE PLUMMETS EARTHWARD AND 3 MINERS KILLED

Pilot Attempting Loop With Plane Goes Into Spin And Streaks to Earth Out of Control

TO PROBE CRASH

Sudbury, Ont., Nov. 7—(CP)—Federal investigators today started a probe into the most serious airplane accident in the history of nickel belt aviation, a crash which claimed the lives of three district miners.

Plummeting earthward after it had fallen into a spin in attempting a loop, a red-winged biplane yesterday dashed itself to pieces on the wooded shore of a little unnamed lake a half mile south of nearby Larchwood road.

The dead:

Ross M. Armstrong, 25, formerly of Mannville, Alta. Frank Church, 27, formerly of Saint John, N. B. Donald Lennox, 22, formerly of Redbridge, Ont.

Eye witnesses said that Armstrong pilot of the plane he was flying as a hobby, apparently tried vainly to bring the machine out of the spin it went into at 2,000 feet. The nose of the plane buried itself deep into soft earth at the foot of a clump of dead poplars.

Official Washington Divided On Propriety of Attending Function

(By Beth Campbell, Associated Press Staff Writer).

Washington, Nov. 7—(AP)—Not since the British Embassy's royal garden fete has a party in the United States capital created such a furore as today's 22nd anniversary celebration of the Russian revolution at the Soviet Embassy. Last June, officials and their wives who were not invited to greet King George and Queen Elizabeth fumed over the omission. Today, congressmen and diplomats invited to help the Soviet reception worried over whether or not they should attend.

As the party hour drew near, social scouts were divided on the function's prospects. Some predicted that few persons of importance would attend. Others insisted that everybody would go to see who stayed away.

The one thousand invitations for the affair went out on the heels of a speech by the Soviet Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff's criticizing President Roosevelt for "intervening" in Russia's negotiations with Finland. Mr. Roosevelt reaction was that bad manners should never beget bad manners.

Immediately some senators and members of the House of Representatives let it be known they had sent regrets for the Soviet party.

They explained that they would be out of town, had previous engagements, did not think it was "appropriate," or did not like vodka or caviar.

In previour years, Soviet Embassy invitations had been prized by many, for the parties were among the most lavish ever held here. At one, a 17-foot sturgeon from the Volga centred a buffet table. Always there were mounds of caviar in ice blocks, and the endless quantities of food, flowers and champagne.

Nazi U-Boat Menace "Fairly Mastered"

No Shipping Losses In First 7 Days Of November

British Officials Confident Movement of Supplies From Overseas Dominions Would Function Without Interruption

Britain Cheered by Announcement of Molotoff That Russia Intended to Remain Neutral — Germany's Hope of Military Alliance With Russia Crushed Says Paper

London, Nov. 7 (CP)—Convinced that the Nazi U-boat menace is "fairly mastered", Great Britain today mapped plans to draw on the vast resources of the empire for war supplies.

With no shipping losses reported in the first seven days of November and sharply decreased losses in the preceding month, British officials were confident the movement of supplies from overseas dominions would function without serious interruption.

Consequently plans were announced for the purchase of all Canadian exports of lead and zinc for the duration of the war in addition to the dominion's exportable copper output.

Deal With Egypt.

At the same time the Egyptian government announced it has agreed to sell Britain about one-fifth of that nation's cotton crop. Previously arrangements were made for the acquisition of vast quantities of Australian wool and wheat and South African maize.

With the announced mastery of the submarine menace, Britain expected to be able to take full advantage of the United States "cash and carry" arms sales program.

Some observers predicted that the supply situation would so improve that the projected rationing of butter and bacon would be postponed, at least until after Christmas.

"Despite German boasting, the U-boats have been fairly mastered and many of them have been sunk, an Admiralty spokesman said. "The task of the remainder is becoming increasingly difficult and dangerous."

'FLIVVER' PLANE DAY ARRIVES

Light Airplanes Can Now Be Purchased For Around $1,000 in The States

New York, Nov. 7 (AP)—Now that flying machines can be purchased for around $1,000 on the installment plan, manufacturers of light airplanes believe the day of the "flivver" plane has arrived.

Manufacture of small planes in the United States is booming coincident with a sharp increase in the number of pilots' licences and manufacturers plan an intensive drive next year on the American consumer market.

A government student-training program has stimulated demand for planes.

The price of planes has dropped steadily while at the same time their safety has been improved. A nicely upholstered, automobile-like two-passenger plane for cross country flying can be purchased for less than $2,000 on terms.

Clinton M. Hester, Administrator of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, has said that 1,362 of the single-engine type for one or two passengers were produced in the United States during the first half of 1939. The cheapest of these get from 20 to 25 miles out of a gallon of gasoline and fly around 80 miles an hour.

Spins remain the predominant cause of fatal accidents in private flying. Now a plane brought out by Henry Berliner of College Park, Md., has proved to be spin-proof. Moreover, it lands without an expert touch at the controls because of a tricycle undercarriage.

1,000 LB. STEER STOLEN, SLAUGHTERED

Kitchener, Ont., Nov. 7 (CP)—B. Van Houten, farmer on the Kitchener-Guelph Highway, today reported the theft and butchering of a 1,000 pound steer valued at about $70. The steer was missed from his herd a week ago. The carcass was found on the side of the railway tracks near the farm. The steer had been killed and the front and hind quarters taken.

CHARGE DISMISSED FOR BURNING CROSS ON PRIVATE PROPERTY

As the Canadian Criminal Code does not exactly provide for such cases, Hugh Young of Marmora, found himself once again a free man yesterday, when he was arraigned in Marmora Police Court, held before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd, on charges of burning a fiery cross on the lawn of Alex Quinn on the night of Oct. 8th last.

Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., informed the court that there was no provisions in the Criminal Code for such cases. When Young was arraigned on a charge of disturbing the peace, this charge was also withdrawn, when Mr. Donnan pointed out that the incident did not happen on a public street. Young, who was arrested following the firing of a fiery cross on the premises of Mr. Quinn last month, was given his freedom yesterday. Young had been on bail since Oct. 10th.

Several minor cases of intoxication and infractions of the Highway Traffic Act were also disposed of during the court proceedings. County Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., is in Bancroft today conducting prosecutions in County Police Court.

TRANSIENTS DECREASE ABOUT 50 PER CENT

Statistics, as recorded by the Belleville Police Department throughout the entire year, prove there has been a general decrease in the number of transients traversing the length and breadth of the Dominion, as far as local figures may prove. During the month of October an average of over eight transients registered nightly at the Belleville police station, when a total of 264 signed the recording register during that month.

This figure is a decrease of slightly over fifty per cent over the same period in 1938, as statistics in October of last year showed an average of a fraction over thirteen per night were given shelter at the police station. Last night, however, a marked increase over the average was noted when sixteen transients were billeted in the cell block, Chief Kidd revealed today.

BIKE IS DAMAGED BY AN UNKNOWN

A rather contemptible trick was reported to city police last night when 15-year-old Robert Bone, of 27 Earle St., reported damage to his bicycle. Young Bone had parked his bike outside of Christ Church Parish House, Everett St., while attending a boys' meeting. The bike was left inside of the sidewalk and well off the street. When the lad returned, however, the front fork and front wheel were both badly bent and damaged. P. C. Evans investigated and reported that doubtless some boy had taken the bicycle for a joy ride and damaged it during his sojourn on the public streets, which in no way recompensed young Bone for his loss, however. City Police today revealed there were two bicycles at the police station awaiting their rightful owners. These bikes had been found abandoned by the authorities.

FELLOWSHIP MAIN ROTARY FEATURE CLUB IS TOLD

Committee on Rotary Information in Charge of Meeting on Monday

THREE ADDRESSES

Departing from the usual procedure of after-dinner guest speaker, the Belleville Rotary Club turned to its own roster yesterday and heard three informative addresses by members of the Committee of Rotary Information under the chairmanship of Rotarian Charles Dolan.

Chairman Dolan spoke on "Fellowship", with committee members Rotarian Oswald Scott and Ed Bernstein, delivering dissertations on "Rotary International" and the "Value of Rotary to the Community", respectively.

Rotarian Scott reviewed the life of Rotary since its inception in 1905 when the first club was formed in Chicago, until the present time when it counts five thousand clubs and 200,000 members in its far-flung branches.

Rotary International started in 1910 with the formation of the Winnipeg Club, he said. Since that time it has spread throughout the countries of the world. He paid tribute to Crawford C. McCullough. "One of the most brilliant men ever to occupy the presidential chair."

The International directorate, which has its headquarters in Chicago, consists of fourteen members, seven of which are Americans. "These men, however are exceptionally fairminded and do not take advantage of the balance of power", he said. Meetings are held outside the U.S.A. every four years, the speaker said. "Next year it will be held in Brazil and in 1944 in Toronto, where it was last held in 1924." He urged members to acquaint themselves with the advantages of Rotary.,

Fellowship

Rotarian Charles Dolan urged younger members of the club to avail themselves of the opportunity to attend out-of-town meetings and conventions, "for fellowship is the very groundwork of Rotary".

A man may have a single aim in life, to make money and doing so considers himself a success. But he is not a success if he has achieved nothing else. On the other hand the man, who makes only a comfortable living and enjoys the fellowship of his fellow-man, that man can be marked down as a success, he said.

Crippled Childrens' Work, Boy's Work and other aims of Rotary are outstanding in the life of the club, but in reality are only secondary to fellowship, the speaker pointed out. "Loyalty alone cannot hold men together, there must be fellowship," he added.

... gives men a chance to meet men and form friendships out-of-town, on a basis not found otherwise, he said. "It is a big thing to help one another by being friends and practicing this thing called "fellowship."

Value of Rotary to the Community

"The general conception of Rotary activities as comprehended by the public is that they are of the more spectacular type such as Crippled Children's work, Boys' Work and others," Rotarian Ed Bernstein told the club in his address. "These activities have a sentimental appeal and produce tangible results."

"I can't conceive of anything that can give greater satisfaction than the thrill and general pleasure felt by Chairman Charles Symons and his Crippled Children Work committee, while a similar feeling of pleasure must come to Chairman Joe Shortt and his Boys' Work committee," he said.

"As far as Crippled Childsen's Work is concerned, it is a pity that Rotary members cannot play a more active part in the community. They would get more dividends than what they would spend in time and efforts," the speaker declared, adding that he felt the importance of this work cannot be overestimated.

Community Life

"However, there is another work, not often stressed, perhaps overlooked, and that is the part Rotarians play as citizens of the community in which they live," he said.

"Practically every organization, body or group, contains in the names of their leaders, several Rotarians. In the Chamber of Commerce, the City Council, Boards and philanthropic bodies you will find them." The speaker felt that Rotary had played a great part in the development of these leaders. He could point to many members of the local club who have improved their oratory, broadened their general outlook, and have become imbued with a keen sense of their own responsibility, since joining of the club.

The speakers were cordially thanked by President Howard Clark who presided at the meeting. Rotarian Ross Neal handled the "fine-box" in excellent manner with "Sandy" Burrows and Leo Riggs contributing the musical background in their usual efficient style.

CANADIAN POETS SUBJECT OF TALK

J. R. Pickering Tells Y's Men Twentieth Century Was "Golden Age"

"The opening of the twentieth century marked the 'golden age of Canadian poetry' and for the ensuing few years saw several prolific poets," J. R. Pickering, District Public School Inspector, told the Belleville Y's Men's Club at their weekly luncheon, at which he was the guest speaker, last evening in the Y.M.C.A.

Mr. Pickering's subject of "Canadian Poets" proved highly educational and an unique subject during these times of high pressure discourses. "I am not going to talk of the war, foreign relations or how to beat the depression, the usual subjects given innumerable times at service clubs, but we will review Canadian poets and their writings," were Mr. Pickering's most welcomed opening remarks.

"At the opening of the 20th century, which I always refer to as 'the golden age of Canadian poets', Robert W. Service had not published his works. As a matter of fact it was not until 1907 that Service's works were first recognized.

"However, at the turn of the century there were six outstanding poets, and strangely enough, two each from three different sections of the Dominion. There were W. W. Campbell and Duncan Campbell Scott of Ontario, Dr. Drummond and Rev. Frederick G. Scott (Padre Scott of the C.E.F.) of Quebec and Charles G. E. Roberts and Bliss Carman of the Maritime Provinces, the latter two being cousins," explained the speaker as he gave detailed biographies of the individual poets and minutely related as to their early lives, education and trends of their respective poetry.

In closing Mr. Pickering recited poems and excerpts from all six of Canada's outstanding poets upon whom he had dwelt, much to the pleasure and education of the meeting. The speaker was thanked by Y'sman Robt. Pringle after being introduced by President Harold Vaughan. Alec Gordon provided the musical entertainment with two piano solos of the classical nature.

County Road System Is Made Ready for Cold Weather Driving

The general condition of the county road system, with the exception of the gravel stretches of the Madoc-Belleville and Corbyville-Blessington roads, which will be scarified later, is fairly good, and ready for whatever the winter may bring, County Road Superintendent W. L. Langlois stated this morning.

Final construction and maintenance work on the system has been, or is being, rushed to completion before inclement weather sets in, Mr. Langlois added.

Resurfacing of the Tweed-Crookston road has been completed with workmen now engaged at placing a light surface coat on the Chapman's Corners-Stoco road. Stone crushing equipment will be moved to the Tweed quarry in the near future where material will be made ready for resurfacing of the Tweed-Sulphide road. Another rock-crusher completed operations this week preparing rock, which is now stockpiled, for future use.

Shouldering and ditching of the newly-paved gaps on the Madoc-Belleville Road has been completed, Mr. Langlois said. Sand has been stock-piled in various sections of the county in preparation for winter ice control. A small section of the Eldorado-Malone road has been rebuilt, while a large quantity of fill has been placed on the Tweed-Sulphide near Black Creek which will prevent to a large extent, the annual spring flooding of this section of the road.

John Deacon Pleased To Assist Band In Their Concert

"If there's anything that I can do to help those kids make their band concert a huge success I'll certainly do it," was the comment of Mr. John Deacon, Belleville's versatile tenor, speaking in reference to the Children's band of St. Michael's Academy who are holding a band concert next Friday evening in St. Michael's Auditorium.

It was the reply expected. In our acquaintanceship with Mr. Deacon, dating back to high school years, we have always known him to be to the fore in any undertaking worthwhile. We have seen him a leader in the academic and social life of the Belleville High School; we have seen him as the brains of the old Alma Mater's rugby squad; we have seen him in one of his earlier public appearances as a singer, garbed as a Pierrot, in one of those ever to be remembered 'stunt nights' that used to be quite the vogue at the City Hall.

Since that time he has travelled far afield; been acclaimed at various society musicales in the United States, sang with the famous Roxy's gang over the air, been invited to Banff and the other 'toff' resorts, frequented by the "upper crust", who have a good valuation of a singer's worth, and sang at charitable institutions galore where the reimbursement was meagre but the appreciation and applause such as swells an artist's heart with pure joy and makes him think that after all true pleasure is in the giving.

John Deacon has had his triumph in full measure. Today, his voice is just as rich with volume and range that is surprising. He has been a highly paid artist yet consents to give of his services without stint for any undertaking worthwhile. To us this not surprising, having observed his qualities of generousness in the past, when he was on manhood's threshold. He considers the work of Sister Mary Mercedes in organizing the band, which, incidentally, is the youngest brass band in the Dominion, to be of surpassing merit for it is his belief that when the love and appreciation of good music is inculcated into the souls and hearts of the young that loftier thoughts are engendered which stands them in good stead in later life. These poor lines explain but poorly the sentiments entertained by Mr. Deacon but must suffice.

Space does not permit but it remains for us to stress the point that the staging of this concert and the assistance of Mr. Deacon and the other vocalist, Mr. Harold Barrett, is for the purpose of raising funds to carry on through the purchase of instruments and equipment. The concert is not restricted to religious or social denomination. Indeed everyone in the city is invited and the charge for admittance is only nominal. The accompanist will be Mary Conner Deacon.

Plan to be there on Friday next, November 10th. Several novelty arrangements have been made about which more anent.

KINSMEN CLUB ASKED TO ASSIST WORK OF BLIND

J. Harvey Lyons Requests Local Club to Assist Work Approved by National Convention

WORK REVIEWED

A stirring appeal for endorsation of the proposed National Service Policy of the Kinsmen's Clubs of Canada in which they will finance publicity and propaganda for the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, was made to members of the local Kinsmen Club last night by J. Harvey Lyons, Service Director of the Kinsmen Clubs and Field Secretary of the Institute for the Blind.

Unanimous endorsation of the national convention of Kinsmen held in St. John, N.B., this year proved that executives of the far-flung branches of the Kinsmen Association were in favor of the new policy, Mr. Lyons pointed out.

He reviewed briefly the splendid work being done by the Institute. It is faced with three major problems he said, the prime duty of caring for the necessitous blind of the country; the training for and securing of positions for employable blind, and the most important of all, the prevention of blindness program. Forty-five per cent of Canada's blind should not have been registered with the Institute, he said, and would not have been had the proper preventative measures been taken.

Canada's Duty

"It is Canada's duty to immediately develop a program to cut down blindness in Canada," he said. It is a matter of educating the public to the care of the eye and the immediate treatment of eye injuries."

Referring to the proposed publicity campaign, Mr. Lyons pointed out there were many means of advertising. Newspaper, radio pamphlets, slips in pay envelopes and letters and many other ways. "I can't think of a finer thing than to see the name 'The Kinsmen Clubs of Canada' heading these leaflets and other advertising," he said.

In connection with the prevention of blindness, we are dealing with sighted people in how not to become a member of the Institute for the Blind, he said. "You are helping yourselves and teaching yourselves the care of the eye. You don't appreciate the value of your eyes until you lose them. We don't want any more names registered with the Canadian National Institute for the Blind," he declared.

Cost is Low

The cost of such publicity would be placed on a per capita basis, the speaker said. "Each member of the Kinsmen Clubs would be taxed $3.00 in order to create a real fund for this important work. It is not a high assessment, one you will well be proud of and you will be offering a service to everyone in Canada. It is not the three dollars, so much as the far-reaching effect the amount will have, in helping to make every family aware of the importance of its eyes."

"We are trying to get people to appreciate their eyes before they lose them, for one can get along much easier with them than he or she can without them," he said.

In appealing for the support of the club for the project Mr. Lyons pointed out that there was no personal effort involved and the work would not interfere with the local community project of the club.

The proposed policy will apply equally to clubs from Newfoundland to Victoria, and will be a definite service, he said, closing with, "On behalf of the sighted people of Canada I ask for your support for this project."

Asked to Aid Red Cross

The speaker was introduced by Kinsmen George Carver, while club appreciation was expressed by Kinsmen Jeff Marvell. During the meeting, Mr. Howard Clarke, president of the Belleville Rotary Club and campaign manager for the National Red Cross drive to take place shortly, asked for the co-operation of the Kinsmen in the forthcoming campaign for funds.

Kinsmen Bert Twiddy, George Ashline and Gardner Duff were appointed a committee representing the club on the War-Emergency Committee of the local Red Cross Branch

Other guests included Mr. D. B. Lawley, Superintendent of Field Service for the Canadian National Institute for the Blind who briefly addressed the clubmen.

Four Campbellford Residents Hurt When Car Goes Over Embankment

Three Seriously Injured Were Rushed to Belleville Hospital For Treatment

MISSED TURN IN ROAD

Four people were injured, three of them seriously, nine miles north of Campbellford last night when the automobile in which they were riding plunged over a deep embankment at the side of the road.

Three of the four, all residents of Campbellford, were rushed to Belleville General Hospital after emergency treatment by Dr. Bright of Campbellford, physician at the scene of the accident.

Those in hospital are: Charles Cork, 23, fractured leg, facial lacerations; Teresa Henry, fractured femur, lacerations; Dorothy Henry, a sister, fractures of leg and nose, lacerations. Miss Gladys Booth, the fourth passenger in the car was treated at a nearby farmhouse by Dr. Bright and allowed to return to her home.

According to information from the scene of the accident, Cork, the driver of the car, lost his sense of direction. He turned the motor at what he thought was a turn in the road, and crashed into the deep ditch. The car was badly damaged.

Dr. George H. Stobie and Dr. Lind, Belleville, are in charge of the hospital patients here.

"And do you know why?" persisted Mr. Picobac.

"Because it's such a mild... cool... sweet smoke", said Doc.

"Correct", said Mr. Picobac. "But more than that—it's a perpetual surprise."

"What do you mean, surprise?" demanded the druggist.

"Every time you light up a fresh pipe of Picobac it seems even better than you expected. You never seem to tire of it."

"Picobac certainly holds up", agreed the druggist.

"It surpasses itself", amended Mr. Picobac.

"It DOES taste good in a pipe!"

Sharp Curve Rounded At Corner of Moira And Coleman Streets

Elimination of a dangerous dribing hazard at the corner of Coleman and Moira Streets where city workmen, under the supervision of City Engineer Charles Mott, have reduced the sharp corner to an easy curve by retarding the boulevard some twenty-eight feet, is now complete.

City engineers and workmen today applied the final coating of asphalt, an operation that has been held up for some time due to inability to secure materials.

The elimination of the corner between the Riverside Garage on Coleman Street and the Alliance Tabernacle, removes a source of potential driving danger, City Engineer Mott said today.

"The curb now sweeps around the corner in an easy curve allowing vehicles approaching along Coleman Street to round the corner with a minimum of danger to motor-cars and trucks proceeding along Moira Street," he added.

Other city driving hazards will be removed in the Spring, he said.

THE CITY OF FLINT ROMANCE

The sea tells strange stories. But then the sea is that great reality which is infinite in its moods and in its possibilities. It is one of the three vast realities, the sky, the land and the waters of the earth. It is the boundary of continents and provides the links of empires, even while it separates. On its bosom sail thousands upon thousands of ships as boats have sailed from the first days of civilization, when man first dared set out upon the water and sought trade. The thousands of ships which today bear the world's commerce in their holds in the keeping of tens of thousands of brave men who love the sea with a love that never ends, can tell endless tales, which would make the Arabian Nights' Entertainments rather mild, for the sea is mighty, it dooms many to its depths, and it is moody, it loves the daring and brings him to the voyage end.

To no ships traversing the seas during the present war has more fame attached than to the City of Flint, first as rescuer of 216 persons plunged into the sea by the German U-boat which sent the Athenia, a liner, to the bottom on the first day of the war, and then as an international problem with its seizure by a German pocket battleship on the ground that part of its cargo was contraband. Then came the strange notion which led the German crew to direct the freighter into the far north where the frigid atmosphere was felt by the German crew and their captives on their way to reach the Russian port at Murmansk. Then there was Russia's odd attitude in sending the vessel on to Germany in charge of the German crew which had been placed aboard by the captors, after came the watchful course along the Norwegian coast under the eye of two of Norway's war craft, until it came to Haugesund where the Germans who had used the three mile limit allowed, took the vessel into port on the claim that one of the American crew needed medical attention. Here followed Norway's decision that this was not ample reason as the doctor sent aboard found the man was not so il las reported. Then the prompt internment of the German prize crew and delivery of the vessel into the hands of the American crew.

The peculiar quality of the German mind which would take the freighter into a Russian port with all the consequence which such an act might entail, did not daunt the Norwegians, they hewed to the line of the neutrality law and the Germans lost the ship before it had a chance of reaching a German prize court for adjudication over the issue whether the vessel contained contraband for Britain. One can just imagine the Nazis' spirit of anger rising at this. German comment is that it was an unneutral act.

Norway cut the gordian knot. The vessel is in her port. What the future holds over this is unrevealed.

One can wonder how the German crew which seized, sailed and resailed the Flint and then went into interment at Norway, think of it all. The general notion of the German is that be will be very touchy about this and will not like a laugh at his expense. Will the German Government try to silence the laughter across the world and the cheers which everyone feels for the Norwegians, or will Germany let it drop, rather pleased that it has eased a difficult situation with the United States?

The Germans have lost this prize ship and their temper, they are the butt of laughter. Norway is highly praised for daring to intern proud Germans, representatives of Hitler's yet unbuilt empire of all the earth. One of the little powers did it. She could do it because she had no bones to pick with any nation and merely stuck to the law. Would Nazi Germany had so justly gone about its business, looking after the welfare of its people, instead of ravaging and seizing her neighbors, stirring up the world and starting war! Nazi Germany could have acted as honestly in all her dealings with the peoples of the earth as the Norwegians did with the Flint, but the Nazi wouldn't.

Even old Neptune might have a laugh over the way the land-loving Germans have lost their prey through the justice and fairness of the modern descendants of the old Vikings. Leif Ericson and those other grand old mariners and conquerors of a thousand years ago would like to have lived to this day to see the Germans foiled and nonplussed. It is a story the sea will not forget. So many stories of the sea are sad, but this is not so sad.

There is some talk that the German crew may not have cared to run the gauntlet in the Skaggerak lest British ships appear. But the Germans need not have feared that British ships would have harmed the vessel because British seamen would have done nothing to endanger the lives of the American crew who were prisoners of the German crew on the ship.

Russia is doubtless pleased that the burden is off her shoulders as she is a sort of ally of Germany.

REMEMBRANCE DAY

There will be no celebration of the Armistice in Belleville or elsewhere in the British Empire on November 11th this year. It will be Remembrance Day only.

The Armistice has been broken. To most of the men who fought in the Great War the present conflict is but a resumption of the struggle against those things which have never ceased to threaten democratic government during the past twenty-five years.

So this year war veterans will gather only to give public expression to remembrance of the great sacrifice in blood and treasure climaxed by that fateful November day of 1918. Poppies will be worn as "flowers of remembrance", cenotaphs will be adorned with wreaths, and services held ...... but with a new significance, inasmuch as those who already have died in a new war in defence of the Empire will be among those remembered.

And as Great War veterans gather before the Cenotaphs of the nation this year, the burden of their supplications will be:

> "May our Empire and France never sheathe the sword until the power of right shall prevail and the proponents of might and fear have been swept from the face of the earth, so that never shall we be confronted with the task of making a third inscription on our war memorials."

ENJOYING SMOKE

At one time it was almost axiomatic in Pittsburgh, Pa., that the amount of dirt on a man's collar was a barometer of business conditions. When the great iron and steel mills were busy collars got dirty so fast that most of the wearers carried one or two "spares". At other times business men had clean collars and long faces — when there was no soot it meant diminished payrolls and consequently less money in circulation.

Fortunately Belleville never has had to gauge business conditions by the degree of dirt on white collars, but there have been times when business men would have gladly endured the minor discomfort if it would have meant full payrolls. The gradual prewar upward trend, and the impetus of war requirements, have almost eliminated the slack periods. The rising tempo of the whirr of machinery has given men a new hope and a new sense of independence.

Under more prosperous conditions the lessons of the past ten years should not be forgotten. The welfare of the individual is paramount in the economic life of our city and of all Canada. When the individual has work to do the whole community and the whole nation prosper. We should plan in these days to strengthen and develop our economic structure so that it will not be subject to the weaknesses of depression days.

Let us continue to enjoy the "smoke."

HITLER'S HANDS FULL

Adolf Hitler has his hands full. He must keep his face to the Westwall, for there his might antagonists wait for him. From the west will come shiploads of munitions, guns and planes in British ships whose goal is the abolition of Hitler and all he stands for. He must turn his face to the north and watch the trend in Scandinavia and then look to the Southeast of Europe.

Hitler by his delay in the west, has probably helped to undermine his own structure —the confidence of the German people in him. He still has their support probably but they will soon begin to wonder what it all means to be holding their invincible troops idle and their vaunted air navies from destroying Allied civilization, as he contended. His answer doubtless is that Hitler can't do any such thing with his air force. It is thought by some that he may be husbanding his resources. It begins to look as if Hitler's armed Germany was not made for any such dilemma as has arisen. Is Hitler afraid to lose airships and airmen? If he is how is he going to win the war he once talked about as so certain of victory? His hands are full with so many problems.

It is a thankless task which Adolf Hitler picked for himself. Germany has always been dependent upon its army. It was its all in all. Its fleet never won it a victory. Now the Maginot Line and the prepared neutral nations bar any way that his legions would like to take. So then there remains the German air force, once boasted as the greatest of all the world. But however destructive it may be in a struggle, it has lost some of its prestige in the past two months. Now it is said that the British have reached parity in strength with Germany in the air and are going forward to that great predominance which will put the German chancellor 'on the spot.' His army can't win, France and Britain are certain, his navy can't win, and his air force undoubtedly cannot win. How can he be victor? Down in the Balkans things are moving, not as Hitler would entirely desire, for there Mussolini is working on a neutral bloc to halt any aggression.

German Raiders Harassed Trade in 1914-18 War

(By The Canadian Press)

Fighting a losing battle against allied naval power in the First Great War, raiding German cruisers' aided by armed merchantmen, for a time played havoc with shipping on the high seas. The toll being taken in the present submarine campaign represents only a fraction of the tremendous loss in ships and merchandise suffered in the late summer and autumn of 1914.

Twenty-five years ago tomorrow the German navy lost one of its best raiders when the Karlsruhe, racked by weeks of constant cruising in the Atlantic Ocean, suddenly blew up in West Indian waters after sinking 15 ships. Commanded by Capt. Kohler the Karlsruhe was one of a quartet of German cruisers that contributed much to the short-lived success of the enemy's ocean wolves.

The cruisers between them destroyed about 50 ships and millions of dollars worth of merchandise. Their depredations had become a matter of history when Capt. Felix von Luckner startled allied composure nearly four years later by his daring achievements in the Seeadler in the South Atlantic and Pacific.

Unstained by the despicable incidents that marked the German submarine campaign, the doings of the raiding cruisers rank as the brightest exploits of the enemy's naval arm during the war.

The Karlsruhe ranked second to the Emden in point of achievement. Commanded by Capt. Karl von Muller, the Emden ranged up and down the East Indies, sinking or capturing 23 ships in a series of audacious feats, topped off by the torpedoing of a Russian cruiser and a French destroyer under the guns of the British fort at Penang. She was run down and sunk Nov. 9, 1914, at Cocos Island by the Australian cruiser Sydney.

Other Marauders

Not so spectacular were the achievements of the Konigsberg and the Dresden. The former started out with the Emden in the Indian Ocean, sank the guard ships, Cupid and Khalifa and then destroyed the cruiser Pegasus which was undergoing repairs in the roadstead at Zanzibar. Shortly afterward the Konigsberg ran aground in the shallow waters of the Rufiji River south of Dar-es-Salaam and did no further damage. She was destroyed by the British in July, 1915.

Early in the war the Dresden operated with the Karlsruhe and sank several ships before being chased south where she hid for a time in September in the vicinity of Cape Horn before venturing into the Pacific. There the Dresden joined Admiral Graf von Spee's squadron and participated in the great naval battles of Coronel and the Falkland Islands.

Sole German survivor of the latter battle, the Dresden lay hidden in the innermost recesses of the Magellan Staits for a couple of months. But she was found March 14, 1915, by the British cruisers Kent, Glasgow and Orama, who brought her career to an end.

The ocean passages were again secure for Great Britain and her Allies. British warcraft left their stations on the oceans to assist in the operations in the North Sea and the Mediterranean.

HITLER'S VEST AROUSES SPECULATION

Arriving at the Kroll opera house in Berlin to address the Reichstag, Fuehrer Hitler caused considerable speculation among observers when he arrived for the ceremony dressed in a great coat while the other members of his entourage were in dress uniform. The bulge underneath Hitler's great coat aroused speculation as to whether he was wearing a bullet-proof vest.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

The Physical Requirements of the Aviator

In these days when the world is becoming more air-minded, and a continent or an ocean can be spanned in about half a day, more and more of our boys and young men are considering aviation as a career. They feel that the professions are crowded and that aviation offers an excellent opportunity for fame and fortune.

During the last war I examined many recruits for the air service, an examination that differed to some extent from that of the other branches of the service as to eyesight, hearing, sense of balance and condition of heart and lungs. Today, the physician examining recruits for the air service or commercial service gives an even more searching examination.

Dr. Samuel E. Brown, M.C., in Rocky Mountain Medical Journal says:

"In examining an aviation candidate a complete history should be obtained. Regardless of physical findings a history of the following should be considered a disqualification for flying training.

1—Encephalitis letharica—sleeping sickness-or any illness accompanied by diplobia (seeing double), and sleepliness because of the chances of the return of the symptoms.

2—Syphilis, due to the possibility of latent or late effects.

3—Repeated attacks of asthma or hay fever.

4—Recent attacks of malaria, on account of lower resistance, the uncertainty of a cure, and the sudden and extreme changes in temperance encountered in flying.

5—Organic heart disease.

6—Recurrent (occurring from time to time) attacks of any form of rheumatism, due to its likelihood of heart complications.

7— Paraxysmal tacchycardia (attacks of very rapid beating of the heart) owing to the probability of having an attack while flying.

8—Stone in the kidney.

9—A history of an operation on the mastoid bone behind the ear, or a definite history of chronic inflammation of the middle ear, unless there has been no symptoms for a period of six months.

The fact that the boy or young adult has a history of any of the above conditions does not mean that he should give up the idea of trying to fly; some of the above conditions can be corrected by regular and persistent treatment. There are some of the above conditions which cannot be corrected sufficiently to permit flying but in which treatment can be of considerable benefit.

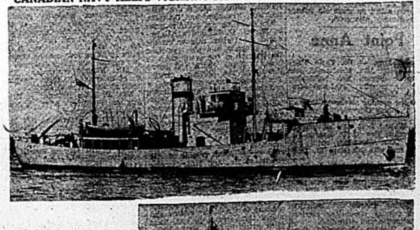
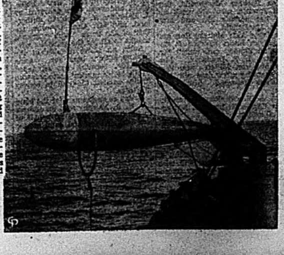
CANADIAN NAVY KEEPS VIGILANT PATROL OF COASTAL WATERS





Immediately upon the outbreak of war the small but efficient Canadian navy commenced its vigilant patrol of Canadian coastal waters. M.H.C.S. Funday, ABOVE, is one of the minesweepers patrolling Canada's Atlantic coast to keep them clear of enemy mines. Paravanes, RIGHT are used by the minesweeper to locate the mines. The minesweeper tows one of these paravanes on either side at a constant depth. They spread out, forming a wedge and sweeping a broad patch. When they foul the mooring line of a mine, the mooring wire slides along the paravane wire to the paravane, where it is severed by a cutter on the head of the paravane. Freed of its moorings the mine rises to the surface and is easily destroyed.

THE RUNAWAY

by

Kathleen Norris

Rebecca worked at the back of the loft behind a flimsy wall of beaverboard. She opened beaverboard boxes six feet square and three feet deep lifted out dresses and coats, looked them over, piled them on the tag tables for the sore flying fingers of the markers to tag. The packages were from Eastern manufacturers; they had come crated, but the boys downstairs had knocked away the wood.

Two colored men carried away great canvas sheets loaded with gray coarse paper. It was their business to sift it all through their fingers to be sure that no belt or dress had escaped Becky's eyes. It was the business of, Becky and several other perspiring, pale, breathless women to look for machine slips, buttons missing or broken, seams opened.

When these occurred, and they often occurred, the sales invoice had to be found on the file, identified with the garment, pinned to it, and the whole flung into a basket for Mr. Costelli. But the work at the Bon Marche went on at such breakneck speed, the pressure was so terrific, that many mistakes escaped, some stock was ruined in the handling and some was lost, and then there was trouble.

"The customer won't take it with the zipper broken, Flood You girls should have caught that. She wants this dress, she wants to wear it tonight, the sale's made, and here it is with a spot on the hem. We can't have that kind of thing, Flood: They were all called by their last names; Flood, Neilan, Buckley, White, Payson. Another little coarseness that had troubled her at first.

For the girls on the floor life was even harder than in the stock rooms. They were on their feet all day ,and they had to deal with the customers. Such cheap, unreasonable, exacting women Becky had not before known could exist at all. They were as fierce as the girls; they exacted fittings, disputed prices, they spoiled dresses with lipstick, perspiration, dirty hands; blamed saleswomen mercilessly. They complained of the rudeness of the girls; they would never patronize the Bon Marche again until that girl was fired!

High on columns ringed about with cheap balustrades watchers were perched. When they saw a theft they blew a shrill whistle and pointed, and the crowd drew away from some protesting angry woman who found a detective quiet and soothing and persuasive at her elbow. The whistle also blew when a large bill had to be changed, and the floor-walker who took it called its denomination loudly as he went with it toward the office. There was no credit at the Bon Marche, no deliveries. Customers showed at the street door a certificate of sale; checkers there made a cursory examination of purchases before plumping them on the wrapping desk behind the door. No customer was supposed to leave until a sale had been made, and the girl who could not wheedle, bully persuade her into a sale very simply lost her job at the end of the day, was paid to the last closely calculated penny, watched the bookkeeper's fountain pen make note of deductions, and disappear forever.

There was laughter behind the scenes at the Bon Marche; there was company, even if of a deplorable sort, and Becky had hungered for both. She tried to make herself the most valuable clerk among these poor, ignorant, dirty, defrauded girls; she had heard her father say that in every group of employees there was always one who stood head and shoulders above the rest, who was selected for promotion by his superiors long before he dreamed himself anything but a cog in the machine.

But the only result of this was that the girls came to distrust her, and one of the bosses, a married man of middle age, made bold annoying overtures, that even her ignorance and innocence could not misunderstand.

She was so tired these nights that she went home at five to lie flat on her bed for an hour or, if Gavin did not come in, for a second hour. When he was away she often lay broken until eight or nine o'clock, too completely exhausted even to begin to rest. To soak in a hot deep bath, to drink a whole pint of canned tomato soup thinned with hot milk, to nibble a chocolate bar as she lay clean and fed, reading in her bed afterward, these were her happiest hours.

When instead she had to stagger about getting a meal for Gavin, having bacon catch on the pan while she put cups on the table, or hearing coffee boil over in a froth of brown grounds when he was cutting the steak, her wearied nerves gave way, and she and he quarreled like all the other married couples in the apartment whose loud voices went up and down the air shaft.

INSTALMENT 11

These disputes frightened Rebecca . They seemed to affect her physically, upsetting her digestion, robbing her nights of sleep. If afterward Gavin would be apologetic and forgiving she would always meet him halfway, thankful to feel peace and reassurance invading her spirit once more. Sometimes after a reconciliation they would sit without moving for half an hour in the apartment's one big chair, Gavin smoking his pipe and meditating with half-closed eyes, Rebecca almost asleep against his shoulder.

"You poor little pussy," you're having a rotten kind of time", he might say with unusual consideration, and when he did, she was happy again, she loved him again.

It had its good moments, but it was not exactly a life; it wasn't building toward anything, getting anywhere. She hated her job, she hated being alone in the city, she hated Gavin to go away and was not much happier when he was about. It was unsatisfactory all around, and for the first time in her life Becky felt unequal to her problem.

There seemed to be no answer as the days went by and were weeks and months. Yet the time flew, too, and Rebecca counted the months on her fingers amazedly when in late July she knew that she was going to have a baby. This had not been a part of her plan; she had hoped to keep free of this complication of all complications for another year or two. But the fact was a fact now. She could not continue her work at the Bon Marche long with an early-February baby coming.

She waited a month, another month. Then she told Gavin. His honest consternation made her heart sink, and their first talk of the child left her in angry tears. "You'll see, you'll be sorry," he said. There was nothing that she dared answer.

Her back ached; she felt cold and tired all the time. Wretchedly she gave up her job, crouched at home, stupid and dizzy, hardly caring that bills accumulated as fas as dust did.

One night when there chanced to be something of the old harmony between them Gavin suggested that she go home to have the baby. He had been all the evening before at the dog races and had won largely. He had given her a hundred dollars with which to handle some of the bills, and although she knew it would leave half of them unpaid, still the money looked comforting to her. A hundred dollars just out of the sky; A few days before, as an alternative to actually moving out, he had put up the rent. She could put this money on butcher and grocery bills and so feel free for a little while at least to charge afresh.

Gavin expected to go out tonight at nine o'clock for an evening of poker. Meanwhile he lay back in the big chair, smoking, listening to the radio.

"Listen, Beck, what d'you suppose your mother'd say if you went home in January?"

An odd hesitancy, a certain fear flickered across her face. "I've treated them so badly."

"Oh, shucks, they'd forget all that. Hospital there?"

"A fine one. The Pennoyer Memorial." But still she was doubtful, a fine line drawn across her forehead.

"Your mother'd be crazy with joy."

Rebecca felt tears sting at the back of her eyes. She herself, given rein to. think what it might mean, would be the one to be crazy with joy! Home again; it would be heaven after this!

But how take it? How reconcile her pride to going back, wearing the very suit in which she ran away; how put a bold face on disillusionment and fear and failure? In a moment of chill premonition she wondered if Gavin would come for her, would be there when the baby was born, would send the necessary money.

"Gavin, when could you come to Salletts if I went home?"

"Oh, gosh, why should I go there? You'd be coming back."

"But you'd want to see.... And I'd want you there...." Her voice was thickening into maddening tears. "I know you're— you're cross about it!" She stopped speaking, abruptly.

"You mean the kid?" he asked slowly. "Well, I've always thought I'd like a kid. But I wish to hell this one hadn't decided to come along right now!"

"I wish so too!" Rebecca said, trying to make her tone philosophical, cheerful. But her eyes were wet.

"You and the kid could come back when you got ready. I wouldn't have any objection to having a cute little girl around here," Gavin said thoughtfully, over his pipe. "Keep you from places like that damn dress shop, anyway. But we may be moved to Los Angeles any time now...."

She had to think the situation out, to answer the problem without help from him. Hour after hour Rebecca weighed one thing against the other. He might not fail her, of course. He was generous enough when he wanted to be. If she went home now in mid-November, he might come to Salletts for Christmas. They could give up this apartment, save a hundred a month that way. He could go south and see Lomita, the man all-important in the commercial photography business. No one in the world knew more about cameras than Gavin, and all Hollywood's business centred on cameras. Gavin knew Lomita personally, would have no trouble, he was sure, in getting a good job under him.

"But gosh, you can't drag a woman down there, pay hotel bills for three weeks while you're getting an appointment!" Gavin had good-naturedly grumbled. Alone, he could bunk with Wilson or Dave or any one of the boys. And after February she and the baby could go down.

In the end she went home. Gavin gave her another hundred dollars one morning, the morning they would start a fresh week at the Golcondita. Rebecca determined pay off most of the remaining bills, even though it would leave her with twenty dollars in her purse, give up the apartment, send Gavin south with Wilson in Wilson's car to see the all-important Lomita. And she herself went down to the ferry and bought a ticket for Salletts.

Salletts looked oddly shrunken when she got out of the train in bleak midafternoon. All the little shops of Main street looked countrified and small. A jay little town crawling up the first slopes of the Sierras, but the fresh air struck upon her flushed face deliciously cool and sweet, and when she half jumped and half tumbled out of the taxi at her mother's kitchen door Becky was laughing and crying together in excitement.

Eldorado

Eldorado — A very successful Hallowe'en Masquerade social evening was held in the Sunday School rooms of the Eldorado Church on Thursday evening, November 2nd, under the auspices of the Union and Eldorado Y.P.U..

The rooms were decorated with Jack-o-lanterns, black cats, orange and black streamers and as the guests arrived they were welcomed at the door by a ghost dressed in white.

Miss Phyllis Strebe very capably performed the duties of convener of recreation. About sixty-five young people gathered, thirty-two in costume. These were of various types and some of which were very lovely. First on the programme was the grand parade of all who were in costume. Dr. F. J. Nickle, Rev. G. Best dressed child, Dorothy Martin; best comic child, Donna Parnell; best dressed Sr. girls, Misses Evelyn Chambers and Ruth Chambers, who represented the Gold Dust twins; best comic lady, Mrs. Robt. Blakely; best comic gent, Mr. Walter Moran.

The most difficult to guess, Mr. Jack Fitzgerald.

After all had unmasked, games and contests were enjoyed and at the close lunch of cake, popcorn, candy and doughnuts were served and the National Anthem brought a very entertaining evening to a close.

KING OF BELGIANS GOES TO HAGUE FOR STAFF TALKS

Queen Wilhelmina And Leopold Confer at Palace Until Late Hour Today

The Hague, Nov. 7—(AP)—Leopold, King of the Belgians, and Queen Wilhemina of the Netherlands engaged today in urgent talks aimed apparently at keeping their countries out of war and protecting their vital interests.

here wre suggestions that the two lowland states, lying between Germany and France, were seeking to reconcile divergent foreign policies and present a joint neutrality front.

King Leopold arrived late last evening after a motor trip from Brussels and proceeded at once to the Nooreinde Palace, where he conferred with Queen Wilhelmina until 1.30 a.m.

King Leopold followed up last night's conference with another hour and one-half meeting with Queen Wilhelmina today. There was no official announcement following the talk, but informed quarters said King Leopold was concerned over the possibility of a German attack against France through Belgium.

Foreign Ministers Present

Participating in the conference were Queen Wilhelmina's Foreign Minister, Eelco Van Kleffens, and the Belgian Foreign Minister, Paul Henri Spaak, who came here with King Leopold.

Efforts were made to keep the visit a secret, but placing of a heavy military guard outside the palace caused the news to leak out. An official announcement issued after midnight noted King Leopold's arrival but did not comment on the reason for the visit.

Informed sources said only that King Leopold had come here to "discuss some aspects of the international situation." These sources disclaimed knowledge of any new move by Germany which might have motivated the conversations.

No Peace Move Considered

Usually competent authorities said it was unlikely that the two sovereigns were considering a peace move.

Possibility of a mutual assistance pact between the nations also was generally discounted.

The two states have followed divergent foreign policies in recent years. While Belgium has accepted guarantees from both Germany and Great Britain, the Netherlands has declined to accept pledges from either.

Prize Crew Taken To the Fortress At Kongsvinger

Bergen, Nov. 7 (AP)—Seventeen German seamen, the erstwhile prize crew of the American freighter City of Flint, were removed from the minelayer Olav Tryggvason today to be taken to the fortress at Kongsvinger, near the Swedish border.

The Germans, held when Norway returned the City of Flint to her American crew, were expected to leave on tonight's train for the trip across southern Norway.

An eighteenth German originally in the prize crew, became ill and was left at Murmansk, Soviet Russian port at which the Flint stopped after her capture by a German raider Oct. 9.

The American crew, granted no shore leave, was busy putting the ship in order. This was not taken as an indication of early departure, however.

Captain J. A. Gainard, only member of the Flint's company who has been ashore, smilingly commented, "I am a sailor, not a salesman," in response to questions about the cargo. It originally was consigned to Great Britain, and Germany contends it included contraband.

Shipping sources in Bergen expressed doubt that the cargo would be unloaded here, except possibly the portion which might be contraband and on which there was a possible German claim.

MASSASSAGA W. A.

The November meeting of the Massassaga W.A. was held on Wednesday afternoon, November first at Mrs. Will Gray's home, with a good attendance.

A bazaar and sale of all kinds of useful articles had been made ready for this meeting. A nice variety of aprons were readily bought. The donations were many and varied. About twelve dollars was realized from the bazaar.

Mrs. C. Thompson had charge of the program for the meeting. Mrs. Lowe read a Psalm for the Scripture lesson. A reading by Mrs. R. Weese entitled "The Strike" was enjoyed also an interesting reading called "The Day of Law" by Mrs. Wm. Jose. Several business matters were introduced by the president. A vote was carried that instead of a fowl supper a donation of $2.00 be asked for from each separate family to raise money for church purposes. Collection $2.70. Twenty-two members were present and a social hour was enjoyed after the meeting with refreshments served.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Mother Should Take Immediate Steps if She Suspects Baby Swallowed some object.

If a mother can find no trace of a safety pin that she knows was attached to the baby's clothes, she should lose not a moment in getting the child to the nearest place where she can have an X-ray of the child's stomach. As we saw yesterday, babies naturally put into their mouths almost anything and everything they get their hands on. So if a pin is missing, there is some chance that the child may have swallowed it.

Fortunately, many doctors' offices are today equipped with fluoroscopes—machines that differ from X-ray in that the parts of the body and the bones can be seen moving. Almost every hospital has such a machine today, and under one of these it is only a matter of a minute or two to place the child on the screen and look at the digestive tract. If a pin is anywhere, from the throat to the rectum, it can be seen and steps taken for its removal. If it isn't visible, the mother can take her child and go home with complete confidence that the pin went somewhere else—the child didn't swallow it. However, I know from experience, if the mother does not satisfy herself that the pin wasn't swallowed, she will stew and fret about it for days when likely as not it fell behind the dresser.

We have made great improvements recently in the instruments used to extract foreign bodies from the stomach. The one most used is a long, thin affair which is pushed down the throat to where the pin can be seen under the fluoroscope. Sometimes if the pin is open, it can be closed, and so easily removed. If it cannot be closed and the pointed end is down, it can be pulled out that way without injury to any of the parts. However, if the point is up, then the pin can be cut into two parts and removed that way. The great danger in swallowing a pin is that the accident goes unnoticed. Before anything is known about it, the sharp point has perforated the gut. When this happens there is danger of peritonitis and the child may well lose its life.

Plain pins are swallowed less often than safety pins because they aren't used in dressing the child and aren't —or shouldn't be —where the child could reach them. Such pins are dangerous in that they are less likely to be noticed and may lie in the stomach for some time or cause real damage before their presence is suspected. When they are detected, however, they are easily removed.

A boy of seven or eight was brought to me once because he was constipated. I examined him carefully to see what could be wrong and I thought I located something hard in the lower end of the bowel. I investigated and, sure enough, there was a mass of small bnes. like those of a chicken but smaller. Well, I removed this mass of bones which had blocked up the bowel and, of course, the constipation disappeared at once.

After I had given the boy relief I inquired of the parents what the bones were. I learned from them that they had had several feeds of partridge. The young boy was passionately fond of the meat and had insisted on consuming the bones as well. Some of the bones were extremely sharp and as I removed them I couldn't help but wonder how the child had escaped a perforation of the digestive tract at some point.

The Quints have never given us a fright by swallowing anything dangerous because we always keep all pin and pointed objects out of their reach.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Observing the Amenities Makes us Artists in Living

Your dictionary will tell you that amenity means "the quality of being pleasant and agreeable"; that amenities (and we usually use the word in plural) means "acts, pursuits, civilities, or the like, expressing or furthering pleasantness or smoothness of social intercourse."

Amenities are the Big Little Things that pleasant people do and say, the graces that make these people artists in living. The people who practise the "civilities that further pleasantness or smoothness" are, of course, those who have consideration for other people. Who charmingly and spontaneously do and say the agreeable thing. Who know that mannerliness, kindness and courtesy soothe and heal and inspire those who walk with them or pass by them in the pathway of their lives. Who are sustained in the faith that life is good, and who deeply feel the responsibility of contributing their quota to that goodness.

To make the machinery of daily living run more smoothly, to make life pleasanter, to make others more comfortable and to make ourselves more comfortable, let's resolve to pay deep attention to practising "those little nameless acts of kindness and of love"—the amenities. Let's not be thick-skinned, callous, smug or indifferent to other people's happiness, comfort and well-being. Let's not brush by people in life with never a by-your-leave. Let's not grump our way along.

Let's oil the machinery of life with a pleasant and polite "Please", to a bus driver as well as to Mrs. Personage. Let's spend our "Thank you's" spontaneously and naturally. Let's recognize another's courtesy and say, "How kind of you to say that, or, "You were very good to do that for me".

Let's rise when we should rise. Let's give up our seats when we should. Let's quickly and graciously yield to the rights or convenience of others. Let's step aside when we should step aside. Let's do courteous services to our family, friends, acquaintances, to strangers who need our help. Let's be quick to apologize for any omission or thoughtlessness. Let's promptly write our gracious little notes of thanks, good wishes, and congratulations. Let's make kindness the law of our tongue, courtesy the law of our spirit.

The rules of etiquette are the basic dress of life. The amenities are the harmonious accessories. Together they make the perfect design for living.

Inconsiderate Pests

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

Will you kindly tell us in your column how very impolite it is for two people at a club house to hold a conversation during the program.

Constant Reader

People who talk while a program of any kind is going on are pests. They show no kindness, no consideration for the feelings of others. If they had any conception of decent behavior, they would be thorougly ashamed of themselves.

Conducting a program, taking part in a performance, making a speech aren't easy things to do, and these people deserve our attention and co-operation. Even if we aren't especially interested in what is going on, we have no right to make ourselves the despair of the people who have worked faithfully to make the performance a success.

Courtesy Tip

"Manners must adorn knowledge and smooth its way through the world. Like a great rough diamond, it may do very well in a closet by way of curiosity, and also for its intrinsic value; but it will never be worn, nor shine, if it is not polished."—Chesterfield.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

His Letters Remain Unanswered

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am of a very romantic nature, and about three months ago became acquainted with a young lady who was visiting her cousin here. She lives in another city and invited me to see her at her home. I went and enjoyed my visit very much. Even her family were friendly.

After my return, we started to write to each other, and correspond regularly. Then for some reason unknown to me, she stopped. She comes to visit her cousin here occasionally, but has stopped calling me on the phone as she did formerly. I've written her six or eight times and have received no replies. Would it be wise to go and see her without an invitation, or shall I let the whole affair drop?

Disappointed

Eight unanswered letters is a pretty stiff dose for a young man to swallow. But there are cases where a persistent suitor has won out in the end. Better try and meet her "by chance", as, if you go uninvited, you might get a decided rebuff. If you happen to meet the young lady "by chance", you might ask her why she dropped you so suddenly. Perhaps her parents think she is so young to have company.

Three Years His Senior

Dear Miss Fairfax:

The young man I am going with is 24 years old, and I am almost 27. We love each other dearly, but when I think of my being so much older than he is I hesitate about marrying him. I'm afraid it will bother me still more after marriage.

And then too, I imagine that people will talk about me for "robbing the cradle", as they call it. I'm seriously thinking of giving him up for this reason. Do you think he would tire of me after we married, should he become acquainted with a younger girl?

Fern

Why make yourself unhappy, my dear, scaring up trouble? This difference of ages isn't anything to worry about. Some very successful marriages are recorded, where the wife is a few years older than the husband. For instance, that of Disraeli, one of Queen Victoria's prime ministers.

She Has Been Advancing Money to Her Boy Friend

Dear Miss Fairfax

I am 22 years old, and my boy friend is 30 years old. We have been seeing each other for about six months, and during all that time he has been out of work. He does an odd job once in a while for which he doesn't get much.

I have been paying his board for him, ever since I've known him, and also given him extra money. The trouble is that he is very stubborn, and if he doesn't have his way he will quarrel with me. I love him very much and get brokenhearted when he doesn't speak to me. I cry a great deal. He begs me not to leave him. He can be so sweet to me at times.

Lonely

I'm afraid, my dear, that this young man is not worthy of you. To help a friend over a tight place is all right sometimes, but for a young able-bodied man of 30 to take money from a girl continually, and even allow her to pay his board, is incomprehensible. I hope you will stop doing this. I shouldn't worry over his stubbornness. Get a boy friend who is less selfish.

PLAINFIELD W. I.

The Plainfield Women's Institute meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Almond Hall. The meeting opened with community singing led by Mrs. Arthur Hall. The Roll Call was answered by a Peace Quotation.

The reports of the Women's Convention were given by Mrs. Bernice Moore and Mrs. Earl Outwater. Mrs. Mackenzie and Mrs. E. Outwater, president, are holding classes for the girls work. A delicious lunch was then served.

The Stars Say

For Wednesday, November 8

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

LIVELY and interesting occurrences are read from the predominant planetary aspects, with much stirring in both business and intimate relations. The social, sentimental, artistic or intellectual aspect may be uppermost, calling for some drastic manoeuvering to successfully put over major programs. This may involve minor changes, not entirely satisfactory, but in all be guided by personal intuitions rather than suggestions of others. Refrain from irritability and acting on impulses.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a lively and fruitful year, with much definite action in business as well as in the realm of the artistic, social, emotional or intellectual. In making changes be guided by insistent intuitional guidance rather than impulsive urges or the advice of questionable friends. Much is to be expected from creative work in artistic lines—drama, music, literature—where determined application should win recognition.

The W. I. Officers of North Hastings Hold Rally

With a registration of over sixty officers and interested members of the first officers rally of the North Hastings district Women's Institute was held in Ivanhoe Hall on Friday, November 3.

Ideal weather prevailed as the ladies assembled for the morning conference at ten o'clock. In the absence of the district president, the vice-president, Mrs. Haacke of Delora, occupied the chair. After opening with the Ode, the guest speaker, Mrs. Houck of Brampton was introduced. Duties and qualities of all officers were discussed in detail as well as the purpose of the Red Cross Society. Promptly at twelve o'clock the session adjourned to partake of a delicious luncheon, which had been prepared by the ladies of the Ivanhoe Institute.

Resuming the session at one o'clock parliamentary procedure was discussed in conducting institute meetings. The well balanced program which must be three-fold, practical, social and educational suggests improvements which could be beneficial in program planning. Mrs. Houcks suggests institutes studying the following books: "Child's Psychology," "Communism, Facism and Nazism;" "Family Relationships;" "Art and Musical Appreciation" and "Dietary Deficiencies."

Her remarks were closed by requesting all to try out her suggestions and note results.

Mrs. Birdsall, who is on the provincial committee for the voluntary registration of women, was introduced. This division, known as Division 9, comprising Hastings, Peterboro and Northumberland counties, are being asked to conduct registration booths to determine the woman power of our land in case of any war emergency.

The two main groups are the housing of refugees and the placing of women and girls for war work in munition factories, etc.

Mrs. Vowels of Hastings Village, presented and discussed the questionnaire, which all women of Canada will have the opportunity of signing and thereby rendering service to our King and Country.

At a late hour the meeting closed all feeling that a most pleasant as well as a profitable day had been spent.

SHANNONVILLE W.M.S.

The monthly meeting of the W.M.S. of Shannonville United Church was held at the home of Mrs. Will Sine on Thursday p.m. Nov. 2nd. with 26 ladies in attendance and Mrs. Frank Doxtater, group leader in charge. Mrs. Harvey Shetler favoured with a lovely solo playing her own organ accompaniment. After the call to worship by the leader, Mrs. C. Boultstridge offered prayer and a prayer for Canada was given by Mrs. Orval Stratton. Roll was called by the Secretary and brought forth a good response of verses containing the word "peace."

Ladies are asked to bring in their mite boxes and coin bags to the next meeting. The visitors were very cordially welcomed by the President, Mrs. Everett Stratton who took charge of the business.

A playlet was put on by Mrs. Doxtater and some of the ladies on her groupe i.e. Mrs. Claude Clarke, Mrs. Fred Barlow, Mrs. Sam Elliott, Mrs. Lorne Lazier and Mrs. W. D. Robertson, entitled "Wakeup". The playlet was in favor of Stewardship and those taking part made it very interesting.

A beautiful duet was given by Mrs. Arthur Houston and Mrs. Damon Hinchey. Mrs. Doxtater read a poem entitled "Teach us to Love." Mrs. Doxtater expressed her thanks to those who had helped with the meeting. After the closing hymn all repeated the Mizpah benediction. Collection was $3.75 and for flower fund $1.25. Total collection $5. The ladies were all invited to the dining room where the hostess and her assistants served a delicious lunch which was much enjoyed by all present.

WALLBRIDGE L.A.S.

On Wednesday, Nov. 1st., the regular meeting of the Ladies' Aid was held at the home of Mrs. R. Noyes at the noon hour. Dinner was served to about 40 guests, afterwards Mrs. L. PSORIASIS

By McKEOWN'S DRUG STORE

Not particularly painful, not fatal, or even dangerous, Psoriasis is still an unsightly and disfiguring ailment. Those who are afflicted with this blotchy skin disfigurement will go to any lengths to effect a cure.

Sunlight is the best cure. The body regularly exposed to strong sunshine recovers its normal condition within a short time.

Not everyone so afflicted can afford the time and money for a sunshine cure in Florida or Arizona. But everyone can consult a good doctor, take regular sun lamp treatments, regiment their lives and habits to effect a cure.

Prescriptions for medication in such treatments should be filled by a skilled and reputable pharmacist.

Getting Your Money's Worth Out of Furs

By Eleanor Ross

Fur coat time again, and once more the parade of mink, beaver, caracul, Persian lamb and other pelts is getting under way. We aren't in the fashion field, so our words have nothing to do with the type of coats selected. Except, in passing, we would like to advise our friends to buy a skin that is the best of its kind. In other words, better select the finest grade of kidskin than a poor grade of caracul. And go to a good store to purchase it, no matter how little you have to spend. Now we'll assume you have selected your fur coat, and this is where we come in with words of advice on its care:

Unless the fur coat is properly handled and cared for, you won't get your money's worth out of it, even if it has cost thousands. First of all, have a special place in the closet for the coat, and keep it in a garment bag. Many furriers have special bags for furs on sale and will advise you as to the best type to select. So when you come home, give the coat a good shaking to shed any top dust, and then after an airing, pop it right in the bag in the closet. Don't leave it draped over a chair or on the bed. Don't hang the coat in a closet that is hot or which has a hot water pipe right by it. If there is no such closet available, better place it in a good garment bag and hang it in the far corner of a room, away from any heat, and place a draw curtain over it.

Try to avoid getting your coat wet. A taxi ride is cheaper than risking the chance of damaging your coat. Should the coat get wet, never, never place it to dry near a radiator or fire. Shake it out as much as possible, then hang it in a cool, dry place, if possible with air circulating around it. Don't replace it in the garment bag and closet until it is thoroughly dry.

Whenever possible, remove your fur coat before sitting down. If this is impractical, at least always unbutton it to prevent undue strain at the seams. Make sure that a fox collar is not against the back of a chair, with your body weight pressed against it. If there should be a rip, take it to your furrier, no matter how minute the tear may be. Never attempt home treatment on skins. A small fee for repairing may save a big bill later on. As soon as the edges and the sleeves show signs of wear have the rubbed out parts repaired. Don't carry bundles against the fur. Have a good substantial tweed or wool coat for shopping. Show yourself in all the glory of your new fur coat at a different time than marketing hours.

Finally, when warm weather comes again, never attempt home storage of furs. Send the coat away to a reliable fur storage house. The small premium is insurance, not only against moths and the damage done by humid, hot air, but against theft and fire as well.

Celebrate 35th Anniversary of Their Marriage

On Thursday, Oct. 26th a number of old neighbors and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Denyes took their home by storm to celebrate with them and their family, their 35th wedding anniversary.

As well as friends from the immediate neighborhood there were relatives and friends from Belleville, Trenton, Colborne and various points in the township.

Mr. Frank Reid very capably fulfilled the duties of chairman. He congratulated Mr. and Mrs. Denyes on their long and useful married life in the community and paid them glowing tribute as a neighbor.

Mr. Fred Wilson gave the following address:

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Denyes,—

It is with pleasure that we have gathered here this evening to celebrate with you your thirty-fifth wedding anniversary.

We think it a very fine gesture on the part of your family who were responsible for this gathering. We are missing some of the very best things in life if we allow these anniversaries and birthdays to pass unnoticed.

We are glad to be living in a land where marriage is sacred, where couples are living happily together as you have for 35 years, and not where a man and woman for some petty little grievance or misunderstanding, can apply to the courts and get separated from each other only to regret it.

We have all known you for a long time, and have always found you ready and willing to give your time and talent when any occasion was being arranged in the neighborhood. You surely are very deserving of any thought or consideration that we may show you at this time.

We ask you to accept these gifts from your family and friends and we hope to be able to come back and share with you your golden, and perhaps your diamond anniversary.

Signed, Mrs. Harry Ketcheson, Mrs. Frank Reid, Fred Wilson.

Mr. and Mrs. Denyes were then presented with a Hudson Bay blanket by Mrs. F. Taylor, on behalf of the immediate family, and with a floor lamp from the neighbors and friends, by Mrs. Ketcheson. Other gifts were a bed lamp from Mrs. A. Little and Irene, and a pair of glass candlesticks from Mr. and Mrs. W. Harder.

Mr. and Mrs. Denyes graciously thanked the guests for their gifts and good wishes.

After the presentations short addresses were given by Mrs. Palmer, Mrs. A. Calnan, Mrs. F. Reid, Mrs. Tims, and Mr. Merritt Finkle.

Mrs. Tucker entertained the group with a reading, and Mrs. W. H. Finkle led in community singing.

A very delightful lunch was served by the family of Mr. and Mrs. Denyes.

Dishes to Please Budget and Palate

By Alice Lynn Barry

Meat is the first thing we think about when planning menus. So today we offer all meat dishes calculated to please both budget and palate.

Prunes add an interesting tang to pot roast, as we discovered when dining with a woman who loves to do kitchen experiments. Soak one-half pound (one cup) dry beans overnight; cook them next morning until tender. Also soak one-half pound prunes overnight. Brown a piece of pot roast on all sides in hot lard in a skillet. Season well and place in covered roaster. Surround the meat with the beans and prunes, add one-third cup molasses, more seasoning, if desired, and enough water to barely cover the beans and prunes. The water in which prunes have been soaked should be used. Cover and bake at 350 degrees F. until meat is tender, 30 minutes to a pound. An hour before meat is done add pared and halved potatoes.

Tasty Dish

For a tasty dish line up four tablespoons lard, one pound ground beef, one cup chopped onions, two teaspoons salt, pepper, one cup chopped celery, two cups stewed tomatoes, three tablespoons honey, two cups cooked rice. Brown beef and onion in the lard in a skillet. Add the seasonings. Mix all the ingredients together in a well-greased skillet and bake about one and one-half hours at 350 degrees F. This is an economical dish since this amount serves 6 to 8.

Meat Pie is delicious and economical too. It is made with one pound inexpensive beef or left-over meat, flour, four tablespoons lard, one small chopped onion, salt, pepper, three medium potatoes, three medium carrots, biscuit dough. Cut meat in small cubes, flour and brown in the hot lard Season well. Add a little water, the chopped onion and cook until tender, 30-45 minutes. Cut the potatoes in cubes and the carrots in crosswise slices and boil in salty water until tender. Make a gravy over the meat by adding more water or milk and thickening with flour stirred up with cold water. Add the vegetables and mix gently. Pour into a casserole oiled with lard, place baking powder biscuits over the tap and bake at 425-450 degrees F. until biscuits are well browned—about fifteen minutes. Serves six.

Bridge St. Y. P. U.

The regular weekly meeting of the Bridge Street Young People's was held last evening in the ladies' parlours with a splendid attendance.

The meeting was opened with a sing song led by Doris Williams after which a short worship service was conducted by Albert Watson. Plans were made to have as many as possible attend the Young People's banquet to be held at Cannifton the following evening.

The meeting then divided into four departments, namely Christian Fellowship, Christian Missions, Christian Culture and Christian Citizenship for the purpose of appointing their conveners and finding out the duties and work which they are responsible for. The conveners elected were: Christian Fellowship, Myrtle Reid; Christian Missions, Doris Williams; Christian Culture, Jack Dickens; Christian Citizenship, Gertrude Lazier.

CONGRESS PARTY CABINET RESIGNS

Sixth of Eight Ministries Leaves Office in Protest of British Policy

Peshawar, India, Nov. 7 (CP) — The Congress Party ministry of the northwest frontier province resigned today.

It was the sixth of eight Congress Party ministries to leave office as part of the party's protest against the British government's India policy. The remaining three provinces of British India are governed by non-Congress ministries.

At Wardha last night Mohandas K. Gandhi demanded election of a constituent assembly to draft a constitution for India. He charged Britain with fostering communal differences to thwart the movement for Indian independence. The Marquess of Linlithgow, the viceroy, has invoked emergency powers to carry on the government of the provinces in which the Congress ministers have resigned.

The communal differences Gandhi referred to in his statement are those between the predominantly Hindu Congress party and the Moslem League and the Hindu minority of untouchables. Both the latter have protested the Congress party's attitude that it alone speaks for India.

The princes—rulers of the Indian States—also resent the Congress party's indifference to their interests.

Yesterday the provincial government of the Punjab, a Moslem ministry, expressed satisfaction at the position of the viceroy that the question of dominion status for India will be fully examined at the conclusion of hostilities. The Congress party demands immediate action.

Air attacks have accomplished little so far in the west although they have been fairly costly to the attackers. All indications so far point to the conclusion that the best defence against air attacks is more aircraft.

A brief report from Switzerland indicated Germany is following the British practice of bombarding with propaganda leaflets. A German bombing plane showered a Swiss village with anti-British pamphlets printed in French, no doubt part of the German campaign to detach France from Great Britain.

The pamphlets were undoubtedly designed for France and dropped in Switzerland by mistake, as it happened in a district where the people speak no French, whether such propaganda is being spread over France on a scale comparable to the British bombardment of German cities with anti-Nazi literature

PRIZES AWARDED FOR HIGHEST STANDING AT ST. MICHAEL'S

Commencement Exercises took place in St. Michael's Auditorium last evening when scholars who won highest honors on promotion examinations were presented with their awards, the gifts of the Catholic Women's League, the Knights of Columbus and B. J. Black and Sons.

A feature of the entertainment was the Girl Guide play "The New Recruit" which told in dramatized form the aims and purposes of Guiding and gave a splendid demonstration of Guide choral work. Those who took part played their roles in a very finished manner and the youthful directors Miss Grace Wilkinson, President of Grade Ten Dramatic Club and her assistant Miss Jean Allore, who prepared the play deserve much credit for the success of the play.

A vocal solo by Miss Carol Kiser was thoroughly enjoyed.

Mrs. A. B. Collins President of the Catholic Women's League and Mr. George Lee, Grand Knight of Belleville Council K. of C. extended sincere congratulations to prize winning scholars.

Farm Hand Injured When Attacked by Hog

When Jack McCabe, thirty-five year-old farm laborer of Thurlow Township was viciously attacked by a boar pig on the Goodfellow farm yesterday, it marked the third major accident to occur in the household of the late Wallace Simmons, fifth concession farmer, this year.

A few weeks ago the Simmons house was totally destroyed by flames. Later Mr. Simmons was instantly killed when a brick chimney collapsed burying him beneath the debris.

McCabe, who has been connected with the Simmons family for the past eleven years, suffered a five-inch gash in the fleshy part of the thigh when the tusks of the animal swung in a vicious arc in his direction. He was taken to the Goodfellow home and given medical attention by Dr. Harold Welsh. At present he is being cared for at the home of Wilfred Clapp, a neighbor.

AS PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT LIFTED ARMS EMBARGO

President Roosevelt is shown in this excellent closeup photo as he signed the so-called "cash and carry" neutrality bill at the White House. The bill permits the sale of American sinews of war to belligerents—provided they pay cash on the barrel head and remove the goods in their own ships. It is the most important act performed by the head of a neutral nation since the outbreak of the war.

AUSTRALIAN TROOPS RALLY TO HELP EMPIRE CAUSE

Recruits by the hundreds are shown arriving at their training camp for their 30-day military training, as Australia, with other members of the empire, throws her weight with the mother country against Nazi Germany. Australia has already mobilized her army, navy and air force and will lend valuable assistance towards the empire's cause.

Awl-Billed Bird Saved by Chance

Pittsburgh, Nov. 7—(AP)— A timid awl-billed bird flew the airlines back to Detroit today, saved by chance from what might have been its doom instead of an intended haven.

A Pennsylvania Central Airlines employee who found the tiny creature shivering in a Detroit filling station yesterday took it to be a humming bird which the Detroit Zoo said certainly should have left for tropical Brazil two months ago.

Twentieth century transportation was decided upon to enable the handful of feathers to catch up with nature. Three big airlines hurriedly arranged to transport the bird to South-America.

Photographers rushed to the airport here to take pictures of the first hummingbird ever to migrate by plane. A nature study class assembled quickly for a glimpse of the prize.

Then after the bird continued toward Washington, development of photographs disclosed the hummingbird wasn't that at all. Naturalists said it was a brown creeper, native of the north, and predicted it would fall victim to a heat stroke in South America.

This news resulted in the migration by plane ending at Washington where the strange passenger in its cardboard box was transferred to a Detroit bound ship.

CITY TRUCKS BUSY REMOVING LEAVES

City trucks are busy removing piles of leaves and other Autumn debris from various streets of the city. "The response of the public has been good to our appeal for co-operation in removing the leaves," City Engineer Mott said. However, free removal will end on the 11th of this month, and removals made subsequent to that date will be charged to the householders."

The Studebaker Champion Coupe for 1940, which has just made its bow in local motor circles. Premium on High Scoring Cheese To Cost Government $500,000

The premium paid on high scoring cheese this year will cost the Federal government roughly between $500,000 and $600,000, according to estimates of the Department of Agriculture.

Production of 94 score cheese up to the end of September, but not including the entire make of that month, was 36,890 boxes as compared with 23,363 boxes of the same grade for the corresponding period a year ago. And 93 point cheese were up from 414,479 boxes to 426,559 boxes to the end of September, both increases indicating the response of the industry to the encouragement held out by the government's bonus.

Marital Happiness Depends on Variety Of Practical Adjustments, Good Sense And Good Character Says Dr. Wood

"Success in marriage requires good sense, good character and a variety of practical adjustments," the Rev. Dr. Leland Foster Wood, New York City, told members of the Ministerial Associations of Hastings, Prince Edward, and Belleville, in an address "The Minister's Relation to Marriage," at Dickens' Coffee Shop yesterday.

Dr. Wood, who was the anniversary preacher at Victoria Avenue Baptist Church last Sunday appealed to the largest representation of district ministers to gather here in years, for a "more careful education for marriage and Christian homemaking as part of the religious training of the individual.

Ignorance Blamed

Many marriages fail through sheer ignorance and thoughtlessness in addition to those which fail through faults of character or personality. He protested against the custom of marrying people casually and against hasty marriages. He gave an encouraging report of the custom which is gradually developing throughout Canada and the United States of premarital counselling in which the minister sits down with the couple for an informal and friendly heart-to-heart talk prior to the marriage ceremony. Through this procedure both the minister and the young couple can enter more fully into the sacred meaning of marriage.

Although success in marriage requires good sense, good character, and a variety of practical adjustments, marriage is in its essence a spiritual matter which is grounded in love and in God. And the minister, as a spiritual shepherd, should keep close to his young people and also to the older homemakers in his parish in order that they may feel free to approach their pastor with their personal problems as they would go to their physician with problems of health. This involves careful study also of the most helpful literature in this field.

Educational Preparation Needed

Through more careful educational preparation and through more adequate attention to the spiritual foundations of the home, many tragedies of disappointment and bitterness can be prevented, the speaker concluded.

The Rev. G. G. Wright, rector of Christ Church and president of the Belleville Ministerial Association presided at the meeting. The speaker was fittingly introduced by the Rev. Claude Troupe Olmstead of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church, while the appreciation of the combined associations was expressed by the Rev. Dr. James Semple, minister of Bridge Street United Church.

Catch-basins in all parts of the city are receiving their annual fall cleaning in preparation for winter snows and spring freshets.

FEW APPLICATIONS FOR FARM LABOR

There is a noticeable lack of applications for farm labor at the Employment Office, Superintendent William Ross stated today. Odd jobs, however, are fairly plentiful, while lumbermen of the north have filed applications for a number of experienced woodcutters.

FEWER WILD DUCKS PLACED IN STORAGE

There is a considerable decrease in the number of wild ducks placed in the Graham Cold Storage Plant for keeping this year, an official said today. "Perhaps the boys are eating the ducks as rapidly as they shoot them, or maybe it is the lack of game. However, the number stored is well below that of last year."

YANKEE FIELDER BAGS HIS DEER

Jake Powell Brings Down 275-Pound Buck Near Thompson Lake

Marmora, November 7 — Jake Powell, left-fielder of the New York Yankees used to the old phrase "three times and out" had the experience of three times and down on his initial deer hunt in the Thompson Lake district on Monday. With three shots he brought down a 275 pound buck early in the day while "Bill Pearse", his Cleveland host on whose property "Jake" got his thrill came second best in bagging one of lesser weight. The return to Ohio was made early on Tuesday morning with "Bill" very proud of having his two fenders loaded" as he termed it. Jake was more in the mood of talking hunting than baseball, but he graciously answered a few questions on the summer sport. He has enjoyed his seasons with the Yankees with whom he has been associated since 1936. Prior to this, he was with the Washington Senators and Albany. He is signed up for next year with the world's champions. Asked who would probably head the batting averages for the Yankees next season with Lou Gehrig in retirement he remarked "Well, Babe Dalghren is on first base next year." "I certainly hope to return to Marmora again", was his farewell remark. "I have received the very best of treatment."

FALL GRAINS REPORTED IN GOOD CONDITION

With weather conditions up to the present being ideal, fall grains of the rural districts are showing promise of being excellent crops, if one can judge this early, a Department of Agriculture representative stated this morning.

"There is a good leafage, and stalks seem to be growing sturdily" he said. "If sudden heavy frosts do not occur before a fall of snow, there is every indication of good crops next year", he said.

COMMUNISTS SEE

Call For Peace Is Call For Revolt.

The seeming paradox of a call for peace meaning a call for revolt ceases to be a contradiction, however, when the comintern operations are studied. Here is the story as we know it:

When the Soviets were born out of the Bolshevist revolution in Russia, they immediately created the International, or Comintern, as the "general staff of the world revolution".

It was hoped that a general revolt of the masses in all countries could be brought about as the result of the bad conditions resulting from the last war.

The Bolshevists strained every nerve to swing the world with them. They even sold imperial crown-jewels and other priceless relics and used for work abroad money which they desperately needed at home.

Scheme As Whole Fails.

Some reolutions indeed were set going, but the scheme as a whole failed. However, the Comintern kept its fires burning.

When Stalin came to power in 1924 he decided on a radical change in policy. His program was to make Soviet Russia a mighty power first, and let the world revolution wait until a favorable opportunity arose. This he proceeded to put into effect.

Then along in 1935 began the period of crisis in Europe and the Far East. Stalin foresaw a period of strife approaching, and the Comintern executives decided this would give them the opportunity they needed.

It was decided to drop the slogan of "world revolution" and substitute that of "peace".

The idea was to pit the forces of peace and war in the various disturbed countries against each other in an effort to cause civil strife.

Drive Comes Unexpectedly.

Out of this amazing situation would come the equivalent of the world revolution, and Communism would be extended to the four corners of the earth.

The above historical background accords with the appeal to the British and French workers. This is, of course, in its essence an appeal for revolt.

Europe at war is the field for which the Communists have been waiting. They believe it will provide fertile soil for the seed of Communism.

The smart manner in which Stalin annexed eastern Poland and Sovietized it, and then took over control of the Baltic States, was a fair indication of the trend of affairs. Observers generally concluded that the time for another big Communistic drive in Europe was approaching.

There was no indication, however, that this would come so soon. Apparently the trend of affairs has been suc hthat the Comintern felt it wise to move immediately. The 22nd anniversary of the Bolshevist revolution has given the opportunity for the attack on capitalism and the manifesto.

Restrictions Eased In Darkened London

London, Nov. 7—(CP Cable) — The easing of some restrictions and news of improving business lightened the burden of Londoners groping homewards through the gloom tonight.

1. The curfew has been lifted for the whole County of London except the city (financial area) so shops close one hour later than the previous hour of 6 p.m.

2. Full lighting was restored in many trains between London and Scotland.

3. The Southern Railway introduced better lighting in its main London terminal—Victoria Station appears almost normal now.

4. Revised schedules on 10 central London bus routes brought almost pre-war service again.

5. Big stores reported many more shoppers. This week is said to be the best since the war began. Oscar Deutsch, Chairman of the Odeon movie circuit, said business is back to normal with peacetime weekly records broken in some theatres.

Cleveland Indians After Hurler That Can Win Fifteen Games

Owners Not Satisfied With Third Place Club For Next Season

FELLER NOT FOR SALE

Cleveland, Nov. 7—(AP)— The Cleveland Indians' David Harums are going to next month's baseball meetings disguised as introverts.

"We'll have our eyes and ears open" said bespectacled Vice President C. C. Slapnicka today, "but we'll let the other clubs come to us."

Last winter the tribal bigwigs went as extroverts. Amid much ballyhoo they put half the club on the block, departed with high hopes and came back empty-handed.

The Indians aren't satisfied with a third-place ball club—even in the Yankees' American League—but the unexpected development of infield rookies late last summer showed the seeds of their new independence.

Since the prime days of shortstop Joe Sewell and second baseman Bill Wambsganss, a long string of tribal managers has tried countless players at the two positions.

Now Lou Boudreau, up from Buffalo; Ray Mack, a home town boy, and Oscar Grimes, the infield jack-of-all-trades, have the fans talking.

Boudreau, once a star at Illinois, looked like the find of the year in the short field, Grimes, the team's most aggressive player, and Mack, perhaps a little green yet, sparkled at second. For insurance the club has purchased Russ Peters, crack shortstop of the Atlanta Southern Association club.

"We could use another pitcher who would win 15 games," said Slapnicka, the "discoverer" of 24-game winner Bob Feller, "but then, who couldn't? We aren't going to trade any of the hurlers whose work in the closing weeks put us in third place."

(This presumably means Feller, Mel Harder, Al Milnar and Harry Eisenstat.)

Manager Oscar Vitt said recently, however, that any pitcher except Feller might be swapped in a 'right' deal.

LATIN FOR LOUIS

New York, Nov. 7 (CP)—Joe Louis' next challenger for the world-heavyweight boxing title may be a Latin—Arturo Godoy of Chile—who retired several years ago with $8,000, enough to live on in comfort in his home village.

All that is left of the six Maroons that joined Canadiens at the beginning of the 1938-39 hockey season, is Cy Wentworth above) who has announced his retirement a few dozen times, but who is being counted on for some sound defensive work for the Dugal-Lepine team this winter. A rosy picture was painted when Canadiens took over the cream of the Maroon crop when the red team went under, but it didn't pan out, and now Cy, after only one short season, is all that's left.

TENNESSEE VOLS VOTED BEST TEAM

For Third Straight Week Experts Vote Tennessee Into Top Position

New York, Nov. 7 — (AP)—Although Tenessee is again rated the best football team in the country, the outstanding game on this week's schedule is Texas A. and M. against Southern Methodist.

That much probably could be figured out by any fan without the assistance of the weekly Associated Press National football ranking poll, but the tabulated votes of the experts prove it.

Tennessee, for the third straight week, is ranked far ahead of all rivals. The Vols, riding high on last Saturday's 20-0 triumph over Louisiana State, polled the first-place votes of 88 of the 118 participants and a total of 1,114 points this week. But next Saturday they go into hibernation again, meeting the Citadel of Charleston, S.C., last-place team of the Southern conference.

Meanwhile Texas Aggies, placed first by six of the experts and ranked third for the week with a total of 854 points, encounter the Southern Methodist Mustangs in what may be the deciding game of the southwest conference race. Some football followers in their home territory rate the Mustangs even better than the Aggies and practically all agree they're the main barrier between Texas A. and M. and a perfect season. S. M. U. landed in the 14th place in this week's ranking with 69 points.

That game is the only one between teams which were placed in the first 20, but Notre Dame, the second-place club, runs up against Iowa, which earned a single tenth-place vote and Tulane, eighth on the list, meets Alabama, which drew eight points. Even that is enough to indicate they should provide plenty of opposition for the big fellows.

Notre Dame just did beat out Texas A. and M. for second place, moving up two notches from fourth while the Aggies jumped from sixth to third. Michigan, second a week ago, skidded back to ninth place as a result of their defeat by Illinois.

4-CARD BOUT IS SCHEDULED

First Time Four Bouts Have Been Given On One Night

With four bouts scheduled, the weekly wrestling show at the Hume Arena will be held on Thursday night of this week, with two preliminary and two main bouts scheduled. It will mark the first time four bouts have ever been presented on a single wrestling card in Belleville.

The feature bout of course will be the return match between Joe Maich, the former Canadian amateur heavyweight champion, and Dave Khoen, the Detroit Jewish lad who beat Rudy Epps last week. Maich and Khoen wrestled for a full hour in their first meeting two weeks ago without a fall to a draw fight. Ardent wrestling fans of the community agreed the Maich-Khoen match of a fortnight ago was productive of the best exhibition of modern wrestling ever seen in Belleville. It was by popular request that these two top-notch ringmen were re-engaged to fight it out on Thursday night.

The second main bout brings the "Mask", a behooded wrestler, in against Chief Little Bear, the full-blooded Indian wrestler from the wilds of Quebec. The "Mask" has never been defeated locally and he hopes to increase his string of victories in a Belleville ring, but Chief Little Bear has other plans.

To add local color, Roy Doherty, the Shannonville strong man, meets Jim Kruher, 200, of Vancouver, while still another bout brings Wild Bill Tracey, formerly of Texas and now of Belleville, in the same ring with Lorne Lottridge of Vancouver to round out a four-bout card.

FRANK TYNDALL MAKES GOOD AS QUEEN'S COACH

Brings Tricolor From Doldrums to Force Position For a Playoff

COACH WELL LIKED

Squad All Set to Give Western Toughest Game of The Season

By JACK CALDER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Nov. 7—(CP)—Speaking of football coaching, how about the job Frank Tyndall has done at Queen's University in his first season as traffic director of the tricolor?

From material that hardly was expected to improve much on last year's record of no victories, Tyndall has brought Queen's into position to force a playoff with the mighty Mustangs of the University of Western Ontario for the intercollegiate championship. The Presbyterians undertake to tame the wild horses in the last game of the schedule at Kingston this Saturday.

Few will say that Queen's can stop the only undefeated and untied team in the east, yet up to now Tyndall has put his men over tall barriers. In the first game of the schedule Queen's scored two quick touchdowns against Western before the Mustangs gathered momentum and went on to victory.

Left-Over Material

Much of Tyndall's material was left over by Ted Reeve and he has been aided by a big staff of assistant coaches, consisting of Joe Breen, Dr. Harry Batstone, Pep Leadley and Tuffy Griffiths.

But to the head coach has remained the task of building a system and a spirit to carry Queen's from the doldrums of 1938. Tyndall, who came to Canadian football with Toronto Argonauts from the University of Syracuse, has scored heavily.

After that initial defeat by Western and a 4-2 loss at home to McGill, Queen's gained its first triumph since 1937 when the University of Toronto went to Kingston. This was the Toronto team that was supposed to give Western a closer run than anyone and glee ran higher at Queen's than since the heyday of the great Reeve machines.

This wasn't a one-punch team, however, Queen's walked into Toronto and whipped the Blues again, then beat McGill in Montreal to make sure of landing nothing worse than second position. Because the second-place team must have beaten the league leader once to necessitate a playoff, Queen's must now take Western and no one can convince Tyndall that it can't be done.

Big Determined Squad

The quiet-voiced coach has his big, determined squad gathering speed. Into players who thought they would end their college football careers in gloom he has put new life.

Jack Brown has become an inspired kicker. Art Walker, 18-year-old Toronto boy, proved the wind of the season when he got a chance to add his kicking and passing to great running. Ding McGill started shooting placements for important field goals and Captain Doug Annan got more oomph into his plunging.

Jerry Conlin, out to make his last year a big one, has disregarded a bad knee to fire a hard-charging line that—from squat little Nick Pathouski in the centre to the hard-tackling outsides—is set to give Western its sternest test of the campaign.

WON'T SEE FINISH

London, Nov. 7 (CP) — Britain's sporting motorcyclists won't see a 1939 championship decided. The Speedway Board has announced there will be several more meets this year, but no final.

Toughest blow to Toronto Argonauts (who seem to be bearing up fairly well) this year was the loss of Art West (above) in a pre-season exhibition game. One of the best running backs in the Dominion West injured a cartilage in a knee and has been out of the game since, but Coach Lew Hayman is optimistic over his chances of getting into enough games to qualify for the playoffs, by which time, 'tis hopes, he'll be back at his "ghosting" best.

Presenting Al Davis, young New York boxer who recently ended the boxing career of Tony Canzoneri, once a champion in more than one class, when he knocked him out in the third round of their fight in New York. Tony had been making a comeback for a year, but the loss meant permanent retirement—or so he said at the time. Davis has been a N.Y. neighborhood favorite for some time and is expected to go quite a distance in the welterweight ranks.

SCULLERS GREAT MONEY TEAM IN PLAYOFF SERIES

Roughriders of Ottawa Likely to Win Big Four Title This Year

POWERFUL, FAST

Argos, However, Seem to Rise to Great Heights in The Pinches

By The Canadian Press

Let the football boys gather to discuss the team they think will represent the east in the Dominion football final this year and almost without exception the talk will centre on Ottawa Rough Riders and Toronto Argonauts.

It seems a bit strange, taking a look at the records, that the experts should consider it almost a toss-up between the two clubs. But that they do is a tribute to the knowledge that Coach Lew Hayman's Scullers are considered one of the best, if not the best, money teams in the country.

The Riders haven't had occasion yet to rise to inspirational heights, as have the Argonauts, the Ottawans, in five games this season, have rolled up the tremendous total of 120 points for an average of 24 points a game. The Scullers have less than half that total—or 52—to show in the same number of contests. Both teams have had 37 points scored against them.

Ottawa Impressive

Of the 12 major teams in the section, only one other besides the Riders has managed to soar over the 100 point total. University of Western Ontario Mustangs have bettered the mark by three points but it is a well known fact that the opposition in the big four is a lot tougher than in the college union. This makes the Ottawa total look the more impressive.

There isn't a team in the Ontario Union that comes close to the Rough Riders mark. Toronto Balmy Beach and Montreal Westmounts are tied for first place, and the Beaches have scored 55 points to 51 for the Westies. Sarnia Imperials, a point behind these two clubs in the standing, have marked up 63 points.

But that magnificent point score will mean little when the Argonauts and the Riders get down to the business of big four playoffs in a few weeks. The Argos have a habit of coming through in the clutches, which is one of the reasons they have held the Canadian title for the past two years, and the big reason why a good many people still like their chances again this season.

HIT SPEEDY 100

Maidstone, Eng., Nov. 7 (CP)—For the second time in his career, Leslie Ames has been awarded the Sir Walter Lawrence trophy for the fastest cricket century. He made 100 runs in 67 minutes for Kent in July.

IRON WILL POWER

Colorado Springs, Colo., Nov. 7 (CP)—Bully Van de Graaf, Colorado football coach, smokes as many as three or four packages of cigarettes daily during the summer. When the grid season opens, he quits overnight.

Conclusion of the regular schedule of the Western Canada Football conference found this pair leading the scoring parade: Paul Rowe (left), of Calgary Bronks, with 61 points ;and Fritz Hanson, Winnipeg Bombers (right), in second place with 41. Rowe, who was imported by the Bronks last year ,is rated one of the best all-round backs in the game and amassed his total with nine touchdowns, one field goal and 13 converts. Hanson, now a veteran of the Canadian grid wars, had an expericene similar to last year, when he led the conference. In both seasons he missed the early season games, but came on with a rush in the later ones, recording 36 of his points, seven touchdowns, and a single, in the last three games this fall.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with
Ken J. Colling

In various centres throughout Ontario and yea the whole Dominion of Canada, midget N.H.L. set-ups are meeting with continued success. These midget teams are equipped with sweaters resembling either the Maple Leafs, Bruins, Rangers, Canadiens, etc., and given the advantage of adequate coaching. The idea was originated in Georgetown, Ont., and has spread like wildfire, Western Canada and Northern Ontario employing this minor league puck sponsorship in order to replenish the ranks of their junior clubs each succeeding year. Actually the time to launch such a league is prior to the operation of senior clubs in January or before the O.H.A. swings into action. We observe where they have already opened an eight-teamed midget N.H.L. league in Sudbury already, where of course they are blessed with the advantages of artificial ice.

* * *

Although not to function exactly along the lines of a midget N.H.L. loop, an attempt to organize a city juvenile hockey league will be made tonight at the Y.M.C.A. commencing at 8.00 p.m. and to which the hockey-loving public of this city is not only invited, but urged to attend. Two years ago a juvenile team was sponsored in Belleville and its success is now being enjoyed by our good city junior club. "Toots" Holway, the coach of the junior squad, points out that if a good team can be the result of sponsoring one juvenile club, what possibilities hockey has in store if a complete juvenile league is organized is beyond the fondest hopes. It is hoped there will be enough hockey-spirited fans tonight at the "Y" to assure the organization of a four-teamed juvenile hockey league in Belleville to commence operations as soon as the Hume Arena opens its doors. Tonight's gathering is an open affair and free to any who will come forward with ideas or suggestions towards tre advancement of hockey in Belleville. Incidentally . . . "bring a friend".

* * *

Do you remember when Jack Shill, Chicago Black Hawk left-winger, was relegated to invalid's status for three months one year ago today following a spinal injury in a game against Toronto Maple Leafs. An X-ray examination disclosing the extent of the injury, doctors ordered Shill to hospital for a month.

* * *

Without making mention of the two preliminary bouts, one of which sees Roy Doherty attempt a comeback in a local ring, the two main bouts scheduled for Thursday night at the Hume Arena alone should prove of sufficient interest to attract largest wrestling patronage in the history of the 'grunt and groan' business in this city...The first main attraction sees "The Mask", who has never been defeated in Belleville, meeting Chief Lone Bear, the Oklahoma Indian, whose single appearance in Belleville proved the 'redskin' was a top-notch grappler. On top of this bout Dave Khoen, conqueror of Rudy Epps and Joe Maich meet in a fight to the finish. Incidentally Maich and Khoen wrestled for the full hour two weeks ago without registering a single fall and in a bout that patrons agreed was productive of some of the best orthodox wrestling seen locally in years. They'll resume their ring feud Thursday.

* * *

With the appointment of "Pit" Lepine to coach the Montreal Canadiens under General Manager Jules Dugal, every team in the National Hockey League is now either managed or coached by a former star player. Art Ross, in his day one of the most brilliant performers in hockey, leads the Boston Bruins. Lester Patrick, a rival contemporary of Ross, handles New York Rangers. "Red" Dutton, great war hero, and a colorful figure in professional hockey, west and east, looks after New York Americans. Dick Irwin, another great war hero, and later a hockey player of note, coaches the Leafs. Jack Adams, who starred in eastern hockey, then went west, is the Detroit mentor. Paul Thompson, even yet a notable forward, is in charge of Chicago Black Hawks.

* * *

Apparently there isn't too much to worry about regarding sports at the R.C.A.F. for some time at least. Last Saturday the Flyers beat the R.M.C. Cadets 2-0 in an exhibition rugby football game and the "airmen" hadn't played a single game this season, while the "cadets" have been in training since last September. No doubt the hockey strength of the Air Force can be relied upon to hold its own in a similar manner.

* * *

Hans Vopel and Gus Killian, two German six-day bike riders, who are widely known because of their having ridden in many American events have returned to Germany and received war assignments with their regiments. They are classed among the best bikers in the world.

* * *

SPORT SPICE—It is rumored that Bill Calladine is back in his native Peterboro' after a short workout with Baltimore Orioles. . . . Calladine's name only appeared once under the Hines-coached squad's lineup this season, which may mean "Peterboro' Willie" may play for the Petes, or will'e? . . . Three N.H.L. clubs—Toronto, Rangers and Boston are all working out at the Maple Leaf Gardens this week. . . . The centre of footfall attraction is the Western at Queen's game next Saturday and the ballyhoo drums are being heard early and often, which should give Brother Bill Walshe's hopefuls a bumper patronage, if nothing else. . . . Eddie Schrieder, coach of the B.C.I. senior gridders, will get a peek at the Trent Valley senior interscholastic when when he referees the Madoc-Tweed play-off today. . . . O.S.D. and B.C.I. six-man grid squads are playing an exhibition game mid-week preparatory to the important Trenton C.I. at O.S.D. on Friday.

LOSES, BUT STARS

Playing his second season of senior rugby, Don Crowe, above, has turned in consistently good performances with Peterborough's downtrodden Orfuns in the O.R.F.U., and is rated one of the better backfielders in the loop. He runs, passes and looks after the kicking.

Speaking of Laterals—

By Central Press Canadian

Toronto, Nov. 7—"South of the Border" Says Dick Harlow, Harvard coach: "I agree with Rockne that the lateral is an impractical weapon from scrimmage .... the open field lateral has great possibilities when judiciously used ..... it's risky, but worth a gamble."....Rockne revered former Notre Dame coach, dismissed the lateral with: "Touchdowns aren't made across the sidelines."....laterals are invariably considered a part of the English rugger game by our American cousins.. nobody ever thinks of viewing their use in the Canadian game, which, despite its many differences from the game as played in the States, is much closer for comparisons than rugger .... the Pacific Coast Hockey league will operate this winter with three entries, Vancouver, Portland and Seattle.... Fritz Hanson, Winnipeg's "galloping ghost," has scored three touchdowns after receiving kicks or kickoffs ..... Harvey Jackson, once the "Busher" on Maple Leafs' "kid line" and now one of Red Dutton's Americans, breeds springer spaniels....remember Lee Ramage, one of the multitude to feel the sleep-producing effects of Joe Louis' fists?....he's a freshman at a California university .... only three of the five Bentley brothers who achieved a measure of fame with Drumhelder Miners in the Alberta senior league last winter are back .... Doug and Max, the high scorers, shifted to Saskatoon ..... and the gals will soon designate a winner of their rose bowl for the dominion's outstanding feminine athlete .... Winnipeg's champion figure skater, Mary Rose Thacker will be a strong candidate....alas, for mythical eastern pride, another possible sport crown for the west .... Don Meade hos been incurring displeasure on New York tracks with his rough riding tactics....and here's a move on foot to have umpires numbered at all ball games... so the fans can see who they're throwing at, no doubt.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Barefoot Boy"

Jackie Moran star of Monogram's "Barefoot Boy," now at the Capitol Theatre, was the envy of the Hollywood younger set recently, for he not only went dancing one night with Deanna Durbin, but Deanna paid for the date!

Jackie, you may remember, was the hint of love interest in Deanna's last picture "Mad About Music." The two kids became such great friends that the young singing star often visited Jackie on the set of "Barefoot Boy."

One day, between scenes, Deanna and Jackie got into an argument on location about whether or not Jackie could really catch fish with his willow, home-made fishing pole. The loser was to take the other dancing at the Cocoanut Grove. And when Jackie had caught five fish, Deanna conceded the bet as won, and prepared to pay for the bills for the evening of fun.

Jackie got his first Tuxedo for the occasion and nearly drove everyone mad helping him get ready for the event It took him a full hour to tie his tie, for he wouldn't let his mother do it.

Finally the two kids started out, and Jackie says Deanna certainly was a good sport, for she not only bought his dinner, but two lemonades as well.

"Barefoot Boy" is the story of a country youth and his gang, and tells how they solve the ghostly mystery of an old haunted house.

Outstanding in the cast are Marcia Mae Jones, Marilyn Knowlden, Ralph Morgan, Claire Windsor, and J. Farrell MacDonald.

Karl Brown wrote the screenplay from the original story by John T. Neville.

On the same programme, "The Witness Vanishes," a crime club story, featuring Edmund Lowe and Wendy Barrie.

AT THE McCARTHY

"FULL CONFESSION"

Attaining unusual heights in characterization and in strength of emotional appeal, RKO Radio's production "Full Confession", now playing at the McCarthy Theatre, ranks as one of the most powerful dramatic vehicles ever offered Victor McLaglen. Other important character parts are deftly handled by Joseph Calleia, Sally Eilers and Barry Fitzgerald.

The powerful story chronicles the efforts of Joseph Calleia, as a kindly priest, to persuade McLaglen, a paroled convict, to confess the murder of a watchman, in order to save an innocent man from the chair. But McLaglen knows the priest cannot expose him because of the seal of the confessional and refuses. How the priest eventually succeeds in his mission, by arousing the inherent decency in the man brings to the screen drama that reaches a new high in great acting. "Full Confession" is a superb motion picture — that takes its place on the list of films you cannot afford to miss. As a companion feature "The Jones Family In Hollywood" is a riot of laughs, the funniest of all their big comedy hits and the Walt Disney cartoon presentation, Donald Duck in "The Fox Hunt", is one of the cleverest and most amusing of all these popular technicolor subjects. The McCarthy Theatre is now presenting a real combination of outstanding entertainment and you are heeding a good impulse by making your plans now to see it.

AT THE BELLE

"The Women"

With the most brilliant feminine cast ever assembled in Hollywood, "The Women", based upon Clare Boothe's stage success and starring Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford and Rosalind Russell, is now playing an engagement at the Belle Theatre.

A cast of 135 actresses, drafted from the stage as well as the screen, appear in the distinguished new comedy-drama which follows the lives of women through beauty salons, gown shops, boudoir and bath, as well as the drama of their everyday lives.

Norma Shearer is cast in her first modern society role since "Riptide", and Joan Crawford gets her initial opportunity to portray a "heavy". Rosalind Russell is given a chance to show her many-sided versatility as the screen's arch-gossip to date.

The supporting cast includes such names as Mary Boland, Paulette Goddard, Phyllis Povah, Joan Fontaine, Virginia Weidler, Lucile Watson, Florence Nash, Muriel Hutchinson, Esther Dale, Ann Morriss, Ruth Hussey, Dennie Moore, Mary Cecil, Mary Beth Hughes, Virginia Grey, Marjorie Main, Cora Witherspoon and Hedda Hopper.

Nothing was spared to bring to the screen women in their natural habitats. The largest set of its type ever built in Hollywood comprises a modern beauty salon, and every type of treatment known to such establishment is covered.

The story shows Norma Shearer as Mary Haines, who chooses a divorce rather than countenance her husband's temporary infidelity when he becomes enamored of a perfume salesgirl, played by Joan Crawford. The constant gossiping of Rosalind Russell forces issues throughout the drama which finally comes to a happy conclusion when Miss Shearer decides to fight back and reclaim her husband.

The settings, which reflect the luxury of modern life, range from scenes of New York, and its smart suburbs, to Bermuda and a dude ranch at Reno, Nevada.

The Belle News of the Day, and "Culinary Carving", a Pete Smith specialty will be presented on the same program.

Army Abolishes Death Penalty For Desertion

London, Nov. 7 (CP) — Ronald Cross, Minister of Economic Warfare, told the House of Commons today that Britain had seized 420,500 tons of merchandise as contraband in the first two months of the war.

Figures on the amount of merchandise detained for inquiry were not available, he said.

Mr. Cross added the government hoped to open trade negotiations with Spain in the near future.

War Secretary Hore-Belisha, answering numerous questions relating to the well-being of the troops, said "the British army is treated better than any army in the world".

Asked if Scottish recruits had to send home for additional food and overcoats, Mr. Hore-Belisha replied: "I have reason to believe this is one of the rumors deliberately circulated in a vain endeavor to shake public confidence."

Other reports of troops complaints he added, had proved unfounded.

Mr. Hore-Belisha told another questioner the death penalty for desertion, cowardice and sleeping on duty had been abolished and remained as maximum punishment only for murder, mutiny and treachery.

According to Hoyle

By THAYER WALDO

When the kiss ended, Carl glanced across the room and saw Leon. He stood in the archway, immobile, a sober look on his dark face. Carl tightened his arm about the girl's shoulders and then, as Leon came forward with deliberate steps she heard the sound and also turned.

Leon stopped again by the divan's end and continued for a moment to gaze silently at them.

His expression now was of almost gentle amusement; yet in its depths lurked sardonicism, too.

"You know," he said at last, "it's really a most idyllic picture. The personification of young love, and so on."

The girl withdrew from Carl's embrace and leaned back, smiling a little.

Leon lit a cigarette and went on "I can see you look on me as an intruder. Well, no matter—I'm not offended."

Carl frowned slightly.

"Your flippancy," he objected, "strikes me as being in rather bad taste, old man."

With a cat-quick movement Leon stepped forward, his eyes suddenly glittering.

"Would you prefer melodrama, my friend?"

The tone was low, rasping.

In a flash, however, poise had returned and he added:

"Come—I'll be serious then. Why, sir, do I find you making love to my fiancee?"

Carl stood up, his manner solemn.

"Because," he began, "I—"

"Because, Leon," the girl cut in, "your fiancee was willing."

Both men turned to her and Leon made the briefest of bows.

"Of course, my dear; that much is understood. You are always willing."

Carl confronted him, bristling.

"Look here—I resent that," he flared. "It's a rotten thing to say about Marta, and none too complimentary to me."

"My apologies; but you mistake me. I spoke of a quality, not habits. Marta, I repeat, is always ready for lovemaking; it's one of a black-haired woman's intriguing foibles. However, she's lately confined her indulgence to me—until now, that is. And so, quite naturally, I look to you for an explanation of this."

Under the man's searching gaze, Carl turned away and strolled back of the divan, stopping just behind Marta. The girl saw quietly, her eyes never leaving Leon's face.

"There's really nothing to explain, Valdes," Carl said. "Marta and I just all of a sudden discovered it was there, for both of us, and so—well, I planned to come to you and—and—"

"And what?"

Again Leon had moved with an agile, unexpected step, and now stood just across the davenport from Carl, his leg touching the girl's knee.

"Why, tell you we loved each other—that you'd have to give her up."

For a long moment Leon's gray-green eyes, a little narrowed, looked into those of the man facing him. Then they swept downward to meet Marta's, and almost at once a troubled tenseness came over the girl. In a voice hopelessly unsteady she told him:

"Yes; Leon; it's true—. I was going to speak to you myself, first."

Then Leon began to laugh.

A chuckle it was at first—a chuckle that sounded, lazily, deep in his throat. But it swelled, became a torrent, filled and swept and rocked the room. In its wild abandon it was something fascinating and something more than a little mad. Hearing it, Carl twitched and moistened his lips. Marta sprang from the divan as it reached crescendo, and ran across to the window. There she had stood for an instant, back to the others, when suddenly the laugh ceased. Leon was staring once more at Carl.

"You imbecile!" he almost hissed; "you blind, stupid imbecile! Do you think she'd be yours alone if you took her? Don't you know I'm the only sort of man who can hold such a woman, and even I only by tyranny? What can you offer her—you, with your solid, consistent virtues? Listen to me, Drake; forget you found her lips and arms willing, and remember only that she's mine—mine whenever I choose to claim her!"

Carl, conquering rage, had won to a determined calm and now he regarded Leon scornfully.

"You're making an ass of yourself, Valdes," he stated; "a double-dyed, unpleasant ass. I'd really hoped you'd take this thing in a civilized way."

Marta whirled around and came forward, saying:

"And I suppose what I may think or want doesn't matter!"

Carl looked at her in shaken surprise.

"But—but I thought I was speaking for both of us, dear."

Her face softened, though she didn't go to him. Hands on hips, almost rakishly, she stood between the two men, surveying them with cool alternation.

"Perhaps you were, Carl," she said at last, "but it all sounds like an argument over a prize, or something."

Leon went swiftly close to the girl.

"And isn't that it, my love? Aren't you just the spoils that belong to the victor?"

The voice was drawling, a taunt.

Marta stepped back from him, flashing instant defiance.

"No, you fool—I'll never belong to anyone!"

A satyr-like smile spread over Leon's face.

Then his arm shot out and the open hand struck viciously across her cheek.

With a brief moan she sank to the floor and Leon turned to Carl, crying:

it must be done and you could not it msut be done and you could not do it! You—"

The words died as Carl lunged suddenly forward and grappled the other in silent fury.

A fierce moment of struggle and Leon went down, the heavier man's fingers tight about his throat.

Carl fell with him, pinioned the thrashing arms, and drove his thumbs deeper into Valdes' flesh.

"When — you're — dead," he breathed gutturally, "she'll — be —happy!"

At the fight's beginning Marta had drawn herself up and backed against a table, ten feet away.

There, wide - eyed, emotionless, she watched their battle.

But after the fall, horror and great fear slowly appeared on the girl's face, and as Leon's writhings grew feebler she started toward the pair. In her clenched hand was something thin and gleaming and pointed.

Valdes gave one last heave and fell back, a harsh gasp breaking from his throat. And then the man crouched over him and cried out terribly and took away his hands. From one side of his disarranged vest protruded the ornamental handle of a paper knife.

"Cut!" The director's voice rang sharp in the stillness, and a sudden buzz of laughing voices followed. The man called Leon scrambled at once to his feet, while he of the mortal wound withdrew an unstained weapon and remarked genially:

"A wonder it didn't get bent on that steel undervest. Believe you me, that girl has a thrust!"

She smiled at him with mock archness.

"That's what you get for trying to steal the scene!"

The director had come onto the set, one arm about the shoulders of a pleasant-looking young man in horn-rimmed glasses.

"Kids, it was grand!" he boomed; "but here's the big hero. What a script he gave you! How about it, everybody — an orchid to Jed Hoyle!"

Little Benny's Note Book

I was taking a walk with pop for his health and he felt in his vest pocket saying, Yee gods not a cigar and not a cigar store. Surely there's an oasis somewhere in this desert, he said.

Meaning a cigar store, and I said, Why dont you ask somebody, pop? and he said, I will, I'll ask this native.

Meaning a man with a big black mustash and no necktie, pop saying, Can you tell me if there's such a thing as a cigar store in this vicinity? and the man just standing still and looking ignorant, and I said, G, pop, he cant even speak English.

Well, no doubt I cant speak his language, and 2 dead languages dont make a cigar store, pop said. I'll try the oldest and the most reliable language of all, the sign language, he said.

And he pretended to take a insivible cigar out of his pocket and light it with a invisible match, and the man took a real cigar out of his own pocket and held up one finger and shook his head no, meaning it was the only one he had so pop couldn't have it, and pop said, O well, any rope in a storm.

And he took a quarter out of his pocket and made more signs and the man shook his head yes and gave pop the cigar and took the quarter, and we kept on going and pop litt the cigar and took some short puffs, saying, Yee gods, any rope but this one.

And he threw it as far as he could throw and it landed across the street pointing right at a little sigar store, and I gave pop a poke and started to make pointing signs as if I couldn't speak anything but the sign language, and pop quick crossed over and bought enough Queen Billies to fill 2 pockets, and then he made signs at me asking if I wanted a ice cream cone as a reward, and I understood perfect and made signs back sure I did.

The undertone was still firm on the egg market. Light offerings met good demand, except for grade A-medium. Mediums were inclined to move slowly. Prices were about unchanged from Saturday.

PLANE

In Earth Over A Foot

Before the bodies of the men could be removed from the plane, the cockpit was laid open by axe and hacksaw. The propeller could not be seen and several cylinders of the motor were uncovered eight inches beneath the ground surface. Other parts of the engine were believed buried four feet.

It is believed that the plane landed almost squarely on its nose. People flocked from all parts of the district to view the twisted wreckage. About 50 carloads of men came from Levack Mine where the victims were employed.

Provincial Police supervised removal of the bodies from the plane in the presence of Dr. P. E. LaFlamme, Chief Coroner for Sudbury district.

It was necessary to apply the axe seven times to the fuselage in removing the body of Church. The entire centre section of the plane had to be cut away to reach Armstrong's body as it lay crushed, face-down below the twisted dashboard.

Bodies Badly Smashed

As the bodies were removed, Chief Coroner LaFlamme asked miners present for identification. Armstrong was the least mutilated about the head and was easily identified. All three were badly smashed about the legs.

Ernest Obowsowin, a farmer living on the Larchwood Road, is believed to have been the closest eye-witness of the tragedy. He watched the plane do a loop almost over his house and then level out to the south for half a mile and start to climb into a second loop.

"It climbed up almost perpendicular and then seemed to falter and slip sideways," said Obomsowin. "Then it started to spin round and round and I knew something was wrong. When it was about 200 feet from the ground the engine started to roar as if the pilot was giving it all the gas he could. Then there was a loud crash."

When Obomsowin reached the wreckage he found four men there already. They were Wilfred and Royal Vaillancourt, William Tranchemontagne, owner of the farm on which the triple fatality occurred, and Arthur Fobert.

Saw Plane Spinning.

"I was at Trenchemontagne's house when I happened to look out the back door and saw the red plane spinning as it dropped straight down," said Royal Vaillancourt. "I heard the crash and Tranchemontagne, my father and I ran across the fields into the bush.

"When we found the plane I knew something terrible had happened for I've never seen anything smashed like that. I felt Lennox and Church and I knew they were dead. I didn't know Armstrong was in the plane for some time because the plane was so badly smashed I couldn't see him.

Fobert, a district resident, was on the shore of Vermillion Lake, two miles distant, when the accident occurred. He said he was watching the plane "loop-the-loop" when he suddenly heard it "scream into a spin".

Guards kept a fire burning at the scene of the accident all night but watched it carefully. The bush in the vicinity is dry as tinder.

CAPS CELEBRATION

the international situation and will react to every event," Voroshiloff declared after praising the work of Soviet troops in Poland and outer Mongolia.

Mechanized units, including 206 medium-sized tanks, formed a large part of the military display. Hundreds of thousands of civilians watched the pageant pass through streets decked with Red banners and bunting while war planes roared overhead in formation.

Molotoff Heard

Prefacing the parade was the speech of Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff last night. He predicted the end of capitalism and inferentially urged Communists in foreign countries to work toward that aim.

"The names of Lenin and Stalin arouse bright hopes in every corner of the world and resound as a call to fight for peace and happiness of nations, to fight for complete emancipation from capitalism," Molotoff said.

Referring to economic crises since 1929, in which he specifically mentioned Great Britain, France and the United States, Molotoff suggested:—

"Is any further proof needed to show that the internal affairs of capitalist countries are in a very bad way indeed, that discontent is naturally gathering among their exploited and oppressed masses and that everything is making for new and inevitable outbreaks against the power of capitalism?

"In one form or another this is the case in every capitalist country."

Says Capitalism Senile

Molotoff declared, "capitalism is senile and decaying; it is already looking backward on its past and is approaching its end. The new world brought into being by the October revolution is growing stronger from day to day and lifting its head higher and higher."

Blaming capitalism for war, including the Japanese-Chinese conflict as well as the struggle in Europe, Molotoff said, "certain plans for extending the war, by involving the Soviet Union, for example, have gone awry. We Soviet people have once again shown that we do not dance to others' music."

Asserting that Russia stood for peace and was making "ardent effort to effect rapid termination of the war," Molotoff gave no suggestion that Germany might expect military aid from the Soviet Union.

NO SHIPPING

55 Vessels Lost

Loss so far in the war of 55 vessels totalling 238,795 tons represented only 1 1-2 per cent of the total British merchant marine tonnage, the spokesman said.

Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, returned to London last night after talks with French navy officials concerning the war at sea.

While little encouragement for the Allies was found in Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff's speech in Moscow Sunday, the press noted that the Nazis could not be much cheered by his assurance that the Soviets will remain neutral.

"That is an assurance which may not please Germany very greatly," said The Daily Telegraph.

"Germany's hopes of military alliance with Russia are thus finally crushed," The Daily Mail asserted.

Change in Russian Policy

The Daily Herald saw a change in Russian policy from "neutrality, benevolent toward Germany, to neutrality malevolent toward everybody."

A warning to Germans that any expectation that the Dominions would not contribute fully to the war was "nonsense" came from R. G. Casey, Australia's Minister of Supply, now in London. "This is our war as much as your war," he told Britons on behalf of his people. "All parts of the Empire always would rally to each other's assistance when any part is threatened."

The Air Ministry announced yesterday that British aircraft had carried out another successful reconnaissance flight over western Germany "and secured a number of valuable photographs." One plane failed to return to its base.

BOARD DEFERS

ships under Panamanian registry so that they could continue voyages to Europe.

After commission sources had said yesterday afternoon that the United States Lines' application for the transfer was granted, the commission held an evening meeting and announced at midnight that it was deferring action.

The ships consist of all but two of those used in transatlantic service by the United States Lines. If the application is approved, they would be transferred to a Panamanian corporation, would fly the Panama flag, and would have no American citizens in their crews.

"The proposed transfer would divorce the ships involved from any and all protection afforded by the United States flag," said a commission statement.

No Americans Carried

The commission explained that the ships could not carry any Americans either as passengers or crew in the combat areas defined by President Roosevelt under terms of the revised neutrality act. These extend eastward from midatlantic around the British Isles and all western Europe from Bergen, Norway to Northern Spain.

Should the ships ever be returned to United States registry, the commission added, they could not enter coastwise or intercoastal service. The nine vessels are the American Shipper, American Banker, American Trader, American Traveler, American Farmer, American Importer, American Merchant, The President Harding and The President Roosevelt.

All the craft, built during or just after the last war, are owned outright by the United States Lines. To replace them, the commission pointed out, the company has made commitments for four combination passenger and cargo vessels and the large liner America, all of which are now being built, and five other vessels recently ordered.

'No Element of Dodging'

The United States Lines' two largest ships—the Manhattan and the Washington—will remain under the American flag, probably in Latin-American service.

Commissioner Max Truitt, discussing the application, expressed the belief that it was a sound situation without "any element of a dodge" from the neutrality act.

The commission was told by the State Department, it was learned, that no question of foreign policy was involved in the transfer.

Joseph Curran, President of the National Maritime Union, declared in New York that the transfer would mean "the company can ignore the collective bargaining contract with us."

"If they put alien seamen on these ships to evade the neutrality law, and our union contracts we will march 10,000 seamen down to Washington and picket the place 'till they drop," he said.

Neutrality Act Regulations

While the Maritime Commission was considering the application, State Secretary Cordell Hull announced further regulations interpreting the neutrality act:

Americans still may travel on belligerent ships outside a North Atlantic danger area outlined by the State Department. They may travel on Canadian or British ships, for example, from North America to the West Indies, South America, or the Orient.

Holders of American passports now in the combat areas may proceed through them so that they can return home.

Naval, coast guard or other ships commissioned to evacuate Americans or chartered by the American Red Cross may travel to the combat areas.

CIVIC COUNCILS

widespread comment. Several civic councils voted at their regular meetings last night to let the electors express their opinions on the scheme at the annual elections.

Meanwhile it was learned in government circles that the provincial administration was worried lest the question should become tangled in purely civic issues at the elections. It was understood the government was drafting the bill now for submission at the session early in 1940.

Motion is Supported

"Long terms lead to dictatorship and this war may last for several years," councillor Charles Spencer said yesterday in submitting a motion for a plebiscite of public opinion to York township council. "I think the citizens should voice their opinion before such a serious step is taken."

The council supported the motion unanimously.

Ottawa city council approved a motion by Alderman Arthur Ash that the term of city council members be limited to two years regardless of the duration of the war.

A Trades and Labor Council delegation protested the Premier's plan to the London city council, which decided to submit it to the electorate for an opinion in December.

Hamilton city council will hold a special session Thursday to discuss Alderman Harry Hunter's notice of motion to take action similar to that of the London council.

A question to be submitted to Brantford voters Dec. 4 will read: "Are you in favor of the duly elected civic representatives at this election for this municipality remaining in office for the duration of the war?"

To Rely on Ratepayers

Ingersoll town council agreed by a three-to-two vote to express the municipality's stand through a vote of the people. Declaring that the cost of an Ingersoll election is only three cents per capita, the council declared that the price of freedom is more to us than the insignificant sum of three cents and democracy has failed if it is to be measured by money that only would be required to send a post-paid letter outside of our town limits."

Sarnia city council, however, defeated a motion by Alderman Geo. Silk calling for a sounding of public opinion on the question.

SIR CHAS. LINDSAY DIES OF STROKE

Began Business Life as Sightless Piano-Tuner — Knighted by King George V

Montreal, Nov. 7 — (CP) — Sir Charles W. Lindsay, who began his business life as a sightless piano tuner and became one of Canada's outstanding workers for the blind, died at his home today of paralysis which struck seven weeks ago. Sir Charles, knighted for his effort to better the plight of the blind, was in his 84th year.

Deprived of his sight when a youth, Charles W. Lindsay studied piano tuning and gradually built up the musical instrument sales company bearing his name. At the time of his death, Sir Charles was chairman of the company, with branches in various parts of Quebec and Ontario.

Lost Sight at Age of 19 Years

Born in Montreal, Lindsay attended Montreal High School and had developed a reputation as a brilliant pupil and an all-round athlete. He was only 19 years old when he lost his sight and for a while was forced to give up his studies. But with indomitable spirit he went to Boston to resume study at the Perkins Institute for the Blind.

Germany Refuses Swedish Protests Over Minefields

Stockholm, Nov. 7—(CP—Havas) —Germany continued its refusal today to give a definite answer to Swedish protests at recent extensions of German minefields which effectively reduced Swedish territorial waters from a four-mile zone to a three-mile zone.

It was believed the Germans will reserve decision until the conclusion of the present German-Swedish commercial negotiations. The newspaper Social Demokratin suggested today that the minefield issue is being held over the head of the Swedish trade negotiators to force compliance with German commercial demands.

If the mine fields remain in their present location, Swedish vessels of more than 1,000 tons will be unable to make coastwise trips from one Swedish port to another without leaving Swedish waters and circumnavigating the minefields.

Sweden has always maintained its special right to a four-mile territorial zone instead of the usual three-mile limit because of the shallow depth of its inshore waters.

BELGIUM TO ANSWER NOTE

Brussels, Nov. 7—(AP)—Reliable sources said Belgium was drafting a reply today to a German warning against permitting Poles in neutral countries to join the Polish Legion being formed in France.

ACCUSED MAN ON HUNGER STRIKE

Biel, Switzerland, Nov. 7—(CP—Havas)—Ernest Schupbach, whose trial with his wife for a series of crimes in Switzerland and Canada begins tomorrow, has been on a hunger strike since being brought here Saturday, it was disclosed today.

Schupbach was said to have lost all his assurance. He has become completely silent.

Schupbach is accused of mistreating his step son, Maurice Nicolet, until the boy died, his wife allegedly killed her first husband, Paul Nicolet, at Biel, and helped to conceal the death of Maurice on a Canadian farm in Alberta after her second marriage.

CANADA EXPORTS MORE TO UNITED STATES

Washington, Nov. 7—(CP)—United States imports from Canada in September increased $9,744,000, from $23,381,000 to $33,125,000, compared to the same month in 1938, the Commerce Department announced today.

The value of exports to Canada increased $15,962,000 this September over last, from $36,194,000 to $52,156,000.

A CHRISTIAN PACIFIST!

Manchester, Nov. 7 (CP)—When Harold Hesketh, 20, farm laborer, appeared before a conscientious objectors' tribunal today, his advocate, Rev. H. Lonsdale, described him as a saintly man and said he thought Hesketh was a genuine Christian pacifist.

The chairman: "What is there about his life that has made you think he is a Christian pacifist?"

Mr. Lonsdale: "Well, he lives with his mother-in-law."

The remainder of the clergyman's answer was engulfed in laughter.

PAUL LALONDE,

Provinces, and when but a boy developed a musical tendency that in his later years carried him to the top of his profession. At the early age of seventeen, the footlights attracted him and he joined a traveling company that produced the famous old melodrama "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Went to Top in Ministrelsy

Following a year of "one-night-stands" Mr. Lalonde turned to the then popular minstrelsy. Possessed of a magnificent basso-profundo voice, his musical ability soon carried him to the top. He joined the Primrose-West Minstrels and after lengthy tours with that company became associated with the Neil-[illegible] Minstrel Troupe.

His splendid vocal ability and art in writing arrangements of popular numbers for orchestra, chorus and solo, caught the attention of the Al G. Fields' Minstrels one of the world's most famous minstrel troupes. For a period of thirty-five years he toured the United States, Canada and many European countries. His photograph was reproduced in lithographs of life-size and for over two score years he was the headline attraction of this famous troupe. He was promoted to musical director of the company and his natural ability and cleverness at arrangements of scores brought him into the spotlight of minstrel circles the world over.

Lovable Personality

His lovable personality, a heritage of the footlights, his willingness at all times to co-operate with his fellow artists and his ready hand, at all times eager to assist artists less fortunate than himself endeared him to the hundreds of colleagues with whom he became associated during his long tenure behind the footlights.

He lived in and loved the atmosphere of bright lights. His music was his food. Development and care of the magnificent voice that carried the resonance of deep organ notes as it thrilled thousands with basso-profundo solos such as "Asleep in the Deep" and other well-known works, was his theme. On the stage he was a splendid figure. He never 'hogged' the applause, but graciously waved to his colleagues when the waves of acclaim rocked theatre and other auditoriums after his performance.

Brought To High Plane.

He was the type of artist, gentleman and friend that brought the American theatre, especially the minstrel productions, to the high plane that it now enjoys.

But when the splendid voice began to waver; when the make-up became a little harder to put on, when the brave legs that carried him from the wings to the brilliancy of the footlights began to weaken, "Paul" as he was familiarly known, came back to the scene of his boyhood. And in Belleville he lived his remaining years in an aura of minstrel memory that enveloped him in a cloak of colorful reminiscence that was a delight to his hearers. Many and varied were the stories that the late Mr. Lalonde told to regale his listeners, and they were legion, of the glamorous minstrels and the gay life behind the footlights.

Mr. Lalonde never married. He was a member of the Roman Catholic Church and resided of late with his nephew, Mr. Henry Ryan, 150 Front street. One brother, Professor Wilfred Lalonde of Rochester, survives him. The funeral announcement will be made later.

DUTCH, BELGIAN

are convinced we are obligated to make our voices heard again.

"The belligerents declared some time ago that they are not standing obstinately against examination of a reasonable and fixed basis of a reasonable peace.

"We consider that in the actual circumstances it is difficult for the belligerents to seek contact with one another, and, as the sovereigns of two neutral states, which have good relations with all their neighbors, we are willing to offer our good offices."

Quests for Eventual Agreement

"If this is agreeable to them, we are ready to facilitate, by all means in our power that it is to their pleasure to suggest to us and in a spirit of friendly understanding, the quest for the elements of an eventual agreement.

"Such appears to be the mission we are called upon to fulfil for the welfare of our peoples and in the interest of the entire world. We hope our offer will be acceptable and that thus the first step will be taken toward establishment of a durable peace.

"Wilhelmina,

"Leopold."

The statement was issued shortly after King Leopold departed for Brussels following a surprise conference with the Queen which started last night.

Monarchs Confer

Accompanied by his Foreign Minister, Paul Henri Spaak, King Leopold conferred with Queen Wilhelminia until a late hour last night and had a second talk with her this morning.

King Leopold and Queen Wilhelminia first offered to mediate Aug. 29, three days before Germany invaded Poland. Almost immediately France, Great Britain, Germany and Poland accepted the offer but nothing came of it as the Germans marched into Poland Sept. 1.

The text of the mediation proposal was not published, but it was understood to have called for both a mediation conference and an arbitration meeting at The Hague.

The mediation proposal apparently was dropped after the war started, although as late as Oct. 7 informed quarters in The Hague said the offer was still good and both the Queen and King were ready to act if called upon.

Swedish Communists Branded as Tool of the Soviets

Stockholm, Nov. 7—(CP-Havas)—Stockholm labor organizations today passed a joint resolution branding the Swedish Communist party as a tool of the Soviets.

The Communist party's political and financial dependence on Moscow leads it to follow Russian instructions blindly, it said. Already, it was asserted, Swedish Reds have given overt or covert approval to Nazism, aggression against Poland, infraction of the Baltic States' integrity, the menace to Finnish neutrality and Pravda's attacks on Sweden.

The resolution said comintern orders already have pushed French Communists toward treason and forced party leaders to desert the French army. In approving this attitude, it charged, the Swedish party is accepting treason as a weapon.

Ship $20,000,000 Gold to United States

Washington, Nov. 7—(AP) — Foreign governments and central banks were shown today to have withdrawn $19,141,302 of their gold deposits in Federal reserve banks and to have shipped an additional $19,977,092 worth of gold to the United States in the week ended Nov. 1.

The gold taken out of "earmark" in the Federal reserve banks presumably was sold to the United States Treasury as the imported metal probably was. On Nov. 1, however, foreign governments and banks still had $1,176,458,000 worth of gold deposited in Federal reserve banks, available for war purchases on a cash and carry basis. Most of the gold is presumed to belong to the Allies, although some of it belongs to neutrals.

The week's imports included $230,348 from Canada. Silver imports totalled $3,513,511. Canada sent $69,206.

INDUSTRY READY TO HELP EFFORTS

Construction Association Offers to Help Speed up Dominion War Program

Hamilton, Ont., Nov. 7—(CP)—Eager to aid the nation during warfare in every possible way, the Canadian Construction Industry stands ready to do its part to speed the Dominion's war program, including development of the nation as the war-time aviation centre of the empire, J. Clark Reilly, of Ottawa, manager of the Canadian Construction Association, said today.

Here for a meeting of the management committee of the association being held to draft plans for adapting the industry to national needs during war-time, Mr. Reilly explained objectives of the industry in the present crisis.

"There is so much work to be done if we are to complete the nation's war program successfully and I am sure the construction industry stands ready to do its part," he said. Among the immediate needs which can be supplied by the contractors of the nation, he said, were special accommodation such as "hutments" for the troops, airplane hangars and other equipment needed in the massive air program, and other accommodation that will be required by military authorities.

"I think the air program in the next few years will involve a lot of work by the construction industry," Mr Reilly said. "That, of course, means a re-adjustment of the forces of construction to meet the new conditions in the interests of the country."

Sympathy for Finns Voiced by Newspaper in Budapest

Budapest, Hungary, Nov. 7 (CP-Havas)—Sympathy for Finland was expressed today by the newspaper Uj Magyarsag, organ of the extremist wing of the government party and usually regarded as Germanophile.

"It is with sadness," the paper said, "that we see Finland threatened with losing its liberty once more. The day will certainly come when even empires of 100,000,000 inhabitants will realize that the honest life of small nations is sacred and inviolate, since great and small peoples are alike created by an invincible will and nourished by the spirit of eternal sacrifice."

Mrs. W. L. Smythe Addresses Aikens W. M. S. Meeting

3rd Sidney—Mrs. W. L. Smythe, B.A., of Pembroke, addressed a gathering at Aikens' Church on Thursday evening, at the Autumn Thankoffering Service of the Woman's Missionary Society.

Guests from Scott's Wallbridge, Stone Church, Centenary, Canniffton, Whites and Holloway Street, Belleville, enjoyed the hot supper provided by the Aikens' ladies.

The pastor, Rev. L. W. Scott, was chairman for the evening's program. The Scripture readings were given orally, by members of the Mission Band, Vivian Woods, Ray Scott and Carl Moon.

A solo "Here Am I" was rendered by Mrs. Perry Hamilton, with Mrs. Leon McMullen singing "Somehow", at the close of the address by Mrs. Smythe.

Mrs. Stanley Spafford introduced the speaker, whose heart-searching address on "Christian Stewardship", was an inspiration to all present.

Mrs. Smythe said she had often been asked "Why in a world at war, should we concern ourselves with the work of missions—should not all gifts and money go to those who suffer because of the war?"

Another question—"What right have men and women to give to the support of the church during war", she felt unworthy of thinking men and women.

Red Cross work is very worthy, and necessary, and is just another fruit of work of Christian churches. Where there is no Christian church, there is no cross, red, or otherwise. "Red Cross work," stated Mrs. Smythe, "is just another part of a true missionary woman's work."

Whatever calls may come for national service, she warned her hearers, to not turn a deaf ear to calls for God. As missionary women, she felt we cannot leave work undone and to remain true to the church and all it stands for.

The war has laid a great responsibility on church members. The church and Woman's Missionary Society have ambassadors of peace scattered throughout the world, and, she felt, they must be supported. Ambassadors of Jesus Christ bring not hate but love; not death, but everlasting life. Christians, stated Mrs. Smythe are responsible not only for doing — but what is left undone.

Christ has no body now on earth, no feet, no hands to bless the world, but those of his ambassadors. That she said, is "Christian Stewardship", and should be felt as a personal responsibility.

What impress is made Mrs. Smythe asked, as we go about our daily lives?

The steadfast, steady living of individuals, transformed by the Grace of God, and conversion to higher living, is stewardship.

It is not the size of the gift, that counts, but what we hold back for selfish purposes, so to be W. M. S. stewards, we must share.

In every crisis that has overtaken humanity in the end, right has always prevailed, and Mrs. Smythe reminded her audience that God was still in control, with the command "Go ye into all the world and tell' 'and the promise that goes with it—"I will be with you always."

In her closing remarks Mrs. Smythe said in a world of war, and hate, and failure, she could still hear the angels singing, and visualized the day of no more war, a picture fulfilling in every way true "Christian Stewardship."

'WE ARE HUMANE, THAT'S NO JOKE', SAYS GOERING

Replies to Press Interviewers as to Why Germany Does Not Bomb England

Berlin, Nov. 7—(AP)— Field Marshal Hermann Goering told foreign correspondents today he regarded Germany as unbeatable.

Goering submitted to questions by foreign correspondents at a reception given by the new Soviet Ambassador, Alexander Schwarkzeff.

"The fact that I am here at this time should in itself tell you better than any words can as to just what the situation is," he asserted. "If anybody had told us in 1933 that our fight with England and France would bring us side by side with Russia we should have been regarding him as crazy."

Goering, who wore a field marshal's uniform, listened intently when one American correspondent asked:

"Supposing American planes are shipping for the Allies? There is talk of 8,000."

"In the first place it isn't possible to build 8,000 so fast," Goering replied. "In the second place even if they were built that doesn't mean yet that they are over here. Anyway if we built only 8,000 we'd be poor aviators."

TAKE 2 WE ARE .. ..

Again an American asked, "there are said to be 800 ready at American docks for shipment?"

"Well that's something but by no means enough," Goering said. "We certainly are not afraid of American planes."

When asked why Germany didn't attack the British coast but contented herself with attacks on warships, the Field Marshal asserted:

"Warships are more important strategic objects than the coast."

"But why if you are in such excellent condition didn't you open a 'blitzkrieg' (lightning war) on England?" A correspondent persisted.

"Because we are humane," Goering replied and, growing serious, added, "please gentlemen, that's no joke."

The coroner's office at Powassan had an official on the scene early today. Details of the accident were not immediately forthcoming.

It was learned from a storekeeper at Golden Valley that the victim had been hit in the side by the bullet, but did not know how it happened.

CAPT. MISENER BUYS YACHT VENTIA

Fort Erie, Ont., Nov. 7—(CP)—The yacht, Venetia, famed as a raider and patrol boat during the last war, will shortly be seen in Lake Erie waters. Captain Scott Misener of Port Colborne, head of the Sarnia Steamship Company, has purchased the craft from the estate of James Playfair of Midland, Ont.

The Venetia is credited with sinking the German submarine that in 1915 had sent the Lusitania to the bottom with a loss of 1,154 lives. Decorated by the British Government, the boat was awarded two gold stripes which still adorn her stack.

AIKEN'S W.M.S.

The November meeting of Aiken's Woman's Missionary Society was held on Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Bruce Hogle with sixteen members present.

Mrs. Thomas Irwin, the president, was in charge of the meeting, with Rev. L. W. Scott assisting with the devotions.

The second chapter of the study book, "Moving Millions", was given by Mrs. Percy Hamilton. Others taking part were Mrs. Palmer, Mrs. Saylor, Mrs. McNary, Mrs. Kells, Mrs. (Rev.) Scott, Mrs. Spafford and Mrs. P. Westover. Mrs. Hamilton and Miss Edith Hogle conducted a questionnaire on the missionary work in India. This chapter gives a stirring account of the mass movements among the untouchables and depressed classes, fifteen thousand of whom are coming into the Christian church each month. "No subject I have discussed in twelve months has excited more interest than the news from India about the untouchables," quoted a famous radio commentator.

Mrs. Stafford extended an invitation to all members to attend the Mission Band meetings held the last Friday of each month.

A solo was rendered by Miss Edith Hogle.

Mrs. Ken Bush and Mrs. Harleigh Hubble gave reports of the W.M.S. rally held recently at Zion.

A letter from Miss Irene Grills was read, expressing thanks for the floral tributes sent during their recent bereavement.

During the discussion on Red Cross work, it was decided to organize under the Belleville unit, affiliating with the local W.A.

An invitation was accepted from Stone Church Auxiliary to attend their thank offering service when Dr. Helliwell of Foxboro will speak on work in China. A reading was given by Mrs. Bruce Hogle and Rev. Scott closed the meeting with prayer.

PLANE CRASHES IN FLAMES

Honolulu, Nov. 7 (AP)—A United States naval observation plane burst into flames in diving practice and crashed into the sea off Barber's Point yesterday.

BRITISH NAVAL SHIPS, POLISH DESTROYERS FIGHT OFF GERMAN AIR ATTACK

London, Nov. 7—(CP)—The Admiralty announced tonight that light British naval ships aided by Polish destroyers fought off an attack by German airplanes in the North Sea this morning without suffering damage.

An official communique said:

"This morning in the southern part of the North Sea certain of our light forces, including two Polish destroyers, were in action with German aircraft.

"No damage was done to any ship. The enemy's casualties are not known."

Earlier German bombers were reported sighted over the Shetland Islands north of Scotland and driven off into the haze by hot British anti-aircraft fire.

Observers said it was likely these were the same craft that engaged in naval forces—possibly on reconnaissance before the North Sea fight.

DROWNING PROBED BY MISS SMALL

Visits Drug Store to Find if Her Sister, Mrs. Bell Had Purchased Ether

Midland, Ont., Nov. 7—(CP)—Miss Florence Small, sister of Ambrose Small, millionaire theatrical man who disappeared in 1919, arrived here today with her advisor, Patrick Sullivan of Toronto, to conduct their personal investigation of the drowning of Mrs. Warren Bell, 56, the other sister of Ambrose.

Mrs. Bell, the former Gertrude M. Small, and her husband of a few hours, died when their motor car plunged into the Nottawasaga River October 27. The Attorney General's office consented to a postponement of the inquest to permit Miss Small and Sullivan time to conduct their own investigation.

Sullivan, former Editor of a Toronto Weekly tabloid, and Miss Small visited local drug stores after their arrival today and asked druggists if Mrs. Bell, during her stay here, ever had purchased any ether. The reply of the two druggists visited, it is said, was negative.

The two then went to the residence rented by Mrs. Bell and arranged for the packing of her furniture to be shipped to Toronto. After that they went to the scene of the tragedy at Wasaga Beach. Bell, 39-year-old electrician, wedded Miss Gertrude Small after a brief friendship here.

"Farmer" Roosevelt Casts His Ballot in N.Y. Elections

Hyde Park, N.Y., Nov. 7—(AP)—"Farmer" Franklin D. Roosevelt cast his ballot today at the white frame town hall of this Hudson Valley village. The President voted for county and local officials and on the question of legalizing parimutuel betting on horse races in New York State.

He drove up in an open White-house car with his mother, his wife and his personal secretary. He paused beside Emma W. Crapser, the election clerk.

"What is your name?" she inquired.

"Franklin D. Roosevelt."

"Occupation?"

"Farmer," the President replied.

Mr. Roosvelt commented that the election board was made up mostly of women, and said:—

"I think I'd trust the women more than the men."

ALFRED SCADDING TO REOPEN MINE

Will Start Operations in Mine He Was Trapped in in 1936

Toronto, Nov. 7—(CP)—Alfred Scadding, survivor of the Moose River Mine accident in 1936, is going back to the Nova Scotia property to put it into operation, he disclosed today.

Scadding, Dr. D. E. Robertson and Herman Magill, all of Toronto, were trapped in the mine by a rock-fall. Magill died underground but the other two emerged after 10 days' entombment. The rescue by Nova Scotia draegermen was one of the most thrilling in mining history and attracted world-wide attention.

Scadding has acquired a couple of new associates and they have leased the Moose River property from the Nova Scotia government. A government geologist has reported the existence of tungsten in the mine and Scadding believes that, with a war on, the price of the valuable wartime metal should rise. The operations will be directed toward mining the tungsten rather than gold, which was the original purpose of operations.

"If this thing works out the way I hope it will I'll be going into Halifax, when everything is running smoothly, and I'll have Dr. H. K. MacDonald of Victoria General Hospital operate on my feet," said Scadding. "I have all kinds of faith in him."

Dr. MacDonald removed Scadding's gangrened toes a few days after he was brought up from the Moose River Mine.

"I'd like him to remove all the scar tissue and graft on new skin," he said. "He can't graft on new toes, but if anybody could, Dr. MacDonald would be the man."

The Mataroa is a 12,390-ton vessel of Southampton Registry.

7,603 - TON GERMAN FREIGHTER CAPTURED

Britain Gives 'Careful Consideration' to Move

Leaflets Dropped On Paris Region By Unknown Plane

Propaganda Letters Contained Part of Molotoff's Speech in Which He Said "Russia Was Closer to Germany"

PRINTED IN GERMANY

Rejection of Peace Proposal by Queen Wilhelmina and King Leopold Predicted in Unofficial Circles and by the Press

London, Nov. 8 (CP)—The 7,603-ton German freighter Uhenfels has been captured and taken to Freetown, Sierra Leone, it was disclosed here today. Sierra Leone is a British colony on the West Coast of Africa.

Paris, Nov. 8 (AP)—Two unidentified planes were reported by military sources today to have been fired upon when they dropped propaganda leaflets on the Paris region in early morning darkness yesterday.

The leaflets bore parts of the Oct. 31 speech by Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff of Russia in which he notified the world that Russia was drawing closer to Germany.

It was not determined whether the planes were German or French machines flown by French Communists. From the nature of the printing, French quarters decided the pamphlets were printed in Germany.

Rejection Predicted

Rejection of the peace proposal by Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands and King Leopold of Belgium was predicted today in unofficial quarters and by the press.

Premier Edouard Daladier conferred until late last night at the War Ministry, but there was no hint of official reaction to the mediation suggestion.

Unofficially it was said that while France and Great Britain had expressed willingness to attend to peace conference under certain conditions, to do so now would be tantamount to accepting a German victory.

Activity Revived

On the military front, the War Ministry reported "revival of activity on the party of contact units," and "local artillery actions."

Unofficial reports described an aerial battle Monday as an even greater French victory than the government communique indicated at that time.

THE WEATHER

The weather has been somewhat colder in the western provinces with snowflurries in some sections of Saskatchewan and Alberta. Light snow has also fallen in Northern Ontario with rain in southern and eastern districts.

Lake Superior—Strong northwest winds, partly cloudy and moderately cold with scattered snowflurries. Thursday, moderate winds, fair and moderately cold.

Western Provinces—Partly cloudy and moderately cold. Thursday, cloudy and a little milder, light snow or rain.

Use of war balloons. Balloons became a recognized part of army equipment about 50 years ago. They are now used universally by all modern armies as an aid to observation. Their specific use is to enable observers to study the enemy territory, the disposition and movement of hostile troops and their fortifications. From their advantageous position they can also discover air raids by the enemy, especially when visibility is good. They are also used by the observers to report the progress and success of their own troops, and to spot artillery fire for the purpose of correcting the aim.

MANION INVITED TO BE SPECIFIC IN HIS CHARGES

Prime Minister King Answers Statement Made by the Opposition Leader

WILLING TO PROBE

Ottawa, Nov. 8—(CP)—The next session of parliament possibly will witness the continuation of the patronage controversy between Conservative Leader Manion and Prime Minister Mackenzie King, political observers forecast today.

The Prime Minister last night made his second reply to Dr. Manion's patronage charges and said that specific instructions have been issued by the government that there must be no patronage or favoritism in appointments, promotions or the awarding of contracts in relation to Canada's war effort.

Mr. Mackenzie King repeated his invitation to the Conservative leader to make specific charges that the government's instructions are being violated. He said that if these specific charges are made public, or communicated to him in writing, or brought up when parliament re-assembles, they will be investigated.

Will Take Action

"If, upon investigation, they are substantiated, appropriate action will, of course, be taken without delay," the Prime Minister said.

"So far, the Leader of the Opposition has not made any charges based upon specific information, which could provide the basis for an investigation."

Mr. Mackenzie King said, however, that he has every reason to believe that the government's instructions against patronage and favoritism are being carried out.

British Labor Party Outlines Six Principles To Form Peace Basis

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Nov. 8—(CP Cable)—The Labor party issued a war aims manifesto today, outlining six principles which the party said should form the basis of any peace settlement.

Clement Attlee, leader of the Parliamentary Labor Party, presented the program to a meeting of Labor members of parliament while the nation discussed the offer of Queen Wilhelmina of The Netherlands and King Leopold of the Belgians to mediate between Germany and the Allies.

The manifesto emphasized the reconstruction of Poland and Czecho-Slovakia and some form of federation for Europe. The prime requisite to any peace settlement, it declared, would be a government in Germany which could be trusted.

The six "principles for peace" were laid down as follows:

1. No dictated peace.
2. Recognition of the right of all nations to live and develop their own characteristic civilizations provided they do not infringe on others.
3. Complete abandonment of aggression and armed force.
4. Recognition of the rights of national, racial and religious minorities.
5. Recognition of an international authority superior to individual states.
6. Abandonment of Imperialism.

HITLER ADDRESSES THE "OLD GUARD" OF 1923 PUTSCH

Spoke at Buergerbrau Hall—Now a Nazi Shrine—Where Putsch Started

RECALLS MEMORIES

Says Movement Had Tremendous Consequences for the German People

Munich, Germany, Nov. 8 (CP-Havas)—Adolf Hitler told veterans of his 1923 "Beer Hall" Putsch tonight that "in my last speech I held out my hand for the last time to France and Great Britain."

Munich, Nov. 8—(AP) — Adolf Hitler tonight addressed his "old guard," the Nazi veterans who marched against the German Republican Army in 1923 in the ill-fated "beer hall" putsch in which the first attempt was made to establish a Nazi regime. Hitler was greeted with shouts of "Heil" when he entered the Buergerbrau Hall—now a Nazi shrine—from which he and his lieutenants started for "the hall of field marshals" sixteen years ago.

In an impromptu speech Hitler said in part, beginning at 8:10 p.m. (2:10 p.m. E.S.T.):

"I came here for several hours to recall memories of the day

CANADIAN NAVY PLAYING PART IN CONVOY SYSTEM

System Proving Highly Successful After Two Months of War

TASK TWOFOLD

Ottawa, Nov. 8 (CP)—The convoy system, in which the Canadian navy is playing an important part, is already proving highly successful and in full swing after only two months of war, a spokesman for the National Defence Department said here in a speech outlining the work of the navy.

In a broadcast over the national network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation last night, the spokesman said the task of the Canadian navy in wartime is twofold.

First, it is responsible, in cooperation with the army and air force, for the protection of Canadian coasts. Second, it must do its best to protect shipping from hazards of enemy action. In this the Royal Canadian Air Force co-operates with the navy in coastal waters.

"As we are at war with a European power, it is pretty clear that enemy activity is more likely to occur in the Atlantic, although by no means necessarily confined to that region. We cannot, of course, neglect the Pacific in consequence, since we know only too well, from our experience in the last war alone, that surface-raiders and submarines make the oceans of the world their hunting ground."

The peacetime force of six destroyers and five minesweepers was insufficient for performance of the many duties falling on the navy during the war, the spokesman said. Because of the need for ships to aid the navy, some forty commercial vessels have been called up for service since the outbreak of war.

"The equipment of merchant vessels with defensive armaments is also carried out in Canada under the direct supervision of the naval service," he said.

The personnel of the naval service, consisting of 1,700 officers and men before the war, has been doubled. About 1,800 members of the Royal Canadian Naval Reserve and the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve were called up for active service.

Peace Impossible, Says Press, Unless With Guarantee and Honor

London, Nov. 8—(CP) — Peace with Germany is impossible unless it is based on honor and gives ironclad guarantees against Nazi aggression, British newspapers said today in comment on the mediation offer made by King Leopold of the Belgians and Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands.

"Nobody doubts the sincerity of the Dutch and Belgian peoples' desire for peace, any more than these two people can doubt from which direction their neutrality may be violated," said The Daily Herald. "Britain and France are no less sincere in their desire for peace.

"But it must be a peace on terms which are consistent with honor and will assure an end to aggression. If Germany would first withdraw her troops from Poland and Czecho - Slovakia, Britain and France would be prepared to discuss the terms of a peace settlement."

The four occupants, who police later identified as Thomas Turriff, the driver, his wife Alice, Luella Woodley, all of Detlor, Ont., and Miss Dorothy Goddard of 107 Cannifton Rd., Belleville, all escaped without serious injury, although it was necessary to remove three of them to the Belleville General Hospital. Directly after being assisted up the 18-foot embankment, Miss Woodley disappeared, and police stated today she was still missing.

Daily Baths in Winter May Irritate the Skin

Philadelphia, Nov. 8—(AP)—Modern Science gave its support today to little Johnny's age-old protests against a daily bath—especially in winter.

"There's such a thing as trying to be too clean," Dr. Paul O'Leary of Rochester, Minn., told the American Academy of Dermatology and Syphilology, closing a three-day convention.

"Winter itch" is a common skin ailment, especially in middle-aged people," Dr. O'Leary said. "It comes from too constant bathing in cold water.

"During the winter the oil glands of the skin are inactive. Soap and water plus the dry heat of the house dries out the skin, causing a condition that resembles chapping. Then the sufferers proceed to treat it with ointments that increase the irritation.

ACCIDENTAL BLAST DESTROYS BRITISH SUBMARINE OXLEY

No Details or Date of Accident Given by First Lord of Admiralty

GERMAN LOSSES HEAVY

London, Nov. 8 (CP)—The loss of the British submarine Oxley by an accidental explosion was announced to the House of Commons today by Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty.

"Since the outbreak of war," Mr. Churchill said, "one of our submarines, H.M.S. Oxley, has been destroyed by an accidental explosion in circumstances which made its publication inadvisable at the time."

He gave no details or the date of the accident.

(The Oxley was one of Britain's ocean-going submarines, completed in 1927, having a surface displacement of 1,540 tons and a normal complement of 54 officers and men.)

Mr. Churchill said three times as many British hunting craft were at work now as at the outbreak of war and that "a fairly sound conservative estimate" of German submarine losses was between two and four every week.

HALIFAX'S SPEECH WAS 'ACCURSEDLY PROMPT,' SAYS FOE

But British Broadcast Was Arranged Days Before Mediation Plea Was Made

NAZIS BLAME NEUTRALS

By LOUIS LOCHNER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Berlin, Nov. 8 (AP)—Authoritative German circles said today a German reply to the Belgian and Netherlands rulers' mediation offer had been rendered practically unnecessary by Lord Halifax's "accursedly prompt" speech last night.

Daily War Survey

The systematic bombardment of Forbach and its environs by German artillery during the past few days bears all the marks of a leisurely local operation. Possibly it is hoped to make things so hot for the French that they will retire or the bombardment may be followed by an attack.

The purpose of a local operation there might be two-fold; to test out the resistance of the French advanced positions and to reduce the salient of which Forbach stands near the apex. Reduction of the salient would facilitate communications between the different sectors of the German line and would also relieve the German city of Saarbruecken from the menace of French guns.

KING OF BELGIUM AND WILHELMINA TO PRESS OFFER

May Make Diplomatic Contacts With Berlin, London and Paris

LITTLE OPTIMISM

In Paris It is Believed the Appeal Has Little Chance for Success

The Hague, Nov. 8 (AP)—Official circles hinted today that King Leopold of Belgium and Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands might follow up their offer to serve as peace mediators with diplomatic contacts in Berlin, London and Paris.

While these circles would not speculate on the probable outcome of the dramatic peace appeal delivered last night by the two sovereigns to Great Britain, France and Germany, an atmosphere of moderate but cautious optimism was apparent here.

It was conceded this optimism was based on the belligerent powers' apparent reluctance to initiate major offensives rather than on any reaction produced thus far by the mediation offer.

WOMAN PICKETER GETS ANSWER

Detroit, Nov. 8—(CP) — Mrs. C. Schindler has her answer today. She set a precedent yesterday by picketing the picket line of United Automobile Workers at the Dodge Motor Company plant with a placard urging men to stop striking and think of their wives and children.

Wives of nearly twenty striking workers turned out today carrying placards that said: "Husbands are men, not mice."

Mediation Offer Stirs Little Hope For Any Results

Daily Mail Says Allied Peace Terms Well Known and Asks What Prospects is There of Them Being Accepted by Nazis

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 8 (CP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain declared in the House of Commons today that the peace offer Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands and King Leopold of the Belgians is receiving the "careful consideration" of the British government.

The prime minister, replying to a question by Clement Attlee, leader of the opposition, added he was not in a position to make any statement regarding the proposal.

Says Defences Inadequate.

Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, told the House that a German U-boat was able to penetrate the defences of the land-locked anchorage of Scapa Flow to sink the battleship Royal Oak Oct. 14 because the defences were inadequate.

The First Lord also disclosed the submarine Oxley had been sunk by an accidental explosion some time during the outbreak of the war. He withheld details as to casualties. The sub usually carried 54 men.

Authoritative sources said the French and Polish Government would be consulted before any reply is made to the Netherlands-Belgian peace proposal.

Dr. C. E. O'Connor, Kingston Specialist, Dies at Toronto

Well Known Medical Man Ill Only a Few Days—Was Prominent Member of Catholic Church

HONORED BY THE POPE

Dr. Charles E. O'Connor, of Kingston, one of Eastern Ontario's best-known eye, ear, nose and throat specialists, died in St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto yesterday following a short illness. He went to Toronto for an operation a few days ago.

Dr. O'Connor was one of the most outstanding men of the medical profession in this part of the Dominion.

Graduating from Queen's University in 1896, he went to New York to take post-graduate work at the New York Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat Hospital. In 1902 he started to specialize in Kingston and had continued to practice in that city since. During that time he was recognized as having attained high ranking in his profession.

He did post-graduate study in the great hospitals of Vienna in his special work and was a life-member of the American Medical Society of the famous Austrian capital. He was a Fellow of the American College of Surgeons and was associated with numerous societies and medical organizations.

A devout member of the Roman Catholic Church, he was signally honored by the late Pope Pius XI a few years ago, when he was made a Knight of St. Gregory in recognition of his devout Catholicity and works of charity.

The news of the passing of Dr. O'Connor was received with deep regret in medical circles of Hastings and Prince Edward Counties where he was well-known. He has lectured here on numerous occasions and was popular among the medical fraternity of his and other districts.

He is survived by his wife, formerly Margaret Burkitt, and three children, Charles, Nicholas and Mary Margaret; also one sister Miss Kate O'Connor, Kingston. Funeral arrangements will be made today.

NEW LORD MAYOR

London, Nov. 8 — (CP) — Sir William Coxen, alderman for Billingsgate, was installed as Lord Mayor of London at the Guildhall today, succeeding Sir Frank Bowater in the usual ancient ceremony.

First Time War Has Been Approved by Plebiscite After Breaking Out

Paris, Nov. 8 (CP Havas)—Emile Borel said today in an article in L'Ere Nouvelle that for the first time in history a war has been approved by plebiscite after it broke out.

The noted mathematician and former Minister of Marine made the statement in discussing the recent defeat of Premier Maurice Duplessis in the Quebec Provincial election.

Saying that Duplessis had taken a position opposed to the war policy of the Canadian government, Borel added:

"It is difficult for us to untangle all the motives for Duplessis' attitude, but it is not necessary to know all the background of Canadian politics to note a unique fact in democratic annals. Some weeks after war on the Reich was voted by the Federal parliament, the voters of the Province of Quebec had to pronounce themselves on this policy.

"A great majority voted for war, in spite of the contrary campaign of Premier Maurice Duplessis.

"On numerous occasions pacifists have demanded that entry into war should be decided only after a plebiscite, with the idea that peoples never would make wars unless they were led in by governments.

"If the free and pacific voters of Quebec chose war against Hitlerism, it was because they realized that it is the only way out remaining to free peoples to escape from the monstrous attempt at universal oppression.

"The French are just as pacific as the Canadians, and resigned themselves to this war because there was no way to act otherwise. The Quebec vote gives brilliant confirmation to the fact that the support of French-Canada to the Franco-British cause is a certain pledge of victory."

DANDELIONS IN BLOOM

Dandelions are still shooting tiny yellow heads above the grass in Victoria Park. Apparently the heavy frosts of a few days ago had little or no effect on the small flowers.

CANNED GOODS MOVED

Heavy shipments of canned goods are reported to be moving in the district. The steamer "Glen Allan" will load a large consignment at her regular call here on Friday.

FALL DUCKS REPORTED IN GREATER NUMBERS

With the season scheduled to officially close at the end of the month, duck hunters of the district have but a couple of weeks to get their seasonal quota of birds. Scarcity of the game has been reported in this immediate district by the early morning nimrods, although reports from Consecon Lake, West Lake and Wellers Bay state that the ducks have been appearing in those districts in increasing quantities of late.

WIRE FENCE AROUND FILTRATION PLANT

A six-foot wire fence has been erected around the grounds of the Belleville Filtration Plant and the Belleville Hydro Electric sub-station on Reid street as additional precautionary steps against possible sabotage, Mayor Bone announced today. The modern new fences are topped with additional three strands of barbed wire to assist in excluding possible intruders. The fences were erected by the Belleville Public Utilities Commission. The armed guards patrolling these premises by appointment of the provincial government will continue, as the wire fences were only erected as an additional precautionary move. "All such public property and especially public utilities should be protected from possible damage with these modern new fences, that are solidly built and materially assist in the halting of damage to property by vandals," added His Worship.

RARE BIRD SHOT

Member of the cliff-dwelling families of wild bird-life, a coal goose or cormorant was brought down by a duck hunter shooting in the marshes of East Lake yesterday.

Large, web-footed, and a species of the Pelican family, the bird has a black head and neck with coverts of the beak and wings edged with deep green.

These birds usually nest high in a cliffside, feed on fish and are also known as "sea-crows" and "sea-ravens".

Sister Mercedes Guiding Spirit of St. Michael's Band

When you hear St. Michael's Children's Band on Friday night at St. Michael's Academy you will be impressed with the finish they apply to their renditions. They have a polish so to speak that many well trained adult bands do not have. And this is the more remarkable because the average age of those seventeen youngsters is only nine years.

To get that polish necessitated many weeks of careful training. Sister Mary Mercedes has been responsible for this even though it meant many hours over and above the routine work that it is incumbent upon a Sister of St. Michael's Convent to shoulder each day. The building of this band is a masterpiece.

It started back in 1934, when Sister Mercedes first came to Belleville, with the Primary Class taking up rhythm band work in connection with music. The first band consisted of xylophones, castanets, cymbals, sandblock sticks, etc. They made their first public apepearance outside of the Academy at a band Tattoo of the Municipal Band. They were further encouraged by leader Jobson who loaned his cornet to J. Briand. The cornet section of the band was further strengthened when B. Moher and E. Barrett acquired instruments. $80.00 was acquired at their first concert and this gave them the wherewithal to buy saxophones. Noel Langton gave the band two cornets, which made five instruments of this type.

Thus, gradually, their original toy instruments were replaced by the regulation article; they have played at various points in the surrounding countryside where they have made an instantaneous hit. There is no doubt but what they will be a big hit on Friday night. A novelty will be the Musical Dialogue. You shouldn't miss it.

Variety will be added on the concert platform with Messrs. John Deacon and Harold Barrett giving of their vocal talents with Mary Conner Deacon, as accompanist.

H. N. S. Members Hosts at Party. For Congregation

Members of St. Michaels' congregation, old and young, were royally entertained by the Holy Name Society at a complimentary social evening in the Academy Auditorium last night. The affair was in the nature of an Old Time party and proved a splendid success.

Every variety of amusement had been arranged for the pleasure of the guests Bingo games, euchre, a short stage presentation and community singing made up the earlier part of the evening. Euchre prizes were won by Mrs. J. Chappelle, Mrs. R. Moher, Mrs. J. Donovan, Miss E. Parkhurst, Messrs. H. Logue, Frank O'Connor, M. Connell and J. O'Neil. The door prize was presented to Bob Carey and Mr. McDonald won the "Silver" prize.

Mr. Allan Meagher who acted as chairman for the program welcomed the guests on behalf of the Holy Name Society. The interesting items that followed included a vocal solo by Jackie Shepherd, accordion solo by Miss Mary Pigeon; Tap dance, Barbara Donovan; Tap dance, Joan Marsh and Joyce Woodhouse. Mrs. G. Clapp led the Community singing in which the audience participated with great enthusiasm.

A delicious lunch was served by members of the Holy Name Society, square and round dancing, completing a very delightful evening.

The appreciation of the guests was conveyed to the Holy Name Society by Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G., who expressed the thanks of the congregation for the thoughtful arrangements for a most successful evening.

Mayor Bone Appeals For Fund to Help Beaches Association

"The Beaches Association have done a splendid job along the Bay Shore and have actually been pioneers in the important matter of city planning. When and if this wonderful country is ever given a chance to blossom forth, Belleville and the Bay of Quinte district will be one of the most beautiful spots in Ontario and indeed in the whole world," stated Mayor Bone when making reference to the matter of the Beaches today.

"Nothing should be permitted that will pollute the Bay waters or hinder the beautification of our Bay and river front. The possibilities are tremendous and some of our residents near the Upper Bridge have shown much foresight and good taste in beautifying the river at that point," further pointed out His Worship.

"The Mead Johnson Co. and the Stephens-Adamson Co. have shown their appreciation and sympathy in tangible form by a handsome contribution of $50. each towards the work of the Beaches. City taxes cannot be applied to this work under our present outmoded system of municipal taxation, but I would like to see our public spirited citizens interested in the permanent beautification of the city, contribute anything they feel they can spare so the present work in hand there, costing about $200., might be finished yet this season. Mr. Reg. Moncrieff will see to it, that every dollar so contributed yields at least one hundred cents worth of improvement," concluded Mayor Bone in his appeal to the city for assistance towards the further beautifying of Belleville today.

Farmhand Victim Of Bull's Viciousness

Victim of a savage attack of a bull Rudolf Gillessen, 31-year-old farmhand employed by John Marks, Norwood farmer, was found crushed to death in a fence-corner yesterday afternoon.

Gillessen had attempted to drive the animal into the barn contrary to the wishes of Marks, who told investigating officials that he had told Gillessen "not to go near the bull".

He said he had left the farmhand working in the stables while he (Marks) took the bull outside. When Gillessen failed to turn up for dinner a search was made and his crushed body found in a nearby field.

Coroner Dr. H. Carleton said he did not think an inquest necessary. Gillessen was born in Holland and came to Canada ten years ago. He worked for a time on a farm near St. Mary's and had been with Marks since last spring.

TWEED STUDENTS WIN 33-5 OVER MARMORA KIDS

Tweed Gridsters Advance to Finals in Trent Valley Rugby Loop

Tweed, Nov. 8 (Special)—Tweed High School rugby team defeated Marmora by a score of 33-5 in a sudden death game played in Madoc on Tuesday afternoon. The defeat eliminates the Marmora team while Tweed advances into the finals against Madoc High School, with the first game being played in Tweed on Friday afternoon. The winners of this series will meet Belleville Collegiate in a later series.

The game was late in starting due to the lateness of the arrival of Marmora players, and was shortened to two twenty minute halves. Tweed demonstrated their superiority in every department of the game scoring a touchdown in the first two minutes of play.

Two intercepted forward passes by Courneyea, fleet-footed Tweed backfielder, were converted into major scores. It remained for Luffman to furnish the highlight of the game. In the latter stages of the game he caught the ball on his own 25-yard line from the kick-off and ran it back to Marmora's touch line for a touchdown.

Courneyea Gets Three.

Porritt's plunging again gained ground consistently. He also scored a touchdown. Courneyea raised his total touchdown to three for the game and fourteen for the season when he caught Wagar's forward pass and easily eluded his tacklers. Price scored the sixth touchdown when he picked up the ball following a Marmora fumble and raced across the line. Three converts raised the total to 33 points. Reynolds secured Marmora's points following some loose play by the Tweed boys.

Backache—Kidney Pains

Poison causes pain. When you have pains in the back, lumbago or rheumatic pains you may be suspicious of the kidneys. They may be slow and sluggish in removing uric acid poisons from the blood.

Along with inactivity of the kidneys you usually find the liver torpid and the bowels irregular. You can clear up this whole condition by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. For fifty years this popular medicine has proven its outstanding efficiency as a regulator of these vital organs.

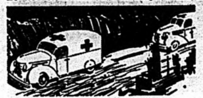
WAR! The Red Cross swings into action

1. HOSPITALS AND HOSPITAL EQUIPMENT



2. AMBULANCES

3. FOOD AND COMFORTS

4. SURGICAL SUPPLIES AND DRESSINGS

1 Hospitals must be built and equipped in England and France to care for the sick and wounded. During the last war the Canadian Red Cross built and equipped (wholly or in part) hospitals at Taplow, Bushey Park, Ramsgate, Bexhill, and Buxton in England; built and equipped one of the largest military hospitals in France; and established a depot in Boulogne for Canadian hospitals.

2 From 1914 to 1918 the Canadian Red Cross provided scores of ambulances to convey the sick and wounded in France and England. Now the need for ambulances faces us again. It seems likely that the demand will be greater than during the last war.

3 Again the Red Cross wishes to be able to send socks, cigarettes, candy and other comforts to the boys at the front. During the last war, 341,325 cases of supplies were sent overseas. The Society sent sixty pounds of food per month to every Canadian prisoner of war, in addition to tobacco, medical supplies, clothing and books. Should the occasion arise, we must be prepared to do so again.

4 X-Ray equipment, surgical supplies and dressings must be purchased almost immediately. During the last war, thousands of cases of supplies were sent to England and France. Thousands of dollars were contributed to equip a ward in the St. John Ambulance Brigade Hospital at Etaples, France.

WITH THE WAR only a few weeks old, the Canadian Red Cross has already marshalled its forces to save lives, to prevent suffering. Lack of preparedness cost many lives during 1914 and 1915. This time Red Cross facilities must be on the job. Already the need is urgent. The work of equipping hospitals in England and France must be undertaken immediately. Ambulances will be needed. Surgical supplies, X-Ray equipment must be on hand. This work cannot wait.

During the last war, Canadians gave without stint to support the work of the Canadian Red Cross and the British Red Cross. During this war you will be asked to contribute only to the Canadian Red Cross, which will co-operate closely with its parent organization. We are all fighting for the same cause. We will all work together to see that the human side of war is carried on successfully.

Will you support this splendid cause? Will you save a life, help a sick or suffering lad who is far from home, or bring a few comforts to the boys who are in the thick of the fight?

Your loved ones may or may not have to go. But at this time all the boys in khaki are your sons, your brothers. They are fighting for your liberty, protecting your home. If you can't go, give to the Red Cross.

5. WAR RELIEF Hundreds of thousands of Polish refugees in countries adjacent to Poland are in dire need. Through the International Red Cross Society at Geneva, help is being sent to these unfortunate people. Your contribution will help to provide food and clothing during the coming winter.

6. PEACETIME WORK OF THE RED CROSS The regular work of the Red Cross in Canada must be continued. Outpost hospitals and nursing stations must be maintained and the work of the Red Cross in frontier districts must be carried on. The activities of the Junior Red Cross must be developed. The normal cost of this great effort is a million dollars a year.

The need is urgent—dig in and Give!

EPIC BATTLE OF THE AIR

The battle of nine French planes which attacked a squadron of twenty-seven German planes and beat down nine of them, seven to fall within French lines, while the Gallic aviators lost no man nor plane, is an epic, one of the first real scraps of the modern war of the air which will linger in memory.

It inspires courage and optimism to know that the Allies can give so good an accounting in the air. It must discourage the Germans as must their futile attacks on British naval bases of some weeks ago.

What is the aim of the French air movements? The British flights over Germany are clearly enough defined—to get photographs of fortifications and to drop pamphlets. But no one knows what is behind these apparently reconnaissance flights of German fliers.

THE BURGOMASTER OF BRUSSELS

Burgomaster Max of Brussels is dead at the age of 70. When he was 45 years old he became the most famous man in Europe because he was the very spirit of the people of all democracy. He was more famous than the then Kaiser of Germany, in whom centred Germany. Other great figures of those awful first days of the first Great War have disappeared but the Burgomaster of Brussels lived until this week. Wilhelm Hohenzollern lost his imperial crown and throne, but the spirited little mayor of the Belgian capital retained until death the post of burgomaster of Brussels.

He was the voice of the people in 1914 as he stubbornly resisted the German invaders. He spurned the hand of the German commander, refusing to clasp it. He slept in his office rather than yield one iota to the breakers of neutrality.

The German authorities did the only thing a bully knows what to do with a free man—they used force on him and put him in prison. And there he stayed under German guard until the end of the war.

He was "our Max" when he came home to Brussels in 1918, a conquering hero, when the Kaiser had fled and the once militant, then broken Germany, had asked and been granted peace.

He was a man who had lived well and behind him is the memory of one who has been an inspiration to lovers of freedom throughout the world.

He was the incarnation of that free spirit which downs tyrants and oppressors.

NOT THE WORST AGE

Those who think this era is the worst of all times, probably think so because they are in the midst of it, but Rev. Dr. Daniel Russell, preaching in New York declared there have been many times when the world outlook has been darker than it is today. It was so just at the time of Jesus; when most of the world was pagan and the Roman Empire was using its mighty power to snuff out the infant church. "It was darker in the century when the Moslem armies were threatening the destruction and when the shadow of Napoleon almost destroyed the liberties of the world." Dr. Russell declared man must never despair of the human race, but be proud of it, for the era might be far worse and its evils are "schoolmasters to bring us to the things that matters most." He said that many a man has found that to enter a church is to pass from a blizzard to a greenhouse, out of the deep snow and the bitter wind to tulips, azaleas, roses and orchids," and that "it is the privilege of believing men to pass at any time from the savage conflicts of life into the fellowship of God, finding grace to help in time of need."

Dr. Russell refers to one of the dark spots in history when Moslem hordes overran northern Africa and swept up through Spain. In those days the outlook for Europe was dark, almost black.

But today man has a vision of better things even if he has the disagreeable issue of war before him, but a necessary task to rid the world of injustices among nations.

Until 1914 many had looked upon the world as fairly well established as a group of nations, but the shock of 1914 was a blow which unsettled many, who could not believe that a nation would start a war as Germany did. Then again even though most people latterly had expected another clash or reopening of that war, the fact remains that many have been so disappointed since war has been shown to be still possible. There is no doubt now that these people who thought the piping times of peace were the only times lived in a fool's paradise, as two wars have shown. But as Dr. Russell has said that should not daunt man, for conditions of today show him the things that are to be overcome.

Today the world has hope in the future. There are the neutral states, which are in sympathy with the Allied cause and these neutrals are having a powerful influence upon the course of events. Despite wars, the world has progressed. The little states which are free, may be faced by grave problems but they exert an influence which proves that the cause for which Britain and France are fighting is gaining ground. In some of the darker ages Dr. Russell mentions or could refer to, there were few stars of hope but yet man survived and prospered.

The other day Major General A.G.L. McNaughton, commander of the First Canadian Division of the Active Service Corps, said at Montreal that Britain, France, Canada and the Dominions, are in better condition than they were in 1914. He expresses "the sad reflection that peaceful pursuits had to be put aside because of the powerful and ever growing threat to the very basis of everything we value in the civilization which has been bequeathed us by our forefathers." But there was no alternative, for "unpleasant, distasteful and wholly undesired, the situation is upon us and no good purpose will be served by bemoaning our fate and seeking to blame those who have moulded the public opinion of the world for their failure to stabilize the safety of democracy.

"Rather with courageous hearts and level eyes we must look facts in the face." He goes on to say, "All is not dark for we can draw deep comfort and inspiration from our own past history and nowhere more so than from the career and accomplishment of the well-beloved leader, to whose memory we give tribute today." He referred to the late Sir Arthur Currie, whose name is associated with the memorial gymnasium-armory at McGill University the cornerstone of which was laid by Ladie Currie, just before General McNaughton spoke.

NEWSPAPERMAN WAS OFFERED THRONE

How an English newspaperman, Viscount Rothermere, was offered the throne of Hungary for writing a newspaper article espousing that country's revisionist claims is recalled in his new book "My Campaign for Hungary."

Last July, however, Lord Rothermere gave up his 12-year campaign and notified the president of the Revisionist League of Hungary he could no longer be associated with its propaganda in view of the newly established relations between Britain and Rumania.

His single newspaper article in June, 1927, had been seized upon by the entire Hungarian nation as evidence that at last they had found a champion to help them redress alleged wrongs of the Treaty of Versailles, after the First Great War.

"My name unknown to 99 per cent of the Hungarian nation until my article appeared," Lord Rothermere writes, "became a household word among them. It was given to streets and squares in Budapest and many other towns. It was carved upon the slopes of mountains. My portrait was hung in public buildings. My bust or picture was in every home, and the peasants referred to me as "The Little Flower of Hungary."

'In 1928 I received from Budapest a 'round robin' signed by 20 highly-placed officers, including three generals, pledging me their support if I would allow my name to be put forward as a candidate for the throne."

A delegation came to London and Eugene Rakoski, distinguished Hungarian playwright, was the spokesman. "I was touched by his ardour. I told him, howevever, that his scheme was thoroughly impracticable."

Rakoski's delegation, unshaken in their quest, went to Italy to enlist Mussolini as king-maker of Rothermere, who reports: "The Duce knitted his brows and reflected briefly, contenting himself with the rejoinder, 'Have you thought over that project thoroughly?' "

In the end it was not a newspaper agitation but something more sinister which restored to Hungary the territory which she had lost to Czecho-Slovakia. But Lord Rothermere's work was not forgotten and he described the delirious welcome he received when he visited the restored areas as Hungary's guest in November, 1938. "Peasants knelt in the mud of the gutter to kiss my hand as I passed," he says.

In advocating the revision of the Treaty of Trianon by which Hungary lost to Czecho-Slovakia, Rumania and Jugoslavia three-fifths of her population and two-thirds of her territory, Lord Rothermere said he was motivated by a desire to remove "this festering sore in the heart of Europe which was a standing menace to peace. It was not so much in the interests of Hungary as in those of Europe as a whole that I favored a policy of reasonable and pacific treaty revision."

Deaf Drivers Are Careful

A significant piece of evidence tending to prove that careful driving will eliminate a big percentage of motor accidents is furnished through the record of deaf drivers, who have to be careful because they cannot obtain liability insurance.

The National Fraternal Society of the Deaf held its quadrennial convention at Toronto and 300 delegates drove their own cars to the gathering. Naturally, the circumstance that they are denied insurance prompted considerable discussion. The deaf take an understandable pride in their driving record. They believe that possibly no other group, among drivers, has made a better showing as regards freedom from accidents. It is reported that of 100,000 accidents in New York last year only one per cent. was credited to persons with physical defects and none had any associations with deafness.

So far, the insurance organizations have chosen to adopt an arbitrary attitude against those with physical defects, ignoring the human consideration that almost invariably the individual, handicapped in some way, sets out to overcome it and thus employs faculties that in the case of those with normal endowments are permitted to lie dormant. That is noticeable in all spheres of human activity. The student who is not brilliant usually does more painstaking work than his clever colleague and makes a surer job of obtaining an education, even though he may not be able to pass academic examinations as easily as his talented confrere. There are many cases on record where a disfiguring physical defect has been the foundation for the building of a successful career. The persons so handicapped have realized that they must apply themselves more conscientiously in order to do those things that are easily accomplished by others. The result is that they acquire special training and discipline that puts them to the front.

In the case of deaf drivers, they probably take precautions that those in possession of all their faculties disregard. In the matter of driving motor vehicles, unremitting caution is much more effective in preventing accidents than genius that is not fully controlled by realized responsibility. — Woodstock Sentinel Review.

Compulsory Inspection Of Motor Vehicles

The State of Maryland has a law which makes compulsory an annual inspection of motor vehicles. Between November 1 and December 15 in each year every motor vehicle in the state must report at any one of a thousand accredited testing agencies for a check-up. If it is found in unsafe driving condition the faults must be remedied before the car is decorated with the sticker which means that for one day at least it can pass a rigid mechanical inspection.

We can think of many points in favor of this procedure, and no good reason against it. There are ramshackle cars of ancient vintage on the Ontario roads which are a menace not only to their drivers but to everybody else, and this is especially the case since licenses can be had for as little as $2. A compulsory inspection no doubt would weed out many of the more dangerous vehicles, or at least compel their owners to make necessary repairs, and that would be something for the public safety. It is true this policy adds to the cost of driving, but it should not be anybody's right to drive a car that endangers human life.

The thing we need to bear in mind is that driving really is not a right but a privilege. The streets and roads are for the use of all the people, but only under conditions which have regard for the common safety and convenience. The unsafe and uninsured car—more often than not the two go together—has no rights on the road and should not have any privileges.—Ottawa Journal.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Sweeping the Lining of The Stomach and Intestines

A patient consults his physician complaining of indigestion, pain immediately after eating, and sometimes three hours after eating, baking soda and other alkalis do not relieve the pain, sometimes the stomach bloats and sometimes the abdomen. In order to help find the cause of the trouble the physician has him undergo an Xray examination after taking some barium sulphate. The X-ray specialist sends a report in about a week's time stating that the stomach and intestines are normal—no disease present, no delay in the passing of the barium sulphate through stomach and intestines. It is likely that in most cases the busy physician forgets about the patient, the reason being that the patient has made no further visits.

What has happened? The barium sulphate—a clay-like substance— in passing through stomach and intestine has swept their lining clear of any irritating or obstructive material and thus relieved the patient of his symptoms.

Some idea of how barium sulphate can sweep out the stomach and bowel can be gathered from an incident reported by Dr. Henry G. Hadley, Washington, D.C., in Medical World.

"Charles B., aged three, was first seen on September 3, 1917, after having swallowed his mother's wrist watch. Fluoroscopic (Xray) examination showed the watch in the stomach. He returned September 7, (4 days later) with the position of the watch remaining the same. To locate the position more exactly, a heavy suspension of barium sulphate was given in buttermilk. The watch was noted to be in the lowest part of the stomach. After the watch was surrounded entirely by the mass of barium it apparently passed through the opening of the stomach to the small intestine more easily, and the watch was passed out of the body in 18 hours after the barium was given."

The point is that an object which will not pass out of the stomach readily may be "picked up" by this heavy clay and readily moved downward and out of the body.

For many individuals with diarrhoea or constipation or with mucous and wastes sticking to lining of the bowel, the use of barium sulphate might prove helpful. It should be asked for by its proper name—barium sulphate—from your druggist or the Xray department of your nearest hospital (sulphate not sulphite).

Time as an Asset

Time has many definitions and in turn has meant many things. Now it is assuming a new role. It has joined the Allies—ranged itself on the side of la belle France and the British Empire. It has become the friend of countries which, given their will, would remain in the neutral class. It is the enemy of those whose resources must dwindle, without proper replenishment, as day gives place to day.

Given a chance of accomplishing this work for which it is so fitted, Time will teach the forces guarding the Siegfried Line how to appraise their government at its true worth. In a short interlude they can learn its lack of reliability, and the fallacies upon which it rests, discover its peace pretences and the reservations behind its promises.

Non-combatants in the land where the Fuehrer misrules have already found out that propaganda does not increase the food supply, and that ration cards which fail to produce the necessities of life are poor substitutes for a peace destroyed by one man's mad ambition. A little longer sad experience of a world run Fuehrer-fashion and the country that produced its Goethe, its Bach, its Beethoven—to mention but a few of its famous—may cease to be satisfied with such substitutes as its Goerings, its Goebbels, its imported Hitler and the like.

Even now there are indications that the old German spirit may rouse from its long sleep. Some one once said that "all the time anyone has is just as much as he uses". The fate of the world may not hang upon the action of disgruntled peoples of Germany, Austria, Poland and Czecho-Slovakia, but their own place in civilization does—and not only that but the fate of their descendants for long years to come. Rumors persist that they are seeking ways to protect themselves, while Hitler plays King Canute to the rising sea of Communism that threatens mid-Europe. — Ottawa Journal.

Armed Might

Now that the Allies have the United States factories to draw upon for additional supplies of aeroplanes and other military equipment, they have established an ever-increasing superiority over the Reich in this vitally important respect. The part which mechanization plays in achieving victory was graphically exemplified in the case of gallant Poland, whose brave and efficient armies found themselves unable to withstand the onward thrust of deadly modern instruments of war. It was the triumph of up-to-the-minute aircraft, guns, tanks, etc., against earlier types, which were outmoded and outclassed and soon succumbed in the gruelling test.

The fact that the Allies have been under the necessity of hastily making up for armament deficiencies has had this advantage—it has provided the British and French armies with the very latest resources of military science and ingenuity. The Germans prepared earlier, but much of the equipment they have accumulated at such heavy economic cost is now more or less obsolete, and will not be able to hold its own when matched against new and impoved devices.

The orders to be filled in the United States to Allied specifications will be the last word in efficiency. With regard to manpower, the Empire has the benefit of fighting for high ideals—no less than one survival of human liberty and progress—not from compulsion, but from voluntary choice. Whereas the Nazis have called to the colors practically all available categories, Britain and the dominions are in a position to bring many millions of eager young men into the field. Should the worst happen, and Russia decide, for motives of self-interest, to assist her non-aggression partner with armed forces, the breaking down of her guns and tanks during the invasion of Poland is sufficient proof that they are not all they should be.

As for the reliance of Germany on Russian technical assistance, it is generally agreed that the difficulties in the way of speeding up production under Soviet administration and of getting supplies from Russia into the Reich, because of serious transportation problems, are not lightly to be overcome. In a word, Hitler, even if he were able to count on Stalin's co-operation in arms, would still be in a position of definite inferiority as compared with the Allies under the conditions now prevailing.—Hamilton Spectator.

KING OF BELGIUM

May Be Given Time.

If the offer is not rejected outright, government circles said, it might be possible to make careful contacts with the belligerents and thus give them further time to express their views.

(Dispatches from London said that Great Britain would give the proposal careful consideration, but the general attitude was not optimistic. In Paris it was believed the appeal had little chance for success.

(In Berlin ,the authoritative commentary, Dienst Aus Deutschland, said the offer would be "weighed with all the seriousness it deserves.")

Take Active Hand.

Although initiative for advancing the mediation proposals was credited to King Leopold, informed quarters said Queen Wilhelmina could be expected to take an active hand in any diplomatic negotiations that might be conducted.

The offer was the second made by the King and Queen. On Aug. 29, three days before Germany invaded Poland, the sovereigns fruitlessly proffered their good offices to mediate.

Some sources intimated the present proposal was prompted by belief that Germany was about to gamble on an attack against the Maginot Line.

Portable Bridges.

Unconfirmed reports the Germans had moved up portable bridges to span waterways in the Netherlands and Belgium's Albert Canal also were believed in some quarters to have prompted Leopold's hurried visit to The Hague Monday night.

Dispatches from Amsterdam, meanwhile, reported heavy firing had been heard there yesterday as Netherlands anti-aircraft guns attempted to bring down unidentified planes flying toward the north.

Offer Studied by Hitler

Berlin, Nov. 8—(AP)—Adolf Hitler studied today the offer of King Leopold of the Belgians and Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands to mediate the war between Germany and Great Britain and France.

More Activity

On the war front, meanwhile, the German High Command noted a slight increase in activity. A communique said there had been "somewhat livelier artillery and patrol action at several points in the west."

The same communique, summing up aerial warfare during the first week in November, claimed nine enemy planes had been shot down and admitted German losses of only five planes.

(Unofficial French reports said that 13 French planes had engaged 43 German aircraft in three different encounters Monday, bringing down 12 or 13 Nazi ships without loss to themselves. Downing of nine German planes had been announced officially).

The Fuehrer, in Munich for participation in the annual commemoration of the Nazi beer cellar Putsch, gave no hint how he felt about the peace gesture.

The offer nevertheless was a sensation in government offices. Surprise was apparent that it should be made at this time, with the war already more than two months old.

The authoritative commentary, Dienst Aus Deuthc Land said, "It will be weighted with all the seriousness it deserves."

The average German citizen, relying on the daily press, was largely unaware of the proposal. Indicating an apparent lack of instructions, three morning papers printed yesterday's communique from The Hague inconspiciously and without comment, while the remaining two carried nothing at all.

Attacks End Abruptly

Newspaper attacks on the little neutrals for not energetically protesting the British blockade's effect on their shipping ceased today as abruptly as they started yesterday.

Evidently it was decided to halt such agitation until Hitler had considered the nuetral proposal.

He had expressed "welcome" of a similar offer made by Belgium and the Netherlands three days before the invasion of Poland Sept. 1.

The press paid scanty attention to yesterday's discussion of war aims by Viscount Halifax, the British Foreign Minister.

The news service DNB described the charges about German brute force and failure to keep promises as "threadbare."

Much space was given to Soviet Russia's celebration of the revolution's 22nd anniversary.

Meanwhile, Hans Frank, minister without portfolio, arrived in Krakow and assumed his new duties as governor of the occupied Polish territory.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

MUCH energy and initiative, with things moving into creative lines under high tempo, are read from favorable astral influences. It is probable that new matters will engage the attention, despite certain impeding or delaying elements, possibly a depressed mental state or a physical handicap. Employers, superiors and important organizations, diplomatic, political or fraternal bodies, may be sought for active support. It is a time for working toward high goals of accomplishment.

Those whose birthday it is may find their energies and spirit of initiative under high pressure for launching new projects of importance in spite of moments of physical depression or morbid mental slants. Or timid elders may offer opposition. But superiors, employers or those in political, fraternal or other influential places may abet constructive plans. Generally auspicious conditions await aggressive action.

A child born on this day may be energetic, enterprising, forceful and constructive, although it may have moments of discouragement due to physical handicaps or temporary mental morbidity. Its health should be safeguarded.

HOLD CONFERENCE AT THE HAGUE

Paying a hurried visit to The Hague, King Leopold of the Belgians conferred with Queen Wilhelmina and the Dutch foreign minister "to discuss some aspects of the international situation." Observers pointed out that the unexpected visit of the Belgian king followed closely persistent reports that Belgium had been asked by Germany to define her position should The Netherlands be invaded. Following the conference it was announced a peace plea would be sent to Germany, France and England. King Leopold and Queen Wilhelmina are shown here when The Netherlands' ruler visited Brussels last spring.

THE RUNAWAY

by

Kathleen Norris

She heard her mother's unchanged voice, "Well, for the land sakes, Becky!" and the excited shouting of the small brothers. She was somehow gotten into the warm kitchen among them all, and the happy, breathless questions and answers were flying about, the boys' entirely unconsciousness of restraint covering what might have been awkward moments of embarrassment and explanation.

Becky thought at first that all that was over, that dreaded moment of adjusting present to past. But she found that as the hours went by it was not so. There was a gap, and all her mother's generosity and all her tacit apology could not quite bridge it. She was changed; they were all changed; life could not go back.

But the bliss that it was to be home again showed in every expression of her older fact, sounded in every word she said, and they forgave her, without ever knowing or thinking, that they must forgive her, because she was Becky and because she brought back to them something that was of priceless value in their lives.

Her appearance immediately betrayed her condition. A baby was welcome to Sarah under any conditions. Her father shook his head, lovingly, doubtfully.

"Little old Becky, eh? Well, well, well."

"Now tell me everything and anything," Sarah said seriously when Becky had had a night of delicious restful sleep, and when the two women were busy in the kitchen with breakfast dishes.

Becky felt a second's interior panic. But she had known this talk must come. Well, Gavin was a dear, of course, but he did jump from one thing to another, hated to settle down. He'd had a perfectly good job last year, but he was so lazy that he was always late, and in the radio business you simply couldn't be late. What exactly had he been doing? He'd been doing studio photography. He was really an expert on cameras, in his crazy way. Becky tried to make it all casual and laughing.

"Gavin's thirty-three, Mother, and he's simply not used to making allowances for a woman. Not in any way. Her comfort and her expenses and her feelings!"

"Selfish," Sarah observed thoughtfully, looking up over her grater. "How about money?"

"Well, Mother, if he had it! Or if he was lucky with cards or dice. "It didn't sound very satisfactory. Becky knew Salletts' simple countrified attitude toward gambling.

"When do you go back to him, Beck?"

For some reason the quiet question struck her cold, and Becky looked startled as she said, "Well, I thought after the baby comes.,"

Sarah shook a wise head, and Becky felt her happiness shrivel within her. "That's too long to leave a man, dear, now in the beginning, when you're hardly settled even into being married yet. No; we'll keep you here a week or ten days, Beck, and then you join him again, and I'll come down to you in February."

Becky sat puzzled, hurt beyond words, her cheeks red.

"A man like that," Sarah was quietly, almost sorrowfully resuming, "has got to have marriage built about him, Beck. I don't know whether that's the way to say it exactly. But if he's anything of what you called him to dad last night, he wants an anchor. A rolling stone needs a wife and child. You say he wasn't especially glad about this baby coming — poor little tyke! That's another reason why you ought to be with him all these weeks, let him see what it means to a woman. He'll not have any feeling for it or for you either if you stay here four months—"

"February isn't four months, Mother!" Becky said in a proud quick voice.

"No, but it'll be another six weeks, it'll be April before you and the baby are fit to move. It's a job, getting a small baby started—food and hours all have to be worked out. You'd want to stay right here near Doctor Pringle for that. No, Beck, you'll have to go down to Gavin next week, and get some sort of a home started...." Sarah left the sentence unfinished. She sighed heavily.

Becky sat silent, staring into space, a frown knitting her forehead. "I'll go down to him as soon as I know where he is," she finally said in a hard, resentful voice.

"Believe me," Sarah said, "it's the only thing to do."

It was a new tone from her. It was the tone of a woman speaking to another woman, not the motherly, protecting voice Becky had always known.

"I'll go as soon as he writes me" Becky said. "And sends money", she thought.

But the days went by and were weeks, and Christmas came, and the new year, and he did not write.

INSTALMENT 12

Becky came back from the hospital with her baby, a boy with a mop of black hair, on a bright February day. And for a few lazy comfortable days she was content.

"Mother, we'll have to find Gavin, Gibbs and I, and go to him", she said one day seriously, and with a little effort.

Sarah looked at her gravely, made no denial.

They had moved the baby, dainty and sweet and fed, pink-blanketed in the bottom of a wash basket, out into warm spring sunshine. Now the two women were sitting near him for a moment, in the old side-porch chairs, glad of an interval of breathing and resting.

It was almost eleven o'clock. Since Gibb's first little awakening whimper at five minutes of six, Becky, who had slept even before that but lightly, had been flying from one thing to another without an instant's respite, although Sarah had an assistant now, a morose big peasant girl from some Balkan country, who worked with something like three horsepower. Sophy had a child, too, a pale shy little creature called Anya; her one interest in life that had treated her hardly. She was hence expert in handling Gibbs and often helped Becky with the endless ironing or with folding the baby's clothes. But Becky was usually so tired at eight o'clock that she went blindly upstairs to bed, setting her alarm for Gibb's ten o'clock meal, and hardly awake while she gave it to him.

For with all his demands the household demands went on steadily too; bedmaking and dishwashing for a family that now numbered ten, cutting of bread and setting of tables, pickin, up detective magazines in the boys' rooms, keeping them at their homework, clearing up after them when they polished their shoes or took their baths.

And all the time Becky must endure the nagging humiliations of Gavin's treatment. No letter, no money, not even a dollar to tip Sophy, who so obviously expected it, or to indulge Gibbs in the little white coat at McGee's Linen Shoppe. Nothing for her but heartsick wondering and lame explanations to her own people, and what face of courage and confidence she could present to the world.

So on this particular sweet warm morning, when she said seriously that she and Gibbs must go to join Gavin, Sarah, who understood all these things, made no protest. She only gave one quick glance at the baby and faintly nodded, her face very grave.

"I'll miss him so, Beck."

"Ah-h-h!" The long-drawn syllable was like a sob. Becky had been longing, only a short two years ago, to get away from home. Now it seemed to her a very haven from the cold winds of the world, a place filled with peace and love, roofed with blue skies and apple blossoms, where Gibsy could grow safe and strong....

"If I don't go now, I never will" she said. "And then what?"

"But you don't know where he is, Beck?"

"I've thought of a way to find out. I almost hoped it wouldn't work," Becky confessed, ashamed, "but it's going to. Ned McSwayne, the San Jose man Gavin was with when he first came up here, was up here to see Mollie White on Friday. I met him when I took Spin to the dentist. Apparently he thinks everything's...." Her throat closed on a dry bitterness. "Everything's fine between Gavin and me", she began again. "He asked about Gavin, said that he was baching it with a man named Cotton, down there in Hollywood, a movie photographer, I think he said. He said he'd send me the address; it probably wasn't in the telephone book. So I wrote Gavin." Her voice stopped on a level note. She looked away into space.

Sarah was silent for a while, troubled. "Beck, I hate to talk this. Don't think I'm curious," she presently said. "But you—you don't hate Gavin?"

"No, I don't hate Gavin," Becky answered, not moving, speaking in a lifeless voice.

"It's just that I can't depend on him, Mother. I never know what his mood will be, what his job will be, how much money I'll need and how much I'll get. No," Becky said, still looking away, and now with a sudden flush on her face, "I—he could so easily make me love him again. He can be fascinating. I know he's smart; if he'd only just—just apply it to something. Everyone likes him. That is," she amended it with a reluctant little laugh, "everyone he wants to make like him does like him. But I'm never comfortable with Gavin! I think perhaps —I think perhaps I love him," Becky went on uncertainly, speaking as if she were in pain and with a frowning brow, "I love him without liking him. When he loves me, when he needs me, everything goes right somehow. I despise myself for it," she finished, "but he can —can tease me into loving him, can win me back to him by just putting his arms around me. I go —all soft and—and kind. I want him to love me. That's what makes me feel I'm such a fool!"

"But that's the way it ought to be, when you're married, Beck."

"Yes, I know. But not with all the other things wrong."

Sarah sat pondering this, her own forehead lined.

"Yet I'd hate to talk divorce, Beck," she said finally. "A girl your age, with this beautiful child."

"I'm not thinking about divorce," Becky answered grimly. "I'm thinking of failure. I've made a failure. I suppose it always takes two to make a failure in marriage, and I'm one. But how—how? What did I do or what didn't I do that made him want to marry me and be so wonderful during that week here, and then let me down this way?"

"Well, you just married a man who—who hasn't acted up to his promises, Beck."

Becky's thoughts were adrift. She spoke somberly. "I saw Joe Feratta yesterday."

"Back in town, is he? He's been in Sacramento since Christmas."

"Yes, I know. He asked so pleasantly for Gibbs, and was so nice."

"Not any feeling—I mean love for Joe left?" Sarah asked in a new anxiety.

"I never did love Joe, Mother. It just isn't there. I see Joe just as he is, a big, fine, clean, nice man with all the good points of the Irish and the Italians combined, clever and successful and rising in his profession, and I wish that everything Joe has could stir in me just one tenth of the feeling that Gavin used to manage with one look or the lazy way he used to say one word!"

"D'you think Joe's still in love with you?"

Becky answered hesitatingly, reluctantly.

"Yesterday I would have said no, Mother, because when I met him at Christmastime, that week that he was home, he seemed just like —just like anyone else. And I was glad. Lucy said something about a girl he liked in Sacramento, and I was really glad. But yesterday there wasn't any question about it. He—of course one knows. His voice was shaky and he—well, I knew. He asked me to go and have a soda at Luchein's, and I said no, I had to be back for Gibbs' bath at half-past five, and he asked to bring me home. But I said I had the car and was picking dad up, and he walked with me to the car and asked me if some night, 'before Gavin came for us,' I'd go to the movie with him."

"Joe Peratta asked you that!" Sarah said, shocked.

"Yes. He was—was all shaken up. It made me ashamed." Becky dismissed it with an impatient jerk of her head.

"His folks would die if he went out with a divorced woman," Sarah said ruminatingly.

"There's that to think of too. I don't fit here any more; it's just eternal food for gossips!"

"But, Beck, you haven't the faintest idea what you're going to do!"

"I know. But just the same, if Gavin's working...."

Both women turned. A man, well dressed and groomed, with a light overcoat folded and belted about a slender figure, had come in from the front garden.

"Hello, Becky!" he said cheerfully.

"Gavin!" Becky said faintly. She got up and he put his arm about her and kissed her.

ACCIDENTAL

Definite Mastery

"What I told the House under much reserve six weeks ago I can now repeat with more assurance—namely that we are gaining a definite mastery over the U-boat attack," said the First Lord.

Mr. Churchill estimated Germany could produce two new submarines weekly and added "at any rate our expectation is that we must face 100 U-boats in January, less whatever sinkings have occurred.

Dealing with the additional menace of the surface raider, Mr. Churchill said "it is certain that one, and possibly two, of the so-called pocket battleships has been out upon the Atlantic trade routes during the last six weeks."

Valuable Prize Taken

The First Lord said one of the most valuable of recent prizes captured from the enemy was taken by the aircraft carrier Ark Royal which the German wireless had "sunk so many times."

The loss of the battleship Royal Oak at Scapa Flow, he said, occurred because the defences there were still incomplete.

In a similar statement Lord Chatfield, Minister for Defence co-ordination, told the Upper House patrolling craft were reduced below what was necessary.

Surface Raiding Minimized.

Minimizing the successes of surface raiders so far, Mr. Churchill said "only two ships aggregating 10,000 tons have been sunk so far by surface action compared to 212,000 tons by U-boats.

"When we remember how seriously the outbreak of these raiders was viewed before the war began, it is a matter of some reassurance that they have been at large for some considerable time without any appreciable damage or inconvenience to our trade."

He warned, however, that the "element of risk is never absent from us or indeed from the enemy," and summed up by saying "up to the present not only has the U-boat campaign been controlled but also the attack by surface raiders, both by warships or armed merchantmen, has not developed in any serious way."

More than 10,000,000 tons of cargo were landed in Britain the first eight weeks of the war at a loss of less than 250,000 tons, the First Lord said.

Tribute Paid France.

Paying tribute to France's assistance, Mr. Churchill said "it seems to me a wonderful thing that when France is making so great an effort upon land, she should at the same time offer to the allied cause so powerful a reinforcement upon the sea."

"We shall suffer, and we shall suffer continually, but by perseverance and by taking measures on the largest scale I feel no doubt that in the end we shall break their (the enemy's) hearts."

Mr. Churchill said the Royal Navy had "suffered a greater loss of life than all the other forces, French and British, on sea, on land and in the air combined" and added "the war at sea has in fact been the only war which has been proceeding on a full scale."

Churchill Congratulated.

A. V. Alexander, Labor, a former First Lord of the Admiralty, congratulated Mr. Churchill on the frankness of his report and said that "while we regret the loss of the Courageous, the Royal Oak and the submarine reported today, they are very much less losses than we suffered in the first nine weeks of the last major conflict."

The Oxley was the first submarine loss of the British navy since the war began. Built in 1926 for the Australian navy, she was transferred to the Royal Navy in 1931 by Australia as an economy measure.

WEDDINGS

WICKENS—THOMPSON

A quiet wedding took place Wednesday, November 1st., at 4.30 p.m. at the Ivanhoe United Church parsonage of Agnes Eileen Thompson, youngest daughter, of Mr. and Mrs. Milford Thompson of the Ninth Concession of Huntingdon and Charles Wesley Wickens, eldest son of Mrs. Edith Wickens and the late Wm. Wickens of Ivanhoe. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. S. Delve of Ivanhoe. They were attended by John Wickens of Ivanhoe and Miss Thelma Storrings of Madoc. The young couple will reside at Ivanhoe.

MULLETT—KELLAR

Madoc, (Special)—A pretty afternoon wedding was solemnized Saturday at Bethesda United Church, White Lake, when Ila Eileen, older daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Kellar was united in marriage to Carman Clothier, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Mullett of Crookston.

The church was decorated with blue and white streamers and potted flowers.

Rev. Samuel Delve, pastor of Bethesda, performed the ceremony. Mrs. Wm. Delve, sister-in-law of the pastor played the wedding music and during the signing of the register Stanley Hawthorne of Madoc, sang "I Love You Truly".

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a Princess gown of Ivory taffeta with short puff sleeves. Her double veil of French tulle, which was fastened with a wreath of orange blossoms, fell gracefully over the full fan-shaped gown. Her bouquet was composed of pink roses, mauve chrysanthemums and fern.

Miss Verna Sherry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stan Sherry of Foxboro, and who is a cousin of the groom, was the bride's maid of honor; wearing a gown of turquoise blue and carrying a bouquet of pink roses, orange mums and fern.

Mr. James Keller, brother of the bride was groomsman. The ushers were Mr. Ernest Holland and Mr. Everett Cassidy.

One hundred and seventy guests were received in the basement of the church, after the ceremony, by the bride and groom, the bride's mother and the groom's mother. A dainty buffet lunch was served by the bride's sister, assisted by Miss Lenore Bird, Miss Ethel Wickens, Mrs. Wilfred Phillips and Mrs. Percy Keller. After the luncheon the cake was cut by the bride.

The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful silver tea service.

Mr. and Mrs. Mullett left immediately after the reception for New York City, via the Thousand Islands bridge and will return in two weeks by Niagara Falls.

For going away the bride wore a dress of mauve chiffon, a grey coat with matching accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

On their return the couple will reside in Crookston.

LOWRY—MURRAY

Dr. Dafoe's Column on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Call a Doctor When Baby Inserts Something in His Ear

It isn't only from babies' stomachs that we doctors are called to remove foreign bodies. As children grow older, they turn from thrusting objects into their mouths to tucking them elsewhere in the body.

For instance it is a common thing for a child of from two to four years to thrust something like a stone, a pea or a bead into its nose. Usually what is shoved into the nose is a hard object, and the mother is usually informed right smartly that something is wrong because the child will be acutely uncomfortable as attempts to dislodge the object only push it farther and farther into the nose.

When the mother finds this situation, she should encourage the child to see if he cannot blow the object out. But this must be done carefully for if he blows too hard or keeps at it too long, he may injure his ear. However, if the mother tries to get the child to dislodge the object in this way and it doesn't work, she must not under any circumstances go after it herself. The child should be taken to a doctor at once, for he will have instruments with which he can remove the offending object without fear of injury to the tissue.

Usually one painful experience like this will be enough to teach a child a lesson. But I have had children in my care who did the same thing again and again. The big trouble I found was that parents wouldn't bring the child to me until all the family had taken a crack at removing it. The object had been in the nose for some hours, irritation had set in and removing the object then was no cinch.

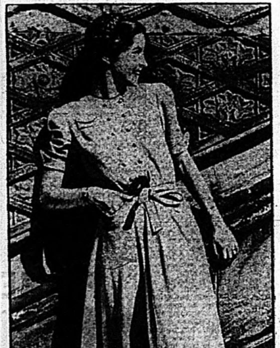
The ear is another spot where children sometimes put foreign bodies. I will say, however, that this is usually accidental. In most cases you find that the object was placed there by a playmate.

When this happens it is even more serious than when the nose is involved. It must be treated with extra care because a scant three-quarters of an inch down that tube in the ear is the delicate eardrum. This can be injured very easily by a foreign body so the mother must not under any circumstances try to insert anything into the ear to remove the object. This is a job for a doctor.

If a doctor isn't immediately available, it is sometimes a good idea to try to float the body out. Even this must be done with care. The best thing is to heat some water to body temperature and drop it into the ear. I say "drop" because it should be done with a medicine dropper, not a powerful syringe, for ears have been damaged by water being forced into them by an inexperienced hand. As I say, even this "floating" of the object should not be undertaken unless a doctor isn't available, for here again special instruments will remove the offending matter without danger to the ear drum.

This removal of things from the ear is a common thing to the general country practitioner, and the list of things I have removed would be a long one. Sometimes it was a stone, sometimes a bean or a pea. The trouble with these latter bodies is that they swell after they get in the ear and often cause a lot of pain.

School Favorite



By Alice Alden

The new look to this casual woolen dress is military, something a school girl adores. She'll like the fabric, too, which is non-scratchy, and the simple style with swing skirt. Best of all, it's a dress to take any accessories, including angora mittens, charm bracelets and chrysanthemums. Colors include grey, slate blue, gold, wine and brown, and, of course, there's black. Any one of these shades is a natural for a plaid reefer or, for that matter, one of those new sheepskin reefers flaring from a fitted waist.

Football Tables Lend Themselves To Festive Decoration

From coast to coast the football season is upon us. And that means hostesses will be planning to set luncheon tables before the game, or dinner or buffet supper tables after it.

It is festive to express, in the decoration of the table, the spirit of the game. And it is appropriate to feature, in the table covering, the colors of the host's school or college. You can buy linen or cotton or a novelty material by the yard and use the colors in the table-covering.

Autumn leaves, brilliant in color and glossy in surface, have become a classic as a base for the centrepiece. And very often the centrepiece is made of Autumn's own flower, glowing chrysanthemums large or small, or pert callendula or dahlias in an appropriate color.

You can make a simple centre decoration by putting a football on a base of autumn leaves, and scatter various kinds of nuts in their shells among the leaves. Instead of the football, you can use the college mascot in miniature (obtainable in most toy departments).

The most dramatic football luncheon table centrepiece—and it would be just as suitable for a buffet table—I've ever seen had a head-and-shoulder guard of a football player, raised, by means of an inverted bowl, above the base of autumn leaves. A football, put in the space intended for the head, gave a whimsical appearance! The host had made goal posts about a foot high, attached them to blocks of wood, painted them white, and these were placed on either side of the centrepiece, between the centrepiece and the ends of the table. Several football-player favors (you can buy these at this season in novelty shops, in toy departments, and often in candy stores) were placed "on the field", and one of these was used as a favor at each place. The pottery plates harmonized with the color of the linen table-cloth, and the glasses were decorated with the college colors.

For a dinner or supper buffet table, you can effectively feature the color of the school or college in the color of the candles . . . tall candles in inconspicuous, low, white glass or pottery candle-holders.

35th Anniversary

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

I would like some advice and information regarding a party for my parents to celebrate their thirty-fifth wedding, anniversary.

1—What kind of anniversary is the thirty-fifth?

2—What should I give my parents?

3—I would like to have the party a surprise. How could I arrange this?

4—What should I serve? I would like to serve a cold supper.

5—What kind of flowers should I have around the room in vases?

J.

1—The symbol for the thirty-fifth wedding anniversary is— and I'm afraid it won't help you very much —coral! I'm sure you'll agree with my suggestion that you more or less disregard this difficult symbol.

2—Since it would be pretty pointless for you to limit your gift to coral, give your parents something that will make them both happy, that both will enjoy. Anything for their home would be appropriate.

3—Since yours is to be an evening party, you could probably connive with some relatives or close friends of the family to invite your parents to dinner. Then the minute you are sure they have left their home, you and your "cooperating committee" could take possession and have things in readiness when they return, at the pre-arranged hour.

4—Undoubtedly the easiest chief member of your cold supper would be a combination of cold cuts . . . turkey or chicken, ham, lambs, tongue, veal loaf, and so forth. With potato salad or Waldorf salad or vegetable salad or mixed green salad. Relishes. A choice of cheeses, small finger rolls or small biscuits (these should be split, buttered, and thoroughly heated). Or you might have small simple sandwiches, made of various kinds of bread.

Usually, at a wedding anniversary party, there is the bride's cake a white cake covered with white frosting. This alone might be the dessert, or, of it is convenient to your plans, you might serve ice cream with the cake, for dessert. And, of course, you must serve hot coffee with any alternative you wish.

5—You can use Talisman roses for your floral decorations, and I suggest these for they are of a shade nearly approaching coral. There are coral-colored African daisies that are very effective as decorations. And, at this season of the year, glorious chrysanthemums!

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Wives Object to Husband's Dole

A few days ago, this column published the findings of Dr. Burgess of Chicago, who had interviewed 526 married couples, and found that the happiest marriages were those where the husbands and wives handled the family finances jointly.

This has evoked a swarm of letters from wives who confide that they object to "the dole" as handed out by their husbands. Some of these ladies are pretty clever at arithmetic and say by their careful economies they run their households comfortably on a minimum. Yet their thrift is never rewarded.

Many of them confide they are happy, love their husbands dearly, but they insist they'd be a lot happier if they didn't "have to beg for every penny". An appreciative wife who'd like a different financial arrangement ,writes as follows:

"Dear Miss Fairfax·

"As I read your column daily and enjoy your answers to problems, I have decided to venture a question of my own, which has been on my mind for sometime. My husband has very high ideals. I know he'd never be unfaithful, but in our married life of more than ten years he has made it clear to me that he would always handle our finances.

"We've never had a joint bank account. He allows me about $1.75 per day on which to pay all bills. It has to last or I do without. When I positively need clothes he gives me $5 or $10. It makes me think of throwing a dog a bone.

"If I were extravagant, I could understand this, but I know I'm a good manager. There have been times, if he had taken my advice in matters of business, he would have made money. I hate to make such an issue about money. But there is a principal involved, and it's humiliating for a woman never to be able to count on a cent.

"I think half of the money my husband earns (after all our bills are paid) should be mine. Or at least, I could feel free to write a check in case of an emergency. I can't help it, but it does make a difference in the way I feel toward him. Apart from this I would not want a better husband, but the idea of a dole is humiliating to me.

. A Wife".

This is among the mildest of the letters which have come to me concerning the wifely dole. Some of them are too violent to print. The wives do a war dance over money spent for liquor, tobacco, expensive lunches, to which a girl friend is often bidden, and unnecessary haberdashery for the he-man.

The ladies describe themselves as walking blocks to save three cents on a head of lettuce, never being able to enjoy a chicken or a steak dinner, and seldom a new hat for that matter. The husband has his steak and chicken meals downtown at expensive restaurants, while mother and the children dine on the cheapest of cuts at home.

If this should meet the eye of any of these dole-giving husbands let me beg of them to take the elastic off the roll in the interests of the little woman at home. If she were not doing her best for you and the children in the way of heroic economies, please remember that her services as housekeeper or mother's helper have a distinct market value. And if it were not for the children she might decide to change her job.

PLAINFIELD W.M.S.

Mrs. Denyes, group leader, then took charge and gave a chapter of the Study Book, assisted by ten of the members. A solo by Mrs. Bernice Moore was much enjoyed by all. Mrs. Clarence Hall read the story of Vision and Achievement of the late Miss Minnie Shipley, China.

Mrs. Willie Sills gave a full report of the Stewardship Conference held in Bridge St. Church.

Meeting was closed with the Mizpah Benediction. Attendance 25.

Fashion Flashes

NEW ALLIANCES are noted in the fashion world, such as wool with lace. A smart daytime dress with pleated bands at the waist is black wool and it has a wide gilet of white lace.

A return to old-time elegance and luxury is noted in many models. For instance, a new coat of crepey black wool has loose front panels bordered with huge bands of silver fox. The panels can be worn under the coat belt, draped across the shoulders or left flying loose.

Color plays a big role this season. Dark hues are complemented by light shades and vice versa. For wear with dark browns and greens, one house shows an enormous muff and high toque both of fox dyed in medium beige. Lovely with a brown velvet coat.

The pace quickens as the season gets under way. Dinner suits are liked for all but formal occasions. A charming ensemble is of black eyelet embroidered velvet, worn with a jacket that has a collar and two front bands of silver fox.

Follow up rich color with a stone to match. With a bright sapphire blue velvet draped turban, one beads. A smilar idea in greenor woman wear on her frock a necklace of matching sapphire blue ruby red is striking.

Smart simplicity marks many evening frocks. Black and silver striped taffeta is used to make a simple frock on slim lines with a large bustle bow in back.

Fashion flash[illegible]

You just must have a slim figure for so many of the new models. For instance, one house shows an evening frock fashioned of elastic bands of black velvet that swathe the figure, except for one shoulder. Bands are asymmetric.

Set off your new outfit with a smart bag. A luxurious model is of black reindeer with a wide black enamel frame set with cabochon cut stones in jewel colors.

A good friend to the wardrobe is a jacket of black wool with a smooth, silky surface appliqued all-over with black silk braid in a flower and scroll design.

New ideas for fur trimming on coats and suits abound. A smooth black woollen coat has bands of mink forming flower motifs on either side of the bodice. These continue down the coat in the form of bands.

Something new in the hat world, is a brown felt Homburg with sable-dyed kolinsky lining the sharply upturned brim on one side.

Smart ensembles abound just now. A grand daytime outfit is a slim frock of black crepey wool worn with a rust wool jacket. The jacket has riding coat lines, hiplength, with high, very wide revers edged with black astrakan.

QUATERNION Y.P.U.

The Quaternion Y.P.U. met in Tabernacle United Church last night with 50 young people present. Miss M. Bonter presided and Miss H. Brown was Secretary. After business Mr. Don Alexander assisted by Miss Betty Redfern conducted thme devotional exercises. Miss Daniels, convener of the Missionary Committee then took charge and presented "Moving Millions" with 39 beautiful slides, which everyone enjoyed. Miss Daniels has a very good voice and every word was heard by all. Mr. Jack Baxter followed with two fine violin solos, accompanied by Miss Edna McConnell at the piano.

Miss H. Thompson had charge of the games in her usual efficient manner after which the meeting closed in the usual way. An unusual feature of the program this fall is the study of doctrine, led by Prof. Shaw of Kingston. Next Monday night Prof. Shaw will speak on "God". Other Y.P.U. in the community are invited.

THE PRESBYTERIAN Y.P.S.

On Monday evening the Presbyterian Young People met in the Sunday School room of St. Andrews Church for their usual weekly meeting.

The meeting was opened by singing "Jesus Loves Even Me". Rev. Mr. Walker led in prayer. The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted. This was followed by a business discussion. Ruth McLaren being elected press secretary.

Mr. Robert Aman then took charge of the programme. The speaker for the evening, Rev. Mr. Walker gave an exceedingly interesting address "The Christian view points on immortality and life after death". He said that our greatest ambitions, if we were sincere, would be accomplished in our life after death. After a general discussion on this very important subject to youth we found that we hadn't given this as much thought as we should.

The next week's meeting was then alotted to group leaders Annie Lazarick and James Browning. The subject to be based on music.

The meeting then closed by singing "God Save the King".

Classroom Is No Speedway

By Garry C. Myers, Ph.D.

Many parents have been worried about the obvious ill effect on children from being hurried in the classroom, particularly by constant speed drills in arithmetic. Often in this column I have condemned stop-watch teaching.

Here is a letter from a teacher:

"Dear Dr. Myers: I regularly read your column, 'The Parent Problem,' in our local paper. You write many fine things, but I always disagree with you in your criticism of speed tests in arithmetic.

"It is my belief that there is nothing inherently wrong in speed tests. It is the misuse of them, rather than the tests themselves, to which you should object. It has been my practice for years to begin each of my seventh grade arithmetic classes every day with a speed test.

"However, I am careful to eliminate any strain. Instead of calling them speed tests, I call them improvement tests, as the text does. I carefully explain their nature and purpose to my pupils. Then I tell them that the tests will be given not to obtain a mark, but entirely for practice. I tell them not to become excited, but to work calmly, for only in so doing can they do their best. I stress accuracy rather than speed. When the four minutes allowed for the test are up, a bell rings quietly. Then each pupil scores his own paper in the back of his book. No one is criticised for not having done better...

Tests Not at Fault

"I believe that it is only fair that in the earliest possible column you present this aspect of speed tests: That it is not the tests themselves which are at fault, but rather the way in which they are used. Parents and other readers of your column should not be led to criticize indiscriminately teachers who use speed tests."

Here is how I answered him:

"My condemnation of speed tests hardly applies to your case. The tests you give I should not classify as speed drills or stop-watch teaching. If I understand you correctly, you conduct practice tests in which the time factor is only a convenience of the class program. Naturally, you must end the practice at some time and you choose four minutes. Then the record of each child in your class does not in any way become a part of his marks in this subject, and the pupil knows it does not. Apparently it is good drill, and drill is very desirable when the learner feels no crowding for time.

Hurry is Practice

"But your procedure is that of one among one hundred teachers, perhaps. The prevailing practice is to hurry children and to grade them in their speed against the watch. What worries me and other parents is that most teachers hurry children by practicing them against the watch for the purpose of making them do well in a standard test they will get once or twice a year.

"Scientific studies indicate that hurrying a learner does not make him work fast, but retards his speed; that the best way to prepare a pupil to be rapid in skills is to guide him in exercising accurate skills in an atmosphere of calm. Any classroom exercise that makes children jittery and anxious cannot be defended on the basis of learning efficiency. I shall have to go on condemning stop-watch teaching."

I have the hope that even standard tests will eventually omit the time limit and become power tests.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. Would you pay a child to do music practice?

A. I would not. A few can be motivated by a great teacher to choose to practice; and, thanks to the good influence of the school music programs, some are induced to practice. But the average child needs parents who know how to see that he practices a definite period each day at a definite time, without exception or argument. It can be done. Most children treated so will feel grateful to their parents for this treatment in years to come.

Stirring Stories of Clashes Off British and German Coasts Related by British Pilots

London, Nov. 8—(CP)—Stirring accounts of clashes between British and German airmen yesterday over the east coast of England and Scotland and off the German coast were published here last night, quoting British airmen who participated in the combats. From the accounts it appeared that at least two German machines were damaged in two of the isolated encounters. There were no British casualties.

In one case, an attack on a Heinkel machine, the fighting got so close that the opposing planes passed within little more than a yard of each other. The British gunner reported that two good bursts appeared to get home. The enemy pulled up into the clouds but was pursued.

Enemy Craft Not Seen Again

In the British pilot's words: "The enemy climed still higher in the clouds, and as it did so we got in front and under it and let go one more burst at very short range. The Heinkel dived as we passed in front of it and only a few feet separated us." The German aircraft was not seen again.

After a combat with another Heinkel the British pilot involved described the action as follows:

"The enemy was diving steeply when attacked from the port rear quarter. He climbed far for the clouds. I throttled back and attacked from astern. I got two or three bursts on him with my port gun and he vanished in the clouds.

"I throttled back again and found him fifty feet above me about twenty-five yards ahead. I got some rear bursts at him and as he turned away I again brought my port gun on him. I followed behind and slightly underneath and he then flew into another bank of cloud and disappeared. He appeared to wobble and side-slip badly before he was finally lost."

Rainstorm Causes Escape

A fierce rainstorm caused a third reconnaissance aircraft to lose contact with an enemy airplane which it had pursued for ten minutes.

There was no exchange of machine-gun fire in another encounter. A British pilot, using the clouds, approached while a German plane was circling a cargo freighter. The German turned as it to meet the attack but climbed into the clouds and made off.

A German flying boat at two hundred feet was observed for five minutes by a British aircraft, which then dived toward it from eight hundred feet, firing its front gun. The German returned the fire without causing any damage, but was able to take advantage of dense clouds to escape.

TRENTON

Trenton, Nov. 8 (Special)—Monday night the Young People's Union of King Street United Church met in the parlours of the church last night. The meeting was opened with a sing song. The Christian Citizens' Group took charge of the meeting and Anne Langdon led the body in worship. Freda Wallace assisted Miss Langdon in prayer. Following a period of business the assemblage was divided into two groups headed by Miss Irene Vanderwater and Helen Couch to discuss the problems this generation has to face. A summary reading was heard from the Pathfinder before the meeting closed with the reading of the Benediction.

Rugby Notes

Latest reports indicate that big Bob Johnson will be out of the game when O.S.D. and Trenton High School clash for the Bay of Quinte six-man grid honours this coming Friday. Johnson Trenton's outstanding halfback suffered a sprained ankle in the match with Belleville Collegiate here last Friday. If Bob is on the sidelines Friday the locals' chances of taking the championship will not be as great as if the big boy were in there fighting for the Gold and Black. At present Bob is at home doing everything to bring his injured leg back into shape for Friday's important encounter.

Vic Burtt Playing Friday

Vic Burtt the lad who was partly responsible for Trenton's win over B.C.I. last Friday is counting on playing full time for the local H.S. in the O.S.D.-Trenton tilt this coming Friday. Burtt saw his first action of the year last week-end when the home squad entertained the Collegiate boys of Belleville. An injury at the High School meet earlier in the fall prevented him from engaging in the rough and tumble sport any sooner. Burtt is a husky lad weighing in the neighbourhood of 150 pounds. Besides being exceptionally fast on his feet he is a careful ball handler and plunges with all the skill and daring of a seasoned exponent of the game. Burtt's addition to the lineup will mean a great deal to the locals if their starry half Bob Johnson is unable to see service.

Weller Ready

Russ Weller the half pint quarterback who has been giving some versatile exhibitions of football at Trenton High School this term announced last night that he is "as fit as a fiddle" for the Trenton-O.S.D. engagement come this Friday afternoon. Young Weller who hails from the United States is a tricky artist when it comes to broken field running and throwing the leather demon around the gridiron. But his ability to tackle places him in a category by himself and few ball carriers have broken through his stonewall defence. The little fellow is outstanding as a leader, too, and more than once his uncanny strategy has pulled the locals out of the fire. In a match here early in the season the mighty mite scored two touchdowns and kicked two singles for a total of 12 points. Steve Graziano of O.S.D. is the only player in the league to better Weller's performance and he collected 17 points against Trenton two weeks ago.

Service Stations Remodelled.

Two of Trenton's leading service stations are being remodelled by the McFarlane Construction Company of Picton, Ont. The depot formerly operated by Jack Kinney on the east side of the river has been recently equipped with new pumps and at present the drive yard is being resurfaced with a preparation of tar and gravel. Jordan's station in the centre of the town has been renovated lately and workmen are preparing to resurface the drive yard. It was just a week ago that modern pumps were installed at Jordan's.

Personals.

Mayor Cory was out of town yesterday but returned for a meeting last night.

Members of the Welfare Committee of Trenton met in the municipal office last night.

Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Farrar are visiting in New York City at present.

Mr. Arthur Holsey of Timmins who is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Holsey of Trenton, motored to Toronto Monday.

When members of the Trenton Rotary Club enjoyed a chicken supper at Albury Church on Monday evening, Jay Raymond, Commissioner of Industry for the Canadian National Railways delivered a well received address to those who attended.

High School Sports.

Under the auspices of the newly-formed Trenton High School Sports Club, volleyball and badminton were demonstrated in the gym yesterday after four. Miss Ruth Cory and Miss Townsend were in charge of the exhibitions. Thirty-five girls took part in the volleyball games while Lina-Marilyn McClung, Beulah Floud, Marion Weaver and Margo James demonstrated badminton. Miss Ruth Cory gave a demonstration on the parallel bars.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Hawaiian Nights"

Announced as a glamorous picture of the tropics, with melody, laughter, romance and native dancers in new swing-hula routines, Universal's latest musical film, "Hawaiian Nights," comes soon to the Capitol Theatre.

Music is Motivation

Two noted musical groups, Matty Malneck and his orchestra and the Hawaiian string band of Sol Hoopii provide lilting harmony for the gay romantic drama. Already well known for their recordings and radio work, the orchestras will introduce four new song hits especially written for the picture.

Downs and Miss Moore play the leads in the story which, as outlined, revolves about the adventure and romance of a handsome young orchestra leader in a South Sea Island paradise. Mary Carlisle will be seen as "the other girl" and Eddie Quillan sets the pace in gay comedy scenes.

Advance reports stress the appearance of Princess Luana, world famed hula queen and winner of the "Miss Honolulu" title who leads a large group of Island beauties in native dance scenes for the picture. Said to capture the enchanting allure of Hawaii and the romance of modern youth, "Hawaiian Nights" was directed by Albert S. Rogell and produced by Max H. Golden. Stanley Cortez was the photographer.

The added feature brings to the screen Jack London's "Wolf Call," depicting the storied glories of the untamed north. Drama, exciting as northern lights, action fast as lightning, racing, romance, a man, his woman and his dog pitted against a ring of radium racketeers.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Full Confession"

With Victor McLaglen heading an excellent cast that includes Joseph Calleia Sally Eilers and Barry Fitzgerald, "Full Confession", one of the screen's greatest dramatic triumphs, is now playing at the McCarthy Theatre. In addition the program includes "The Jones Family In Hollywood", the funniest of all their big comedy hits, plus an outstanding technicolor Walt Disney, Donald Duck and Pluto cartoon, entitled "The Fox Hunt".

"The Arizona Wildcat"
"Legion of Lost Fliers"

Next at the McCarthy Theatre will be presented Jane Withers in her most hilarious screen success, "The Arizona Wildcat" in which Leo Carillo is co-starred. The thrill-packed story of men without fear, "Legion of Lost Flyers", Universal Studio's action-drama featuring Richard Arlen, Anne Nagel and Andy Devine will be presented on the same program as the co-feature and in addition "Adventures With a Newsreel Cameraman", a thrilling short subject and "Mandrake The Magician" will also be presented.

AT THE BELLE

"The Women"

With star honors divided three ways among Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford and Rosalind Russell, "The Women" is now on the Belle screen. Unusual in its premise of presenting one of the strongest love stories to come out of Hollywood in months, and yet never showing before the camera the masculine objects of the various women's affections, "The Women" may well be nominated as the most unusual production of any year. It is decidedly top entertainment from every angle, with sharp, snappy dialogue, thrilling situations and sets of eye-filling beauty.

Not since "Riptide" has Norma Shearer appeared in a similar role and her return to drawing-room comedy is heralded by her many fans. Joan Crawford portraying a "heavy" for the first time in her screen career, scores a decided triumph, as does Rosalind Russell, who is proving one of Hollywood's most versatile actresses. Phyllis Povah, imported from New York to create her stage role in the picture, is a happy addition to the roster of the Hollywood players, and Mary Boland and Paulette Goddard garner more than a generous share of the plaudits.

Incidentally, those who witnessed the stage play will find that the drama lost nothing in being transferred to the screen. The broader scope offered by the celluloid provides many more spectacular moments than would be possible on the stage, outstanding among these being the beauty shop sequences and the fashion show.

Supporting players who added sterling performances include Joan Fontaine, Virginia Weidler, Lucile Watson, Florence Nash, Muriel Hutchinson, Esther Dale, Ann Morriss, Ruth Hussey, Dennie Moore, Mary Cecil, Mary Beth Hughes, Virginia Grey, Marjorie Main, Cora Witherspoon and Hedda Hopper. The production has been given expert direction and sincere, sympathetic handling by Director George Cukor.

The Belle News of the Day and "Culinary Carving", a Pete Smith specialty will be presented on the same program.

Daily War Survey

On the map the Forbach salient appears to be troublesome to the Germans. From it French guns can shell the recently evacuated Warndt Forest from the east, thus preventing the Germans from using the cover of the forest to full advantage.

Even so it is difficult to see how the capture of the position would justify the heavy expenditure in men and shells which an attack on it against determined French defence would involve. If, however, by artillery action the French can be induced to withdraw from their earlier positions on German soil it would be both a convenience and a relief for the Germans.

State Voters Unanimously Adopt System to Eliminate Bookies

New York, Nov. 8—(AP) — Pension plans combining increased grants to the aged with unorthodox methods of raising the money were rejected yesterday by top-heavy majorities in two widely separated parts of the United States.

In Ohio voters snowed under the pension plan proposal advocated by Herbert S. Bigelow, Cincinnati clergyman, to assure income of $50 a month to those past sixty, while in California they turned down a "ham and eggs" pension scheme which would have paid unemployed persons past fifty up to thirty dollars a week.

The "ham and eggs" play was to have been financed by a system of state script reminiscent of a prosperity certificate plan once instituted by the Social Credit Government of Alberta. Sponsors said they would try again to have the plan approved at the polls.

In another referendum which attracted country-wide interest as the United States held its off-year elections, New York voters approved pari-mutuel race track betting.

Democrats Carry Kentucky

None of the elections for city and state offices throughout the country yesterday held national political significance.

In New York voters gave Tammany Hall, historic city democratic party machine, control of county jobs. Kentucky chose Governor Keen Johnson, Democrat, to remain in the office he reached through the recent resignation of Governor A. B. Chandler to the United States Senate. His Republican opponent was Circuit Court Judge King Swope.

The Ohio pension proposal which called for a state income tax and a levy on valuable real estate, was defeated by a margin of more than 3 to 1. Returns from 7,641 of 8,589 precincts gave 394,639 for the pension plan and 1,318,509 against it.

The California returns buried the "ham and eggs" pension program by a tremendous margin. The proposal trailed in every county, even Los Angeles county, it's birthplace, turning almost a 2 to 1 total against it.

Reports from 9,046 of 11,165 precincts showed 504,286 votes for the plan and 1,008,282 against it.

POSTPONE PRESS CONFERENCE

Toronto, Nov. 8 (CP)—The sixth Imperial Press Conference, which was to have been held in Ottawa during the week of Aug. 5 next, has been postponed because of the war.

The council of the Empire Press Union has notified the Canadian section of the Union of the postponement of the gathering which would have brought sixty delegates from the United Kingdom and the dominions and colonies to Canada with their wives.

The last Imperial Press Conference held in Canada was in 1920 and this meeting was one postponed from 1915 because of the first Great War.

Juvenile Hockey Association To Function in Belleville With F. Cunningham as Pres.

Four Teams Will Operate in Schedule Prior to Opening of O. H. A. Season

PICK ALL-STAR TEAM

This Team Will Compete in Provincial Playdowns of Juvenile Group

With four clubs assured a new sports organization came into being at the Y.M.C.A. last evening in the formation of the Belleville Juvenile Hockey Association with aims and hopes of the fostering and sponsorship of Canada's national winter game among the teen-aged boys of this city. The age limit of the players participating in the league was set at 17 years and under as of Jan. 1st, 1940.

The election of officers and accepting of clubs under supervised sponsorship were the paramount issues discussed, while it was voted to select an all-star team from the clubs participating in the local juvenile league, this team to be entered and sponsored in the Ontario Juvenile Hockey Association. The four clubs sponsoring teams in the league are the Kinsmen, Kiwanis, Rotary Club and Reid's Dairy. The former three mentioned are service clubs in the city.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

Hon. President—S. R. Burrows.
President—Frank Cunningham.
Vice-Pres.—William Dennis.
Sec.-reas.—Homer Townsend.
Executive committee — Frank Collins, Billie Hughes and Fred Reid.

Co-operate with Other Loops

The meeting went on record to function and co-operate with the Belleville Ki-Y hockey groups, inasmuch as the Belleville Juvenile Hockey Assiciation will commence its schedule and league operations upon the opening of the Hume Arena in December and conclude its league play-offs in a manner as to not conflict with the Ki-Y league operations, which commence later in the season. Double headers of Juvenile Hockey will be played at the Hume Arena prior to the opening of the Ontario Hockey Association schedules as far as possible, following which the Belleville Juveniles will be selected to represent this city in the O.J.H.A.

Upon the suggestion of Executive Member Billie Hughes it was decided to have all teen-aged boys in Belleville sign league certificates, which will be available at the office of Secretary "Red" Townsend, Campbell St., within a fortnight. It will be from the list of signed players, that the clubs will select their playing strength and personnel. Each club will be equipped with sweaters and goalkeepers' equipment of the best quality so the various clubs will appear before the public in full hockey regalia. The playing rules of the C.A.H.A. were adopted and adequate and qualified referees will be appointed by the league to officiate each game and assure the parents and patrons of proper supervision and coaching towards the development of future hockey players in the city of Belleville. Substantial financial donations were made to the association by Messrs. S. R. Burrows, J. N. Yanover, Billie Hughes and W. Fred Reid.

Crests for Winners

Crests will be provided the players on the winning team. The league adopted a home and home series schedule of twelve games, to be followed by a play-off between the first and second placed clubs for the city juvenile hockey championship. It will be following this play-off, that the all-star team to represent Belleville in the O.J.H.A. will be made and a two-week period of training for this team will follow under proper coaching.

The teams represented last night were—Kinsmen, Don Thomas; Kiwanis, Bill Cook; Rotary, S. R. Burrows and Reid's Dairy, Fred Reid and Wm. Dennis. In the event of any team withdrawing Mr. Dennis stated he would enter the East End Club to fill the vacancy.

Phillies' Mentor Asks Majors To Adopt Shaughnessey Playoff System But Owners Cold to Deal

Philadelphia, Nov. 8 (AP)—Gerry Nugent, President of the Philadelphia Phillies, came up today with a counter-proposal to Larry McPhail's plan to supplant the world series with post-season games between American and National League Baseball Clubs according to their final standings.

It was: Why not adopt the Shaughnessy playoff system, with the winners of the final playoff meeting in a world series?

Connie Mack gave the idea as frigid a reception as he had the suggestion of McPhail, executive Vice President of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

"It's all right for the minors but it won't do for the Majors," commented the 76-year-old leader of the Philadelphia Athletics. "I'll never agree to anything but the first place finishers playing in the world series. I disagree with any kind of playoffs."

"McPhail's plan is all wet compared to the results that have been attained by the Shaughnessy playoffs in the Minor Leagues," Nugent asserted. "Why not start the regular season April 15 and end it on Sept. 15 or 20. The final two weeks of September are always washouts at the gate except for the pennant contenders.

"The Shaughnessy playoffs would stimulate interest at this time and keep the fans pepped up for the world series. With any of four clubs in each league likely to win the title and qualify for the world series, interest among the players as well as the fans would never die."

Under the Shaughnessy system, the team finishing first in the regular season plays a best three-of-five series with the third place club. The team finishing second meets the fourth place club in a similar series. The winners then meet in the best-of-seven series.

Nugent said that under the Shaughnessy system the Yankees, who slaughtered Cincinnati in the world series last month, might have been eliminated by the Boston Red Sox.

Maybe he has something there.

Looking forward to a great season of hammering opposing N.H.L. forwards is Al Murray, ABOVE, pint-sized defence player with Red Dutton's boisterous Americans, who at the moment is paired with Wilf Field, last year's rookie star, as one of the team's blue line sets. Al, who hands out body checks that echo, despite his stature, suffered torn shoulder ligaments last December and missed the rest of the season, a severe blow to the Amerks. This year he is being counted on for all his old-time "oooomph."

SPRINGFIELD ON TOP RUNG ALONE

Eddie Shore's Team Secures 2-2 Draw With Hershey in Late Rally

(By The Canadian Press)

Good goaling seems to be the best means of stopping Springfield Indians from rushing into an early lead in the International-American Hockey League race.

It is still too early in the season to judge the league's nine teams fairly but on the basis of its first three games, Eddie Shore's club ranks among the best. The Indians moved into first place alone last night when they broke through Alfie Moore's fine goaling to tie Hershey Bears 2-2.

The point gained on the tie gave the Indians five of a possible six points, one more than the second place Indianapolis Capitols.

Moore, and the Bears, had a victory within their grasp until veteran Irvine Frew moved up from his defence position to score the tieing goal with less than six minutes to play in the third period.

Two Boston rookies on loan to Hershey, combined to send Bears into the lead 16 seconds after the game began, Gordon Bruce tallying on a pass from Harry Frost. That lead stood up until the third minute of the second period when Normie Schultz, a star of the early season, scored for Springfield on a pass from Tommy Filmore.

Another Boston farmhand, Red Hamill, sent Hershey into the lead again early in the third period and Moore and the Bears' defence stood off every Springfield challenge until Frew picked up Schultz' pass at 14:38 to even the score. There was no count in the overtime.

WESTIES ITCHING TO MAKE AMENDS FOR LAST DEFEAT

Team Will be Without Two of Their Stars for Saturday's Game

ROUGHRIDERS READY

Drill for Over Two Hours for Their Game With Hamilton Tigers

By The Canadian Press

Montreal Westmounts, itching to make amends for a trouncing handed them by Toronto Balmy Beach, may go into action this Saturday against Peterborough Orfuns without the services of two of their backfield stars—Jimmy Riddell and Buddy Atchison.

The Westies, still smarting from a 23-1 setback inflicted by the Beaches in Toronto last Saturday, have been drilling without these two men so far this week. Atchison is down with badly bruised ligaments in his leg while Riddell, who shares the punting duties with Ray Mullins, has an injured arm.

Otherwise Coach Clary Foran expects his team to be in top shape for the last scheduled game of the year. Should the Westies win, as they are expected to, they are assured of at least a tie for first place in the final league standing. At present the Westies and the Beaches are tied for first place with seven points, one better than Sarnia Imperials. The Imperials and the Beaches also swing into action this Saturday.

At Ottawa, Coach Ross Trimble sent his Rough Riders through a drill of nearly two hours in preparation for their game against Hamilton Tigers. Missing were Bunny Wadsworth and the two Spragues, Dave and George. Wadsworth has a touch of the flu but no reason was given for the absence of the two others.

Joe Cicero, speedy backfielder, was the lone casuality as Montreal's Big Four Royals went through a workout. Cicero is limping badly from a charley-horse received last Saturday as the Royals lost their fifth straight league game to the Riders and is unlikely to play against Toronto Argonauts. Coach Ted Reeve expects to use Leo McCullagh, out of action all season with a broken collar-bone, in Cicero's place.

KHOEN UNBEATEN IN LOCAL RING

Detroit Wrestler Will Meet Joe Maich, Who Expects to Score Victory

Dave Khoen, the lithe and agile Detroit heavyweight wrestler who has never tasted the bitter dose of defeat in a Belleville wrestling ring, hopes to better his cause against Joe Maich, the former Canadian amateur champion, at the Hume Arena on Thursday night when Khoen and Maich meet in a return bout, arranged through the popular request of Belleville's wrestling clientele.

A fortnight ago Maich and Khoen engaged in a full 60 minutes of the best exhibition of wrestling ever seen in Belleville when the time limit bell of one hour sounded to terminate the best wrestling bout ever presented in Belleville. Both Maich and Khoen are capable and proven grapplers, who ply their ring trade in an orthodox manner.

To add color to the evening's performance "The Mask," a behooded gentleman of the wrestling ring who also remains undefeated in Belleville, meets Chief Little Bear, the full-blooded Oklahoma Indian in a second main bout.

Four bouts in all will be presented to open with Roy Doherty, the Shannonville strongman, meeting Jim Kruher, of Vancouver, while in a second preliminary Wild Bill Tracey, Texas, Belleville and intermediate points, meets a newcomer to local wrestling wars, Lorne Lottridge. Four bouts will feature Thursday night's show at the Arena and at popular prices.

Unless Trenton Collegiate pull the unexpected and beat Coach Frank Cunningham's O.S.D. six-man C. O. S. S. A. squad on Friday, there is little possibility that the B.C.I. squad will play their postponed game with Trenton, as a win for the "deaf lads" Friday gives them the group honors without sustaining a single loss, although the "collegians" played them a six-all tie on one occasion. Yesterday the Burns-Grant-led B.C.I. abbreviated squad played the O.S.D. boys an exhibition game for practice purposes prior to the big tilt on Friday. The O.S.D. kids enjoyed a fine workout and won over the picked up "collegian" squad 5-0. Immediately after the game Coach Eddie Schrieder announced that several of the B.C.I. six-man team would be given trials with the Bay of Quinte champion B.C.I. conventional 12-man squad, Accera, Burly and Crosley being prominently named. While talking interscholastic football, the Peterboro Collegiate muffed a sweet chance to cinch the Lake Shore group honors when they lost to Bowmanville on Saturday. Now Peterboro' and Oshawa are tied and the result of their meeting on Saturday will decide the Lake Shore championship.

A sport movement long needed in Belleville came into being at the "Y" last night with the organization of a Belleville Juvenile Hockey Association, that is to embrace four teams. The meeting could have been one of a more widely represented nature, but some twelve men showed their interest and loyalty towards the fostering of sport among the teen-aged of our city. Frankly speaking there is too much of the "let George do it" attitude in sports in Belleville with the result that one of these fine seasons the fans are going to find themselves sitting at home twiddling their thumbs and wondering what it's all about. However, those present were sufficiently far-seeing to grasp the magnitude of organized sports among the teen-aged of our community and it is to them the lion's share of the glory should go when the players developed by their efforts in years to come finally reach stardom. And it is from just such organizations as the Belleville Juvenile Hockey Association that tomorrow's big-time stars rise.

* * *

The slate of officers selected include an energetic band of workers. Already they've accumulated sufficient to purchase jerseys for the four clubs entered, thanks to the generous donations of Sandy Burrows, Jack Yanover, Billie Hughes and Fred Reid. Actually all that is left is to have a few more lovers of hockey step forward, contact any of the association officers and increase the present coffers towards the purchase of hockey sticks for these teen aged kids. The paramount idea behind the movement is to have the four clubs concerned play a twelve-game schedule, to be followed by a championship play-off. At the conclusion of the league, which is to open activities as soon as the Hume Arena opens its doors, an all-star team will be selected and this club will be trained and coached to later compete in the Ontario Juvenile Hockel Association. Playing certificates will be available at Secretary "Red" Townsend's Campbell street office in about two weeks.

Wrestling history in both the U.S.A. and Canada is a romantic yarn and we know of no greater gamblers, not of the monetary type, who ply their trade. Once inside the squared circle these men of super strength toss caution to the winds and produce entertainment that appeals to so many human interests so that its enthusiasts may be found in all ages of both sexes and in a highly varied assortment of peoples. This fact holds good in Belleville just as well as in Madison Square Gardens or the largest arena in Chicago as can be proven by the increased patronage that is welcoming wrestling to the Hume Arena this season. This week the wrestling date has been changed to Thursday night and bargain night advertised with four bouts carded, featuring a return main attraction between Joe Maich and Dave Khoen, two outstanding pachyderms who wrestled to a 60-minute draw here two weeks ago. Another bout which the fans of the district are paramountly interested in is the opener bringing Roy Doherty in against Jim Kruher of Vancouver. Doherty has been training strenuously since losing his initial bout in an effort to vindicate himself in the eyes of the public.

We see where Walt Gerow, Jr., scored the only goal for London in the M-O League as his club played a 1-1 tie at Detroit Monday. Also, Carl Morgan, former Belleville left wing player, of Toronto, is holidaying in the city.

Gabby Hartnett, who guided the Chicago Cubs to a National pennant during his first season as manager in 1938, is slated to be at the helm of the Cubs again in 1940, at least so says P. K. Wrigley, the owner, who should know something about the workings of the "bears". Incidentally there are numerous rumors of major league swaps and trades in the winds these days, but nothing is expected to break until the annual meeting of the National Commission at Cincinnati in December. There is still talk of Joe Medwick being sold by the Cardinals, but who will get him? Will it be Brooklyn; will it be Chicago? Who knows, but it is safe betting whatever club bids for "Ducky Wucky" will pay heavily on the trading block.

SPORT SPICE—The Van Horne Memorial schedule in Kingston will be drafted today, Eddie Thomas was told when he sought affiliation in the Kingston pre-season loop yesterday. . . . Full details of the R.C.A.F. hockey activities are expected soon.

NAMED VALUABLE PLAYER

St. Louis, Nov. 8—(AP) — Joe Dimaggio's kid brother, Dominic, is keeping the family name in lights out on the west coast.

The third of the famous outfielding brothers, Joe, Vincent and Dominic—today was named by the sporting news as the most valuable player in the Pacific Coast League last season. Young Dimaggio, who starred with San Francisco Seals, accumulated 49 points in voting by the league's official scorers.

ST. JOHN'S MISSION

The ladies of the Guild held their weekly meeting in Shannonville, guests of Mrs. Cole. The meeting opened with the hymn, "Oh Valiant Hearts" for Remembrance Day. It was suggested that the roll call-next week be answered by a verse for Peace as Remembrance Day is on Saturday. After the business meeting the hostess had arranged for a social afternoon. Cards were played. The winners were Mrs. Leverton, Mrs. Grimson and Mrs. Mathews. After the games a dainty lunch was served by the hostess. An enjoyable time was had by all and the ladies hoped for many more such afternoons.

Love's Ambition Wins

By COSMO HAMILTON

It was ten minutes past eight. She had just emerged from the entrails of that vast hotel. A manicurist, spruce and smart. Her hands wore the look of being constantly in hot water and her nails advertised her deft, delicate and universal art.

She was not hurrying from her place of business to make the trolley which took her home. Rather, she was dashing away from a great emotional upheaval, the crisis of her life.

The young reporter to whom she was engaged was on the verge of losing his job.

He had been unable to achieve a story for considerably over a week. And in reply to her offer of help he had given her a look of sex antagonism, of lofty male scorn.

He had said, "You—help me! You—a girl, a woman. Don't make me laugh."

Without stopping to remind him of Joan of Arc, Florence Nightingale, Nurse Cavelle, and hundreds of heroines who pour into cities to work, she was making for the swinging doors through a blinding mist of tears.

Many other people had come in and passed out during the last half hour but they had taken no notice of a tall man who stood in the way of the door. A sandy man who wore a walrus mustache.

All the same there was more than an indication of intellect in his well-cut nose, while the bumps over his eyes proclaimed a photographic observation, an inexhaustible imagination and a charming tenderness.

Extraordinarily ordinary would be the way in which you would describe Hilary Panton, the famous English novelist, if you were asked.

And that was precisely how he struck the hurrying Sadie even at that dreadful moment of pain and wounded pride.

But having given him one quick look she drew up short and gasped.

Her mouth fell open.

Her eyes grew wilder and wilder.

Her expression was the one of a hero worshiper face-to-face at last with an almost incredible god.

It was noticed at once by Panton with a very excusable thrill.

He was a very lonely man.

He had already spotted this extremely pretty young thing.

He had already said to himself: "How unbelievably sweet. But why the tears? Ought I to comfort her?"

He had slipped into Boston on important business.

He had registered, dreading headlines, uner the absurd and fictitious name of Albert Henry Watts.

He approached Sadie. Before he could speak, she met him halfway with an ecstatic, impulsive rush.

"Mr. Hilary Panton—you, in person, here! . . . Watts? No, no, you can't fool me. You look down from the wall in my bedroom from eight nice frames. I've read every line you've written. You're my god of words."

She was filled with joy, excitement, relish, and, it must be said, with hope.

Panton in Boston incognito! Talk about a scoop.

Further denials useless. Panton said, "I suggest that you eat, dear child. I suggest that I order dinner for you in my sitting room—fourteen hundred and eight. You must be very tired after a hard and trying day. I feel that I am your friend. After all I look down upon you from eight nice frames and in your bedroom, too."

She replied that she could imagine nothing more wonderful.

"Fourteen hundred and eight," she said. "I'll join you there in five minutes. There is something I must do."

She touched his arm with the tips of her fingers, flashed him one of those smiles which had won so many tips, turned and disappeared.

She knew that her reporter was in the manager's office, ran there and drew him aside. "Jimmie, here's the top-notch scoop of your life. The greatest living English novelist is stoping at this hotel under another name because he hates headlines. He's waiting for me in his room, is going to give me dinner and oh, my little Jimmie, you've got to be there. I'm going to make him talk. I'm going to draw him out about all the other authors, religion, psychology, and every other question he would never dare to think about with a reporter in the room. Get Mr. Ouchy to let you put on waiter's clothes, then serve the dinner so that you can listen and take notes! Quick. It's the chance of your young life."

Panton had unconsciously dramatized all thus. An unknown girl upon whom he looked down from the photographs on her wall.

He described it to himself as being a really delightful event. And even if she had not been pretty and indescribably sweet he would have been touched and grateful by her persistent loyalty.

All his books, by Jove, and what a string there was!

He thrilled at the tap on his door. She had discovered his identity but would never give him away. He felt like Haroun-el-Raschid in one of the Arabian Nights. Although sandy, elderly and freckled, he handed her a pink.

And, this, although thinking of Jimmie, she touched with her pretty lips. "Oh, Mr. Hilary Panton, I can hardly believe it's true."

But the whole thing became a concrete fact when Jimmie, dressed as a waiter, came in with her food. And it was then that, with blazing cleverness, she put Panton through a long series of questions which, blandly unconscious of this heroic little plot, he answered with appalling frankness and the most sarcastic turns of phrase.

For the benefit of this eager, intelligent worshiper, he let himself go with complete abandon, the most frightful indiscretion and the most devastating words. He soared high above all prudence and all the conventions of literary etiquette so that there was not a rag left on the trembling bodies of his brothers of the pen . . . He little knew that the quiet and competent waiter was taking notes!

Panton went over to the window as James was about to leave.

The night was very warm. Away below, the usual procession of automobiles was moving to right and left. He had alas, to remember that he was sandy, middle-aged and that there were freckles on his face.

Jimmie's face was flushed.

He was carrying away a story which would make the city editor utter loud whoops of joy, which would cause a flutter in the literary dovecotes of the English-speaking world.

He flung his arm around Sadie's shoulder and held her tight to his heart. "The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world," he said.

A pleasant hour was spent—pleasant thought elderly, during which Sadie, the happiest of girls, told the story of her life.

Mr. Hilary Panton played what he called cricket though he longed for a little kiss.

And when finally she looked at the clock and sprang to her feet in a panic—she had to be to work early—he led her to the door. "My dear," he said, "I shall never be able to thank you for breaking my loneliness. And it is good to have been able to remove your tears."

He awoke next morning at nine. With breakfast came the morning papers and on one of them in gigantic headlines appeared the following words. "Amazing Disclosures by Hilary Panton, the Famous Novelist." When the waiter returned with his breakfast the guest in fourteen hundred and eight was lying on his back in the middle of the floor in a state of utter collapse. There was sweat on his brow.

Sadie and Jim oozed in, frightened, nervous and a wee bit ashamed. "Oh, Mr. Hilary Panton, what have I done to you?" And before he could denounce her and order her away she told with sobs her own little story, the basis of which was Love.

"Oh, my dear," said Panton, "how could you do such a thing? With reluctant admiration, however, I see what this means to Jim, and because of Jim to you, and so I forgive you both. Let me know the date of your marriage and I will send you a gift."

And under the eye of her future husband—he had humor, this man—he put his hand under Sadie's chin and kissed her on the lips. In no other way could he have done this thing, being sandy and so well past middle-aged.

PEACE IMPOSSIBLE

"A lasting peace must be an honorable peace," said The Daily Telegraph, "and at present there is no sort of evidence that the conditions of an honorable peace are obtainable."

If Lord Halifax, when he spoke last night, had had the message of King Leopold and Queen Wilhelmina in mind, he could not have made a more appropriate and convincing reply to it. "Those who profess not to know what we are fighting for, and who demand that our war aims should be invoiced, as it were, must be obdurately ignorant or insensible to the deeper spiritual issues now at stake. For the sake of all that we hold most precious in human destiny — freedom, security, amity and peace in the world—we cannot acquiesce in what has been done to jeopardise all these things, which are in themselves the only foundation for a lasting settlement."

"The moves of the two sovereigns are deeply appreciated in this country," said The Daily Mail. "But suppose their mediation were accepted? The next stop would be a statement of peace terms to these neutral countries by Britain and France on one side and Germany on the other.

"The democratic terms are well known. They are that Germany should relinquish the gains of aggression and give firm guarantees of her intent to fulfil future undertakings. What prospect is there of such terms being accepted by the Nazis? Here is the difference: Herr Hitler fights for conquest and power; the Allies, as Lord Halifax said last night, fight for a new world of human equality and self respect."

AS PEACEFUL FINNS PREPARE TO PROTECT T HEIR INDEPENDENCE

This photo, showing Finnish troops on the march through Helsinki, was made through an arch formed by the legs of the horse on which Field Marshal Baron Mannerheim, hero of Finland and head of its army, sat reviewing the parade. Today the field marshal and his men are grimly awaiting the outcome of talks at Moscow. If they must fight, they are ready.

EMPTY LIFEBOAT WASHED UP ON SHORE

Believed by U. S. coastguardsmen near Jupiter, Fla. to be off a ship either wrecked by storm or explosion, this empty lifeboat was washed up on the beach. A copper plate found in the boat bears the inscription "See-Berufsgenossenshaft, 144998" and leads the coastguardsmen to believe the lifeboat is from a German vessel.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was looking at his paper and ma was looking at hers, saying, It seems the French government is thinking of imposing a tax on every batchelor in France.

That's a good idea and ought to spread, batchelors have it entirely too soft, pop said, and ma said, Well such a thing to say when everybody knows that it's the married men that have such a proverbial easy life, and you know as well as I do that batchelors are pitiful figures.

Then why tax them if they're already so heavily wayed down by life? pop said, and ma said, To discourage small families, of course. The idea of you blankly sitting there and telling me you'd be only too overjoyed to pay a tax if you had the chance to be a batchelor, she said.

Yee gods when did I say that? pop said, and ma said, I can take an inference.

You mean you can invent one, pop said. For Peet sake I wouldn't be a batchelor even if they allowed me to collect taxes instead of paying them. What do batchelors know about the joys of living? he said, and ma said, Well, that sounds more like a sensible statement.

I've always pitied batchelors, pop said. Imagine the poor devils shivering out of their beds to close the windows on chilly mornings like these when they might have an affectionate wife to get up and do it lovingly for them, he said, and ma said, Now Willyum if you expect me to do that one more morning I declare I'll stay in bed the rest of the day rather than be such an easy mark. I declare a husband is the most selfish animal that ever sat down on 2 feet, she said.

So, you're delibritly making the unqualified statement that you'd rather be a single woman than anything you know of, is that it? pop said, and ma said, Now dont talk crazy through your hat, and what's so funny?

Meaning on account of pop laughing all his might the result being he had to take her to the movies.

Heavy Cheese Exports Continue

Toronto, Nov. 8.—In view of a good statistical position and present heavy exports, cheese prices to the wholesale trade continued to strengthen at Toronto yesterday. The butter market exhibited a firmer undertone, while eggs showed little change.

Dominion Department of Agriculture figures indicate that Canada is now shipping cheese to the United Kingdom at a rapid rate and, at the same time, local sources state that there is a good movement to the United States. The volume of exports crossing the American border, however, could not be ascertained, but an unofficial report is that shipments are running three times those of last year.

Exports from Montreal and Quebec to the Old Country for the week ended Nov. 4 totalled 107,798 boxes, or about 9.1 million pounds, averaging 85 pounds to the box. Since the first of May Canada has shipped out of these ports 807,113 boxes which represents an increase of approximately 8.1 million pounds when compared with the 711,590 boxes exported to the United Kingdom in the like period of 1938.

Trading picked up in butter and prices improved slightly.

Light offerings and good demand enabled the egg market to maintain a firm tone. Grade A pullets in particular moved well, and prices on this grade in the retail section advanced one cent.

TURKISH ASSEMBLY RATIFIES PACT

Ankara, Nov. 8— (CP-Havas) — The Turkish National Assembly today unanimously ratified the Anglo Franco Turkish Mutual Assistance Pact.

The pact, signed at Ankara Oct. 19, pledges Anglo-French assistance to Turkey in the event of aggression against her or the outbreak of war in the Mediterranean leading to Turkish involvement.

Turkey pledged itself to aid Britain and France should they be involved in a Mediterranean war or in operations required by the Anglo-French pledge to Rumania and Greece.

Turkey, however, was exempted from any obligation to take up arms against Soviet Russia.

Athol Twp. Councillors Prohibit Sunday Dancing

Councillors of Athol Township, Prince Edward County, lashed out at Sunday dancing at their meeting held this week, passing township legislation to prohibit this form of entertainment on the Sabbath. The action followed several complaints of ratepayers with regard to dances being held in summer resorts within the township.

Legislation was also passed licensing the sale of foodstuffs in the township. Breach of the bylaw calls for a fine of $50.00.

OCCUPANTS

Mr. Turriff sustained a slight cut over his left eye, while Miss Goddard is believed to have been suffering from a cracked rib, but the occupants escaped serious injury. "They were wet and cold and rather than have them exposed to the wet damp night air, we thought it better they remain at the hospital all night where it was warm," explained Dr. G. S. Cronk this morning as he added how the quartette escaped without fatal injuries was beyond his comprehension.

Breaks Light Standard

It is believed by police, Sergeant Arthur Harman stated after P. C. Wright investigated, that Mr. Turriff was driving and proceeding north on Pinnacle St. "It appears as though Turriff drove straight north after crossing Station St., failing to turn either direction. The vehicle must have been travelling rather fast as it broke off a street light standard, crashed through that iron guard rail north of the upper Bridge and dove into the river below. The car must have rolled over along the river bed for some thirty feet out from the abutment wall, where it came to rest in the water. How one person escaped from that mass of wreckage is nothing short of a miracle, stated Sargeant Harman as he pointed to the mass of steel and iron wreckage this morning. The fact the motor car was a new model equipped with a turret steel top is doubtless the reason the occupants escaped without serious injury.

Crash Heard Distinctly

Residents from some considerable distance around heard the crash of the impact and the screams of women. The Belleville fire department was called and rendered assistance under Chief Lynch, when ladders were lowered to assist the water-soaked and shivering occupants up the steep 18-foot embankment. P. C. Wright was the first police officer at the scene and immediately called Martin's ambulance and Dr. Cronk. Mr. Turriff was removed to the hospital, where his lacerated forehead was attended. Sergeant Harman and Constables Evans and Taylor later arrived at the scene and assisted P. C. Wright and the fire department in excavating the occupants. Today the wreckage was removed from the river bed by a local tow truck.

Mr. Turriff later informed Sergeant Harman at the police station that he had failed to observe the end of Pinnacle St. and had driven directly across Station St. before he realized it was a street end. It was raining at the time and the street was wet and slippery.

Driver is Charged

Today Turriff was charged that by the wanton or furious driving, or by wilful neglect he did cause bodily harm to be done to Dorothy Goddard, contrary to section 285 of the Canadian Criminal Code, which constitutes criminal negligence, police stated. Turriff was arraigned before H. E. Wilson, local Justice of the Peace, and remanded. Bail was set at $500.00

MEDIATION OFFER

At the same time it was disclosed that the Polish Prime Minister and Minister of Foreign Affairs would visit London next week and confer with Prime Minister Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax.

The war cabinet considered the peace appeal today, it was stated authoritatively.

The mediation offer, which came as a surprise here, apparently stirred little hope for concrete results.

Will Repair Damage

An assertion by Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax that Britain is resolved to repair as far as possible the damage "wrought by Germany on weaker neighbors" was seen by many observers as an indication that the mediation proposal would prove abortive.

Although the Foreign Secretary's speech was prepared before King Leopold of Belgium and Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands addressed peace pleas to Great Britain, France and Germany, it may have served as a reply.

Had Lord Halifax "had the message of King Leopold and Queen Wilhelmina in mind, he could not have made a more appropriate and convincing reply," commented the Daily Telegraph.

Fears Prompted Move

Informed neutral observers said fear of some action by Germany prompted King Leopold and Queen Wilhelmina to renew their offer of mediation in the conflict.

These observers were of the opinion that indirect German pressure on the neutral nations had been heavy in the last two weeks although their sovereigns did not act on a direct German request. German troops concentrations and construction of pontoon bridges on the Netherlands border were believed among the strongest motives prompting the peace move.

The Times pointed to the "dramatically unusual hour" when Queen Wilhelmina and King Leopold met, and said:

"The moment chosen may have some connection with the rumors now current of danger to the neutrality of one country or both."

The message reached the King last night just before he went to dinner at Buckingham Palace with Prime Minister Chamberlain, Dominions Secretary Anthony Eden and Hon. T. A. Crerar, Canada's representative at the current Empire consultation.

Lord Halifax' assertion that Nazi damage would have to be repaired was seen as precluding the establishment of a basis for peace between the Allies and the Reich.

Paper Gives Terms

"If Germany would first withdraw her troops from Poland and Czecho-Slovakia, Britain and France would be prepared to discuss the terms of peace settlement," The Daily Herald said in commenting on the Belgium-Netherlands move.

The Daily Mail said the Allied peace terms were well known and "what prospect is there of such terms being accepted by the Nazis?"

These terms were outlined broadly by the Foreign Secretary yesterday when he said:

"We are defending the rights of all nations to live their own lives; we are fighting against the substitution of brute force for law as an arbiter between nations; against the violation of the sanctity of treaties and disregard of the pledged word.

Must Be Taught Lesson.

"We have learned that there can be no opportunity for Europe to cultivate the arts of peace until Germany is brought to realize that recurrent acts of aggression will not be tolerated."

"It must accordingly be our resolve not only to protect the future from a repetition of the same injuries that German aggression has inflicted on Europe in these last few years, but also, as far as we can, repair the damage successively wrought by Germany on weaker neighbors."

Prime Minister Chamberlain will review foreign policy Thursday night at the Guildhall banquet for the new Lord Mayor of London, Sir William Coxen. Consequently, the usual weekly report on the war will not be made in the House of Commons on that day.

Demands Rejected.

Demands put forward by the All India Congress for an independent India were rejected by the government in a statement in the House of Lords yesterday by the Marquess of Zetland, Secretary of State for India.

Britain's "summary abandonment" of its position in India would be far from acceptable to a large section of the India population not represented by the Congress, he said.

Britain to Counter Secret Weapons With Surprises of Her Own

London, Nov. 8—(CP) — Great Britain countered Adolf Hitler's claim of a new secret weapon today with the statement that "we certainly have got a surprise for him."

The director of scientific research, whose name was withheld from publication, told a press conference that any dictator who though scientists had given him the most devastating weapons possible would be making a silly mistake.

Six months before the war started, he continued, teams of key scientists were organized to deal with any emergency so that "if a surprise were sprung on us" a quick answer could be given.

He concluded: "There are certain methods of warfare which have not been adopted, perhaps for humane considerations. That reservation might break down and Britain must be prepared."

ARTHUR B. PURVIS

The Board will place orders in Canada through the Canadian War Supply Board, headed by Wallace Campbell, head of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, and orders in the United States will be made through Mr. Purvis.

Both Canadian industralists will be members of the central organization which also will include representatives of the United Kingdom Service Departments and the British Treasury.

The personnel of the present British purchasing mission here will be merged with the new organization.

In Washington the British Embassy announced that Great Britain and France will co-ordinate their war purchases in the United States, eliminating competition between them.

It is estimated unofficially in the United States capital that the Allies are ready to place $1,000,000,000 in war orders in the U.S. in the near future now that Congress has repealed the arms embargo.

Huge amounts probably also will be expended in Canada on war buying and it is believed here that purchases in the United States will be limited by the amount of foreign exchange available for that purpose, the extent to which Canada can supply British needs in raw and manufactured materials and the duration and proportions of the conflict.

British authorities already have indicated that the United Kingdom's policy will be to look upon Canada as a first and primary source of supply.

WIRE PERFORMER FALLS 40 FEET

Baltimore, Nov. 8 — (AP) — A taut-wire performer, balanced on the shoulders of a fellow-trouper while the latter rode a bicycle on a wire, fell forty feet to the floor before a circus audience of 4,000 children yesterday.

Joseph Cherbock, 30, struck the hardwood floor head first and suffered serious injuries. His partner, Fritz Huber of Basel, Switzerland, grabbed the wire and held on as the bicycle shot out into the air.

'WAR OF POSITIONS' SEEN IN WEST DURING WINTER

French and German Planes Take to Air but No Battles Are Fought

ARTILLERY ACTIONS

(By Alex De Holstein, Copyright, 1939, by the Havas News Agency)

Paris, Nov. 8 — (CP-Havas) — Calm that had lasted for several days along the front was broken during the last twenty-four hours by a series of vanguard actions, especially along the Lorraine sector.

This morning's official communique reported "a revival of activity on the part of contact elements" and "local artillery actions."

This activity, however, was confined to maintenance of contact between the advanced forces. No conclusion as to future operations on the Lorraine front or in any other sector is to be drawn from them, it was stated in authoritative French military quarters.

War of Positions in Winter

A military spokesman described the position as follows: "We are in a situation comparable to that of November, 1914, without the great battles that marked the first three months of that war. We are heading toward a winter campaign that will be a war of positions like that of the winter of 1914-15."

Besides the revival of activity on land, German aerial reconnaissance was especially active yesterday. German planes flew over the front in five or six observation flights at a high altitude. French planes also took to the air, but no aerial engagements were reported.

Local Attacks by Germans

Besides patrols and small reconnoitring parties, the Germans launched local attacks of greater strength than has been their recent habit. Three of the most important of these attacks occurred east of the Moselle in the Apach sector, in the sector between the Mosell and the Saar in the hills at the eastern extremity of the Apach ravine, and, finally, in the mountainous region between the French frontied and Pirmasens.

The first of these attacks was staged without artillery preparation. The other two were preceded by brief barrages carried out in each case by 30 to 50 guns.

Following the artillery attack, which was directed at the rear of the objective in order to isolate it as much as possible, the assault was made, in each case by a full company of assault troops specially equipped with armor and other accoutrements for operations of this kind. The attacks were stopped by fire from automatic weapons.

HALIFAX'S SPEECH

to and rejection of the offer of King Leopold and Queen Wilhelmina, although copies of the speech were furnished the press hours before the mediation offer was announced. The British officials said Lord Halifax's broadcast was arranged days ago.)

The Germans said it was not known whether Adolf Hitler would make a formal reply to the offer to negotiate a settlement of the war.

Says Neutrals Still Smile.

Germany, authorized sources said, finds fault with neutrals because "they keep smiling when their toes are stepped upon by Britain"—a reference to the British blockade. So long as that attitude remains mediation offers are futile, these sources said.

(British officials said the mediation offer would "receive careful consideration" from British, French and Polish governments before a reply is made. Lord Halifax said the allies are fighting for a "new world in which the nations will not permit insane armed rivalry".)

Picton Council Protests High Cost of Guarding Municipal Reservoir

Reeve Colliver Also Complains of Arbitrary Attitude of Public Utilities Commission

Picton, Nov. 8 (Special)—When electors of Picton go to the polls next month to elect a municipal council it is likely that they will also be called upon to vote on three by-laws. At the council meeting Tuesday night there was considerable discussion on the government's proposal to have municipal elections suspended for two years or the duration of the war. Council members were not all in favor of the move. "From time to time the government has taken steps towards limiting the influence of councils and this another step in the same direction and we should oppose it," Reeve Horace Colliver stated. During the discussion, Mayor N. McKibbon said, that he had been considering a second term but did not know if the electors would want to have him for two years or longer since he has already served three years. Council instructed Clerk F. L. Ward, K.C., to prepare a by-law to be dealt with at the next meeting.

Another by-law to be dealt with concerns the granting of a permit to James Livingstone to erect a service station on his property, corner Main and Bowery Streets. In the past this permission was not granted by council and at the last meeting the council was divided on the matter with Mayor McKibbon casting the deciding vote, against granting a permit. The chief objection raised is that the location is near the United Church and opposite the war memorial.

Previously the council had decided to submit the question of daylight saving observance to the electors if an election was held. They will be asked to express an opinion on the observance of D.S.T. for a period of five years. Last year the electors voted in favor of D.S.T.

Heated Debate on Guards

Council also held a lengthy and at times a heated debate on the matter of guards and guarding the town reservoir on Macauley's Mountain. Councillor C. Gerow charged that on one occasion the police visited the guards late at night and found both asleep. He said further, that the guarding was inadequate and that he felt he could visit the scene and toss a bushel of potatoes in the reservoir one by one and not be detected by the guards.

The presentation of a bill for $219 for guarding the reservoir for three weeks opened the discussion.

"These guards are being paid a total of $7.20 a day, more than the present two policemen receive and the work is not nearly as hard," Reeve H. S. Colliver stated. "They have a comfortable heated shack. The bill is exorbitant."

Councillor George Ovens suggested that the Public Utilities Commission should erect floodlights to enable the guards to see the approach of any unauthorized persons. Mayor McKibbon said guard work was carried out in England during blackouts. "If a private company was responsible for the guard work they would hire a man of 75 to do the job but since it is done more or less on government orders, everyone is trying to see how much they can get out of it."

Lights would make the guards good targets for any enemy, it was suggested. Councillor Fred Stafford thought the Commission should pay the cost of guarding the reservoir since they received the revenue from the water. A heated discussion arose over who should be responsible for the cost and as a result it was decided to meet with the Commission to discuss the matter.

Pay Just the Same
